On the 18th, a number of people were lamenting the death of Gholam Hyder Khan, and expatiating on his wisdom, &c. The Dost got angry, and said that there were twenty Gholam Hyder Khans, and that he would not allow people to speak in his presence of the late sirdar as though there were not many left quite equal to him. On the 19th the Dost heard from Azim Khan that he had quite recovered his eye-sight. On the same day the Dost permitted a son of Rahimdil Khan, named Gholam Hyder Khan, to proceed to Candahar, and ordered that he should receive 1,000 Cabulee rupees per mensem.

On the 20th, the Dost heard from Peshawur that the payment of his monthly stipend of one lac of rupees from the British Government was about to cease. The news did not appear to please him at all. On the 21st an English document relating to the stoppage of the money was translated to the Dost. Its purport was, that the money was given on account of the Herat business. That being all settled now, the necessity for the troops, &c., ceased, and therefore the money would be no longer paid.

On the 24th, Shere Aly Khan sent for Mahomed Ameen Khan, and asked him to go to Candahar instead of him (Shere Aly Khan). Mahomed Ameen Khan, however, declined unless Mahomed Shereef Khan should get Ghuznee. On the 28th July, intelligence reached Dost Mahomed, via Candahar, that Rahim Dil Khan had been persuaded, by Sultan Ahmed Jan, to remain for the present at Herat. He was living outside the city. The Dost had been very busy reviewing troops, &c.; two regiments of Shere Aly Khan had been despatched to Ghuznee.

On the 4th August, in durbar, those present informed Dost Mahomed that Futteh Mahomed Khan, son of the late Akhbar Khan, had declared that during the lifetime of his uncle Gholam Hyder Khan, he (his uncle) had promised him the rule of Candahar, and had actually appointed him to officiate during his (Gholam Hyder Khan's) absence. It was added that Futteh Mahomed Khan had declared that he would never yield his right, saying that his father had won Candahar with his sword. It was also stated that the troops at Candahar were in favour of Futteh Mahomed Khan. Dost Mahomed replied that Futteh Mahomed Khan had addressed him to the same effect, adding that Futteh Mahomed Khan had nine lacs of rupees, six regiments of foot, 4,000 or 5,000 cavalry, and twenty guns. Dost Mahomed also stated that there was no doubt Futteh Mahomed Khan was acting in concert, and by the advice of some other sirdars. It is reported that Dost Mahomed was much troubled about the stoppage of the subsidy from the British Government. It was supposed that if he continued to receive it he would proceed to Candahar to arrange affairs; but that if it was refused, he would come to Peshawur—for what purpose, is not stated.

On the 8th, intelligence arrived from Toorkistan that four regiments of Persian infantry and 2,000 horse had arrived at Aga Musjid, in addition to the troops already there, and that the King of Kogand had sent 10,000 horse and ten guns to Huzrut Sooltan, a fortress in Toorkistan. The King of Kogand was said to be raising troops.—Lahore Chronicle.

Operations of the Sarun Field Force.

The Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen. of India is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter, from Brig. F. Rowcroft, comdg. Sarun field force, dated 1st May, 1858, forwarding a report from Maj. Cox, comdg. left wing, H.M.'s 13th L.I., of an action with the rebels at Nuggur, on the 29th ult. :—
From F. Rowcroft, Brigadier, comdg. Sarun Field Force, to Col. Birch, C.B., Sec. to the Govt. of India, in the Mil. Dept. with the Gov.-Gen., Allahabad.

Camp Captainnunge, Gornuckpore District, 1st May, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward to you, for submission to the Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen., the accompanying report, dated 30th April, from Maj. Cox, comdg. left wing, H.M.'s 13th L.I., reporting to me the complete success of the detachment I sent out under his command, on the 29th ult., to dislodge and disperse about 1,000 sepoys and other rebels who had assembled at Nuggur, six or seven miles south-east from camp, but without guns, and about the same distance from Bustee. It was necessary this should be done without delay, as from the reports received by the commissioner, Mr. Wingfield, there was great probability of the rebels at Nuggur being joined by a considerable force, with guns, from Tauda. We learned yesterday morning, that this was intended, and that the rebels from Tauda were to have joined those at Nuggur on the night of the 29th April. A kariuda or agent of the Nuggur rajah was at the head of the body of rebels at Nuggur.

2. The two silk colours captured by the Seikhs are partly native, but the pike heads and tassels appear to be regimental. One native colour was taken by the men of the naval brig., and another by deputy magistrate, Sheikh Kairooden, who shot the rebel with his pistol who was carrying it away. A quantity of powder and ammunition, and a number of ponies and other property were captured. About 100 of the enemy were killed and wounded. I am very glad to say we have only three men wounded.

3. The expedition has been very ably and most successfully carried out by Maj. Cox, comdg. the detachment; and the officers and men of all arms behaved admirably, and with great zeal and gallantry.

4. The commissioner, Mr. Wingfield, accompanied the detachment, and afforded Maj. Cox valuable assistance.

5. I beg to recommend all engaged to the most favourable notice of the Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen., Viscount Canning.

F. ROWCROFT, Brig.,
Comdg. Sarun Field Force.

Camp Calcuttunge, 30th April, 1858.

Sir,—An authentic information having yesterday morning been received, that a body of the enemy about 1,000 strong (half of them being sepoys) were posted at and about the town of Nuzzur, seven miles from our camp, I have the honour to report that, in compliance with your orders, I started to dislodge them at 1 P.M., with a force as detailed below:—

Left wing, H.M.'s 13th L.I.—Five officers and 151 men, under command of Capt. Kerr, 13th L.I.

Pearl naval brigade.—Five officers and 91 men, with two 12-pounder howitzers and one 12-pounder rocket, under Lieut. Grant, R.N.

Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry.—Nine officers and 58 men, under command of Capt. Jenkins, F.Y.C.

Gurkha regt. of Gorkhas.—Eleven officers and 281 men, in charge of Capt. Barclay, 68th N.I.

Seikhs of the Bengal Police Battalion.—One officer and 46 men, under Lieut. Butler, H.E.L.Co.'s service.

The intelligence procured from villagers on the road corroborated our information both as to the numbers and position of the enemy; and on approaching, we found them in occupation of the town and partially ruined fort of Nuzzur, which is situated at the extremity of a dense bamboo jungle, about two miles in length, the jungle being bordered by a large lake with swampy ground about it; on the further extremity of the town there are thick groves of trees, which, as well as the bamboo jungle, were occupied by the enemy.

By making a slight detour, we kept the jungle about half a mile on our right as we advanced, covered by a flanking party of the 13th and the Seikhs, who skirmished with the enemy, and kept them back until the column came opposite the town and fort.

I then halted, and wheeled into line to the right, while I directed the two guns and rocket to take up a position on a slight rise of ground 500 yards from the town, and sent the cavalry round beyond the groves, to intercept any force which might escape in that direction.

The guns and rocket under Lieutenant Grant, R.N., then opened, with precision and effect, and after about forty-two shells and rockets had been thrown, the enemy's fire began to slacken. I then sent orders for the guns to cease firing, directed Capt. Kerr's company of the 13th and the Seikhs to clear the groves beyond the town, wheel to their right, and enter from that side, while the remainder of the naval column, gallantly led by Lieut. Pym, R.M., light infantry, and the Gorkhas by Capt. Barclay having arrived within 100 yards, we made a simultaneous advance on the town and fort, which was completely successful. The enemy were driven through both town and fort, some of them being killed in houses which they ineffectually attempted to defend, and were pursued for a considerable distance into the swamps and jungle, leaving forty or fifty dead on the field.

As soon as we had got possession of the town, I sent orders for the cavalry to pass round to the rear, and endeavour to intercept the enemy in their retreat. This was promptly done by Capt. Jenkins, but the extremely unfavourable nature of the ground prevented him from cutting off many of the fugitives.

Four standards were captured during the day, two of them being handsome silk colours, we also found a quantity of powder and ammunition, and a large number of baggage animals, with other property.

The conduct of the whole of the troops was excellent, and they were ably and gallantly led by their respective commanding officers.

Mr. Wingfield, the civil commissioner, accompanied me during the action, and I feel much indebted for the valuable and accurate information he afforded me; he was also good enough to convey my orders to the cavalry, and guide them to the position I wished them to take up.

Lieut. Iact, 13th L.I., acted as staff officer on the occasion, to my entire satisfaction.

J. W. COX, Major, 13th L.I.

Operations against the Kolies in Guzerat.

Head-Quarters, Poona, June 14, 1858.

From the Adj. Gen. of the Army to the Sec. to Gov., Secret Department.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the Com-in-Chief, to forward to you the accompanying letter, No. 134, dated the 5th inst., from Brig. Gen. Sir Richmond Shakespear, Knt., comdg. Northern Division of the Army, with accompaniments, which I am to request you will be good enough to submit for the information of the Right Hon. the Gov. in Council.

E. GREEN, Col., Adj. Gen. of the Army.

The following is from Sir R. Shakespear, dated Camp near Baroda, 5th June, 1858, addressed to Col. Green:—

Sir,—I beg you will lay before his Excy. the Com-in-Chief the accompanying report by Major Grimes of his operations against the Kolies of a village named Dubhora, belonging to the Guicowar.

These men, when called on to surrender their arms, quitted their village, and, having taken up strong positions on the hills, sent a threatening letter to the political agent, Major Whitelock.

A Guicowar's horseman, proceeding on service with a note, was shot by these Kolies; and it became necessary to attack them.

Major Grimes' report will show how strong was the country, and how gallantly all obstacles were overcome by the officers and men.

Dubhora is a notoriously turbulent village, and the severe punishment inflicted on the inhabitants when sheltered in their mountain fastnesses will leave an immense effect throughout the country.

I beg to be allowed to bring to the favourable notice of his Excy. the valuable service performed on this occasion by Major Grimes and the officers and men under his command.

R. SHAKESPEAR,

Brig. Gen., comdg. N. D. A.

From Major Grimes, comdg. Mabee Kanta F. P., to the Assist. Adj. Gen. N. D. A.

Dated Camp Dubhora, June 1, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the Brig. Gen. comdg. the division, that about mid-day on the 28th ult., at Edur (where I had proceeded at the request of Major Whitelock to confer with him on our future operations, having left the two columns under my command at Wallasud and Kheraloo), I was informed by that officer that the inhabitants of Dubhora were in rebellion, and it was necessary for me to proceed against them. I immediately sent orders to both columns to march on this place that night, so as to arrive here at daylight, in hopes by this sudden move to have been in time to prevent them taking to the jungle and hills. I joined the head-quarters column that evening, and reached this place at daylight on the morning of the 29th, having been joined by the Kheraloo column on the march, and found the town completely deserted; but Lieut. LeGeyt reported that the Kolies were posted in the jungles at the foot of the Taringa hills, about two miles to the right of my position, and had fired on his party, whom I had detached to reconnoitre. A similar party of Guzerat horse had gone round to the left under Capt. Anders, 11th regt., who kindly volunteered his services, and which were placed at my disposal by Major Whitelock. The day being by this time advanced, and the men fatigued by a long march, I did not deem it expedient, with the little information I had as to their whereabouts, to attempt to enter the jungle and hills at that time, and therefore encamped for the day, during which I got all the information I could regarding the hills, and the probable place the Kolies would locate themselves in. It was supposed that they would go into the strongholds of Taringa—a fortified position on the top of the hills, and about four miles from my camp; and having, during the evening, examined the nature of the hills and jungle, in company with Major Whitelock, as far as practicable, and during which we came on the body of one of his sowars, whom he had despatched in the morning with a note to the Symba chief, and who had been cruelly murdered by the Kolies. This determined me to attack them the following morning. I accordingly started about half-past 4 a.m. on the 30th, with my whole force, excepting double guards left for the protection of the camp, and advanced through the jungles towards the hills, with four cos. of the 2nd grens., under Lieuts. Law and Macdonnell, in skirmishing order. Finding on this side that the jungles were clear of the rebels, though we came to a large encampment lately vacated by them, the four cos., under Lieut. Law, advanced over the hill. I ordered Capt. Conybear's bat. and one co. 2nd grens. to return to camp, and proceeded myself with the mountain-train, the co. of H.M.'s 89th regt., and three cos. 2nd grens., round the left of the hills, and advanced up the direct road to the Dubhora gate of the Taringa strongholds, and here detached Lieut. Bell to skirmish to the left with two cos. The road soon became so steep, that I had to leave our horses and the mountain-train under the protection of H.M.'s 89th regt., and a co. of 2nd grens. I pushed up the hill, hearing Lieuts. Law and Macdonnell's parties engaged on my right front. On reaching the top of the first range I met Lieut. Law, and found the Kolies had been surprised, and were strongly posted in a deep ravine, underneath and to the left of the Dubhora gate of Taringa, which was now plainly visible, and within range of our rifles, and the road up to it being in many parts completely commanded by us. The retreat of the main body of them into it was cut off, though the gateway was still held by some of them. Lieut. Bell's party came upon them from the west, and the only retreat for them was round a large and almost inaccessible hill; and here it was the great loss was inflicted on them. The three parties under Lieuts. Law, Macdonnell, and Bell followed them up closely, over immensely difficult ground, and under a very heavy fire, and through a dense jungle, in a manner that excited the admiration of myself and Major Whitelock, who accompanied me through the whole of the operations, and to whom I am much indebted for the assistance and information which, from his local knowledge of the place, and his position, he was enabled to afford me. At this time, finding the day fast advancing, and that some hours would be required to get up the mountain moorings to shell Taringa, and as there did not appear to be any great number of the enemy in it, I advanced on the gateway with a section of the co. of her Majesty's 89th regt. and a few grens. I had with me; the Enfield rifles having cleared the gateway, as the first shot from them brought down a man standing sentry on the top of it, at a distance of about 800 yards, which must have astonished them, and made them shy of letting us too near them. We reached the gate in about 20 minutes, and took possession of it; but finding the interior of the fort was still occupied by a party of the Kolies, we held that till we were joined by a co. of the grens., which I had sent for; and on the arrival of Major Whitelock and myself advanced through the strongholds, driving the Kolies before us, until we arrived at the famous temples of Taringa, the headquarters of the fort. The day was now far advanced, and the heat very great and the men done up, and to pursue was impossible. I had previously desired Lieuts. Law and Macdonnell to return, and therefore sounded the assembly, and returned to camp, having, I hope, taught the Kolies a lesson, and proved to them that they are not safe from us, even in their wildest fastnesses, and we effected this with only two rank and file 2nd grens. severely wounded, and one Guzerat irregular horseman slightly; whereas the loss inflicted on the enemy would not, I think, from the reports of the officer in command, have been less than 80 killed and wounded, and of them 25 or 30 were certainly killed, 10 were taken prisoners, 2 of them wounded, and one now in my camp; but will be sent to Major Whitelock in a day or two. I beg to annex the report of the officers in separate communications; for after we were once in the hills, communication of orders was impossible, and each officer was left to himself in a great measure; and I have great pleasure in reporting my entire approval of the manner in which they carried out my plans. Nothing could have exceeded the zeal and courage of all ranks; and their steadiness under fire, and noble exertions over almost inaccessible country, deserve my warmest thanks.

I beg you will do me the favour to bring prominently to the notice of the Brig. Gen. the names of Lieuts. Law, Macdonnell, and Bell, of the 2nd grendrs., to whose exertions I am in a great measure indebted for the success that has attended us.

My staff officer, Lieut. Browning, her Majesty's 89th regt., was a great assistance to me, and my thanks are also due to Assist. Surg. McAllister for the prompt assistance he rendered, and the arrangements he made in his department in every way.

By desire of Major Whitelock I have destroyed the town of Dubhora, and purpose marching on Oendinee to-morrow morning, unless I get further information where the Kolies have gone to. They have, I believe, left the Taringa hills entirely, and gone to the north-east; but it is very difficult to get any information regarding them.

C. H. GRIMES, Major,
Comdg. Mahee Kanta F.F.

From Lieut. S. C. Law, comdg. Head-Quarters 2nd Gend. Regt. N.I., to the Brig. Major, Mahee Kanta, F.F.

Camp Dubhora, May 31, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit the following report for the information of the officer commanding the field force:—

On the arrival yesterday morning of the force at the edge of the jungle, round the Taringa hills, I received the instructions of the comdg. officer to extend two cos. in skirmishing order, to support them with two cos., and leaving the remainder of the regiment under Lieuts. Bell and Blair, as a guard to the guns, to take the jungle and hills which lay before us. I requested Lieut. Macdonnell, the adj., to lead the right skirmishers, taking the left myself, there being no other European officers present. We advanced through dense jungle, and after crossing the first and second ranges of hills called the Taringa, we were fired on by the enemy. We still advanced, driving them before us, and firing with good effect whenever a man showed himself. I learnt from the smart firing on my right, that Lieut. Macdonnell was also engaged and advancing. On our progress we passed two or three deserted camps of the Bheels, the cattle wandering about, clothes, food, cooking-pots, and hookahs, &c. &c., strewn on the ground, showing how they had been taken by surprise. My left was here prolonged by a company of skirmishers under Lieut. Bell.

The jungle was so dense, and the ground so broken, that it was oftentimes impossible to see more than 10 or 12 of the men at a time; and some men of the supports, being too eager to get forward, became mixed up with the skirmishers in front. At the second range of hills, the fire became hotter; and where I lost Private Synac Luknac, No. 5 company. Still advancing, we took a very steep hill, on which the retiring enemy kept up a smart fire, by which an excellent non-commissioned officer, Naig Kurrim Sing, was shot through the body. Advancing from this position, we climbed the highest and steepest hill of the range, the ascent of which was extremely difficult, and could not have been accomplished but for the mutual aid which officers and men gave to each other. On the summit I found Lieut. Macdonnell and his skirmishers, and we observed together the enemy in flight far away, and down the hill.

Our men being now thoroughly tired, and blown by the steep ascent, and there remaining no chance of coming up with the Bheels, we retraced our steps.

The whole position chosen by these Bheels was immensely strong; and if held by men capable of offering an organised resistance, such a weak force as ours could not have advanced 500 yards; our whole line of skirmishers not numbering 150 men.

Once in the dense jungle, each officer was obliged to act somewhat independently, as sometimes a thick jungle, and at others a precipitous hill, separated his men from those on his right or left, and I, therefore, beg to forward, for the comdg. officer's information, the reports of Lieuts. Macdonnell and Bell. The former places the loss of the enemy at 20, Mr. Bell reports 12, and in my immediate front perhaps 8 or 10 fell, making their total loss at about 60 killed and wounded by the line of skirmishers; but accuracy on this point and on such ground is impossible. Three prisoners, of whom one was wounded, were brought in by Lieut. Bell. On our side a naig and a private are, I hear, mortally wounded; these were of my party; but I am happy to have to report no casualties amongst the skirmishers on my right and left, on whom a sharp fire was kept, and the ground they advanced on well contested from every favourable spot, and these were not a few.

I trust I may not be considered presuming (commanding the regiment as I did under fortuitous circumstances only) in wishing to bring to notice the admirable manner in which Lieut. Macdonnell led his men; so quickly and steadily as to press close on the heels of the retreating Bheels, four of whom during their advance fell to his own rifle, and a fifth subsequently. Mr. Bell, too, was ever to the front, leading and encouraging his men. To the capital leading of those officers may be attributed the really excellent conduct of the men. These were cool and eager, and managed to climb over places and push through jungles, which, under other circumstances, and to men less willing, might be called inaccessible.

S. C. LAW, Lieut.,
Comdg. Hd.-Qrs., 2nd Gend. Regt. N.I.

From Capt. Anderson, 11th N.I., to the Major of Brig., Mahee Kanta Field Force.

Camp Dubhora, May 30, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Major Grimes, comdg. field force, that agreeably to his orders I marched shortly after daylight with the squadron of the Gujerat irregular horse under my command, and took up a position clear of the jungle, to the west of the Taringa hills, with a small hill in my rear, from which I obtained a view of the country round. Shortly after the firing commenced, I saw a horseman, accompanied by a man on foot, making for the hill where the firing was going on. I sent a jemadar and ten lancers to intercept them, and bring them to me. On seeing the party approaching, they tried to make their escape, and succeeded in getting into some thick jungle, and on some of the sowars coming up attacked them. The man on foot was killed, and the other wounded and made prisoner; but not before they had wounded one sowar and one horse. I saw no people from the hills trying to make their escape, and returned to camp with the prisoner at 1 p.m.

J. W. ANDERSON, 11th N.I.

From Lieut. Stanley Bell, 2nd Gendrs., to the Adj. 2nd Gendrs.

Camp Dubhora, May 30, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that, according to the orders I received from Major Grimes, I threw out No. 7 co. in skirmishing order, supported by No. 8 co., and advanced towards the base of the hills, on the left of our position. On arriving at these hills (having met with no opposition) I heard heavy firing to my right, and at once ordered the men under my command to skirmish over the hills, so as to gain the centre skirmishers. The ascent was most arduous, and in several places almost impossible, the men being dragged up one after another. On reaching the top of the hill, the enemy were discovered in a ravine below me, and hastily forming up a few men, advanced to drive them from this position, which was done after a short determined resistance. The enemy kept up a heavy fire of matchlocks, and from the loudness of the reports I fancy that they must have had one or two gingalls. Every rock and tree was most obstinately defended; but in every case the enemy were utterly routed. I took three prisoners armed with swords, one of whom I could have shot with my revolver, but preferred taking him alive, in hopes of gaining some valuable information from him. At this period I joined the left of the centre skirmishers, under Lieut. S. C. Law, 2nd Gendrs., and advancing together, we drove the enemy before us. The loss of the men opposed to me must at least have been 10 to 12 killed, and from 20 to 25 wounded, which result was accomplished with no loss on my side. Two men were severely contused from falling down rocks. I cannot conclude without bringing to the commanding officer's notice the very gallant way in which the men under my command behaved, and I would particularly mention Subedar Pahai Sing, who joined me with the left of the centre skirmishers.

From Lieut. Legeyt, comdg. Detach. G. I. Horse, to the Major of Brig., Field Force.

Dated Dubhora, June 1, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the officer comdg. the field force, that in accordance with orders received on the 29th ult., I marched from camp with a squadron of the G. I. horse on the 30th, at daylight, and took up a position to the south of the Taringa hills, on the skirts of the thick jungle which surrounds them. I placed my videttes and sent out patrols in the directions I thought it probable the Kolies might attempt to escape, but none were seen by us the whole morning, the firing and entire operations of the force being on the other side of the hills. I returned into camp with my men at half-past one p.m.

From Lieut. and Adj. J. Macdonnell, 2nd Gend. Regt., to Lieut. S. C. Law, comdg. Hd. Qrs., 2nd Gend. Regt.

Camp Dubhora, May 30, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that, agreeably to your instructions, I took command of the right skirmishers (right flank co.), supported by No. 1 co., in the attack made this morning on the insurgent Kolies, for the purpose of driving them from their positions in the Taringa hills.

Shortly after crossing the first range of hills nearest the village of Dubhora, I came in sight of several parties of Kolies strongly posted on the further bank of a ravine. They at once opened on us a heavy and well-directed fire, which was returned with effect by the right Gend. co. As my skirmishers advanced steadily, the enemy gave way, still keeping up a heavy fire of matchlocks and obstinately defending every ridge and favourable position. Our advance was continued as long as the men were able to fight their way (about four miles) over most difficult, indeed almost insuperable ranges of hills; and the attack, rather pursuit, was only discontinued when from fatigue, and the nature of the ground, we were unable to proceed further. In ground such as we passed over, it was most difficult correctly to estimate the loss of the enemy opposed to me, but from what I saw myself, I am of opinion that it could not have amounted to less than about 20 killed and a considerable number wounded. I saw at least nine men killed, and from the nature of the ground it was impossible for me to see at many times more than perhaps one-third of my men.

I cannot close these reports without bringing to the notice of the comdg. officer the good conduct of all ranks under my command on this occasion. Being mostly young soldiers, their steadiness under the very heavy fire kept up by the enemy was admirable, and it is to this, as well as to the steady manner in which they took advantage of every favourable cover in advancing upon and driving the enemy from their numerous strong positions, that I attribute the impunity with which we inflicted so severe a loss. I would beg to bring prominently to the notice of the comdg. officer the conduct of Jemadar Adj. Nagoo Chowran, who accompanied me on this occasion, and to whose valuable assistance much of our success is due.

The Naval Brigade.

Camp, Bustee, June 22, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that a portion of the Naval Brigade,* under charge of Lieut. Turnour, and the Marines, under Lieut. Pym, R.M., were engaged in a very creditable affair on the 9th inst., in driving the enemy out of Amorha, where one party was posted in the village, and the other in a long belt of bamboo jungle and a large house at the entrance: and I beg to recommend both these active officers, then suffering from sickness, to their lordships' notice, with the accompanying report.

Mr. Foot, midshipman was also present with the guns.

Camp, Bustee, June 11, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report for your information, that while employed on detached service, between the dates of 24th May and 11th June, the force, as per margin,† under command of Maj. Cox, of the 13th L.I., the following engagement took place on the 9th inst. Information having reached us that the rebels in force, under Mahomet Hussein, were at Amorha, a village five or six miles off, arrangements were made for attacking them. Accordingly, having divided our force into two columns, the largest commanded by Maj. Cox, and the other, to which I was attached, by Maj. Richardson, of the B.Y.C. We left the camp at two a.m., and marched along the road leading through the village. When within a mile of the place we received a heavy fire from their skirmishers; these were immediately attacked and driven in by the marines, under Lieut. Pym, while the guns threw shell and shot at their main body, which, after a quarter of an hour's firing, retreated into the ranees' house and jungle. There they were met and driven off by the other column under Maj. Cox. The enemy then retreated towards Belwah, and were pursued four miles by the cavalry, who succeeded in cutting up a considerable number. The force, having halted to refresh the men, then returned to Hurreah.

Bustee.

Camp Bustee, June 25, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint you, for the information of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that the force, as per margin,† left Captanguan on the 18th inst., at three, a.m., to attack a body of rebels from 3,500 to 4,000 strong, including 900 sepoys, under Mahomed Hussein, posted in, and intrenched about the village of Hurreah, eight miles in our front.

On approaching within one and a half mile of the bridge at 6:30, we discovered the enemy's skirmishers thrown across the river, screened in some thick bamboo jungle villages, topes, and a considerable number in ambush in a dry nullah. Our skirmishers, consisting of 70 of the Pearl's nav. brig. and a company of H.M.'s 13th L.I., supported by our 2-horsed 12-pr. howitzers, immediately advanced on our left, and by their quick fire drove them in; following the enemy over the river (which they forded above their waists), they turned their right flank. Our guns, after shelling and clearing out the village, galloped over the bridge, rejoined the skirmishers, and broke their centre, drove the rebels from tope to tope whenever they attempted to stand, and pursued them for about four miles. From the quick and well-directed fire, and apparent confusion in the enemy's ranks, they must have suffered very severely from our shells and rifles.

The remainder of the force had in the mean time been engaged on the right, where the rebels obstinately held the jungle, but were finally driven out and over the river. The heat was most intense, and as the troops had been under arms for nearly seven hours, at ten o'clock we halted, and all firing ceased.

I am thankful to say we had only six wounded, whereas the enemy is reported to have lost 200, with all their baggage and a quantity of ammunition.

Mahomed Hussein has since fled to the jungle, and his force is reported to be entirely dispersed, the sepoys having crossed the Gogra to Fyzabad.

Lieut. Turour, assisted by Mr. T. M. Maquay, acting mate, was in charge of the guns, and Mr. A. W. Ingles, acting mate, with Mr. Herbert H. Edwards, midshipman, commanded the skirmishers, and Serj.-Maj. Argent the marines, to all of whom I am much indebted for their zealous conduct, as also the rest of the men, whose conduct at all times has been most exemplary, especially Alexander Wilson, coxswain of the launch; and I must beg you will have the goodness to draw the attention of your lordships that this is the tenth time the Pearl's nav. brig. has been in action in India during nine months.

E. S. SOTHEBY, Capt. R.N.,
Comdg. Pearl

To the Secretary of the Admiralty.

† Pearl's nav. brig., 111; 13th L.I., 145; Sikhs, 60; B.Y.C., 130; 6th Madras cav., 100; one 24-pounder rocket, and two 12-pounder howitzers horsed, nav. brig. One 9-pounder gun, one 24-pounder howitzer bullock guns, B.A.

THE ENGLISH IN INDIA. — The true function of the European in India is not as a labourer, but as a director of labour. It is very important that some plan should be devised to increase the number of the English in India. As a nation, we are too small a body there; and this, perhaps, as much as any other cause, has led to the recent attempt to exterminate our rule. The conquest of the country by the Mohammedan powers was followed by a large mixture of Mohammedans with the native population; new cities were founded, and a community of feeling sprang up between the conquering and the conquered race; whereas we live in cantonments, or standing camps, apart from the people, and there is no identity of interests between us. We do not, as a body, understand the native character, its habits of thought and springs of action. This experience has been seldom gained except by such men as the Skinners, the Forsters, and Van Cortlandt, who have been born in the country, and have grown up in daily intercourse with the natives. —General Treuenheere.

Rank.—Engineers and Artillery.

No. 1238 of 1858.—The hon. the President of the Council of India in council is pleased to direct the publication in general orders of the following military letter from the hon. the Court of Directors to the Government of India, No. 183, of July 8, 1858:—

Military Department.

OUR GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA.

1. We have given full and anxious consideration to the important subject of the relative rank held by officers of the Royal engineers and royal artillery as compared with that of officers of the Company's engineers and artillery, as brought to our notice in numerous memorials, and in the letter from the Governor General, dated April 1, 1858.

2. There are three points of difference in the two services which affect relative rank, viz. :—

1st.—In the Royal service, captains rise to the rank of lieutenant-colonel regimentally, whilst in the Company's service there is the intermediate grade of major.

2nd.—In the Royal service there are two grades of captains, whilst in the Company's service there is only one grade.

3rd.—In the Royal service there is only one grade of subaltern, whilst in the Company's service there are two grades, viz.—1st lieutenant and 2nd lieutenant.

3. On the first point, we have resolved that the distinction between the two services shall be forthwith corrected; and that, accordingly, the regimental majors in the Company's engineers and artillery shall, on the receipt of this despatch, be promoted to the regimental rank of lieutenant-colonel, with dates of rank from the dates of their regimental majorities; and that the commissions of the present lieutenant-colonels be antedated, in like manner, to the dates of their regimental majorities, but without any retrospect as to pay and allowances; and that as vacancies occur, captains of artillery and engineers shall succeed to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in their respective corps.

4. On the next point of difference we have resolved that the grade of 2nd captain shall be introduced into the Company's engineers and artillery, and that the future establishment shall be in the proportion of six captains and six 2nd captains to each brigade and battalion.

5. The aggregate of officers of these grades will then be as follows:—

|------------------|----|-------|-----------|
| Bengal Artillery | .. | 72    | 72        |
| Madras „         | .. | 42    | 42        |
| Bombay „         | .. | 30    | 30        |
|                  |    | 288   |           |
|                  |    | Cpts. | 2nd Cpts. |
| Bengal Engineers | .. | 30    | 30        |
| Madras „         | .. | 18    | 18        |
| Bombay „         | .. | 18    | 18        |
|                  |    | 132   |           |

Supernumeraries as captains are to be absorbed as vacancies occur.

6. On the third point, viz. the grades of subaltern, we have resolved that the grade of 2nd lieutenant shall be abolished, so that subalterns of engineers and artillery of the Queen's and Company's services shall take rank together, according to the dates of their first commissions. You will therefore issue to the present lieutenants, and 2nd lieutenants commissions as lieutenants with date of rank from their first commissions, but without retrospect as to allowances; and hereafter, all appointed to these corps are to be commissioned as lieutenants.

7. The number of lieutenants for each brigade and battalion of artillery to be fourteen; and for each battalion of engineers, twelve; or, in the aggregate, for

|                  |    |     |
| Bengal artillery | .. | 168 |
| Madras „         | .. | 98  |
| Bombay „         | .. | 70  |
| Bengal Engineers | .. | 60  |
| Madras „         | .. | 36  |

being about equal to the present establishments, after deducting therefrom the number of lieutenants promoted to be 2nd captains.

We are, your affectionate friends,

F. CURRIE,

And ten other Directors.

London, the 8th July, 1858.

[The substance of the foregoing letter appeared in Allen's Indian Mail of August 14.]

Duties of Young Officers.

European regiment for a period of six months before they are permitted to join native corps.

The command of a native regiment shall not hereafter be permitted to be exercised by any officer who is not considered qualified for such command by temper and tact, and by regard for the natives, as well as by experience in the service. #### HEAD-MONEY TO SURGEONS.

Bombay Castle, Aug. 20.—No. 853.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to publish, in modification of the regulations quoted in the margin,* the following orders of the Hon. Court of Directors, respecting head-money, medicines, and surgical instruments for her Majesty's troops on the voyage to and from India:—

All medicines and surgical instruments for use with her Majesty's troops on the voyage to India, are now supplied by her Majesty's Government, and charged to the East-India Company.

Consequent on this change, the Secretary of State for War has proposed, as the most convenient mode of bringing to account the value of the medicines, when such troops are in medical charge of a surgeon or assistant surgeons receiving head-money, to reduce the allowance from the present rate of 15s. per each adult, and 10s. for each child, to the rates of 13s. and 8s. respectively, the value of the medicines being found to average about two each person.

The Secretary of State for War, has further stated that it has been decided that the allowance of head money be restricted to surgeons and assistant-surgeons who find their own passages, those for whom passages are provided by the war-office, or the East India Company, to be considered on duty, and therefore liable to attend the troops, without extra pay.

These arrangements will take effect with all embarkations of H.M.'s troops, in and after the month of June, 1858.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Oct. 15, 1858.

INDIAN HISTORY IN COMMON COUNCIL.

On Thursday, the 7th instant, a member of the Common Council moved that the freedom of the City of London, together with a sword valued at 100 guineas, should be presented, respectively, to Lord Clyde and Sir James Outram, in recognition of their distinguished services to their country, and especially in quelling the rebellion in Upper India. These resolutions, honourable alike to the citizens of London and to the heroes whom they delight to grace with their favour, were moved by Mr. Charles Reed with considerable animation, but, alas! with still greater inaccuracy. His inferences were correct, but his premises were false—his eulogies were merited, but their grounds were mis-stated. After leading one to infer that Demerara is not on the continent of America, the orator proceeded to inform his hearers that in 1849 Sir Colin Campbell was a brigadier-general in Afghanistan—significantly adding, "The record of his services there is too fresh in our memory to need even a passing reference." Unhappily our own memory retains no further recollection of Sir Colin's services while commanding a division on the frontiers of Afghanistan than the dispersion of a few mountaineers and the destruction of their wretched hamlets. We need not bear too hardly upon the rhetorical phrase, that it was "Sir Colin" who turned the fortunes of the day at Balaklava," or upon the statement that it was his presence in the Crimea that inspired the British public with confidence as to the ultimate issue of the Russian war. But we confess to being a little puzzled by the following outburst of eloquence, which appears to have carried the orator off his legs, and swept him, with the mutineers, in tumultuous confusion, "far up into the wild recesses of the Himalayas." Sir Colin is represented as having just "gained his victory at the very gates" of Lucknow, and to have "gathered around" him "the highest renown:—"

"To strengthen the position—to make good the evacuation—to escort in safety that gallant band of our fellow-countrymen, with women and tender children—to bear them safely through the heart of a cruel and bloodthirsty host—and to house them in security in Cawnpore, were achievements of the profoundest skill and bravery; and though the planning of this is generously ascribed to Outram, it was effected by Campbell. Retrieving the false step of Windham, gaining the bridge of boats—his object at Cawnpore being secured, Sir Colin hastens to join Outram at the Alumbagh, and by a combined attack to repossess themselves of Lucknow. We know how that work was accomplished—how, throwing off the officialism of the general, the commander of the noble army became a personal leader—how, exposing his own life, he covered the position of his men, sparing life everywhere. We know how he effected a complete and, speaking by comparison, a bloodless victory, gaining possession of one of the largest cities in India, and turning the retreat of the mutineers into a tumultuous flight. We know how he chased them in confusion to Rohilkund and

With all due deference to the enthusiasm of the orator, we respectfully submit that this is all sound and fury, a mere concatenation of "brave 'orts," and the veriest fustian; opposed to facts, and otherwise devoid of meaning. The rescued garrison was not housed in security in Cawnpore; the retrieval of Windham's false step had nothing to do with the gaining the bridge of boats, which never was lost; it is notorious that Sir Colin did not hasten to rejoin Outram; and as for the mutineers being driven into the Himalayas, we would simply ask Mr. Reed how it comes, then, that the chief part of Oude and no small portion of Rohilkund are still in their hands? But his inaccuracies regarding the services of Lord Clyde fade into insignificance compared with the absurdities he perpetrated when speaking of Sir James Outram, who will be astonished to learn that it was his opposition to the policy of the Afghan war that brought upon him Lord Ellenborough's displeasure, and deprived him of promotion; but even this is less startling than the following statement:—

In 1839 the Shah Shoojah, exposed to peril from a lawless banditti, finds a generous protector in Outram; and the Ameer of Scinde shortly after experiences in an English officer a generous conqueror. Sir John Keane had threatened to storm and sack the capital of the Ameer, unless terms of spoliation were instantly submitted to. Outram took charge of the expedition, and so successfully employed his opportunity that the Ameer was won over to confide in the British power."

Now it so happens,—as Mr. Reed might have ascertained by the most cursory glance into Mr. Kaye's "History of the War in Afghanistan,"—that it was in 1816 that Shah Shoojah fell into the hands of certain hillmen, from whose rapacity he was rescued by the Rajah of Kistawar, some years before Outram entered the army; and that in 1839 the Shah was formally restored to the throne of the Douranee empire. With regard to the Ameer of Scinde, Outram took charge of no expedition, for the simple reason, that there was no expedition of which to take charge; but it was through his own and Lieut. Eastwick's able diplomacy that the cession of Bukkur was effected. Further on we are informed, that it was after the conquest of Scinde that Outram proceeded to Bombay in disguise, whereas that perilous adventure was achieved after the capture of Kelat. But the City orator reserved his strength for the peroration, in which he described Sir James Outram with his sword in one hand and the British colours in the other,—a blood-stained "Excelsior,"—struggling over the broken fragments of an imaginary wall, and storming the "fortress of Lucknow."

"That evacuation," exclaims Mr. Reed, "was the work of Outram; and in the dead of that November night, by a most skilful ruse, every one of the long-imprisoned garrison found safety in a retreat that will be long remembered in the annals of British history. Holding the Alumbagh, Outram was ready to join in the general attack upon the fortress of Lucknow. You know who headed the storming party, who gained the bridge, who made the breach in those walls, and who was the first to scale the heights and plant the British banner within the residency—Outram was the leader. Though second, he was everywhere the first; and his daring secured for us the repossession of that stronghold, temporarily wrested from our hands."

It is not our wont,—for indeed time and space would fail us were we to attempt the task,—to notice all the absurdities and nonsense on the subject of India with which the English people are habitually dosed; but it was impossible to pass over without remark such a mass of incongruities as were delivered by Mr. Reed in the Common Council Hall. These speeches will be carefully recorded and transmitted to posterity, and sorely will they puzzle Lord Macaulay's New Zealander, should he endeavour by their aid to elucidate the history of the Indian mutinies. Mr. Reed has paid but a poor compliment either to his colleagues in the City, or to the distinguished leaders whose brilliant careers he proposed to commemorate, by the extraordinary farrago of phrases beneath which he has overwhelmed their achievements.

THE OUDE PROCLAMATION.

THE public is at length in possession of Lord Canning's own explanation of the Oude proclamation, and will not fail to do ample justice to his lordship's patriotism and manly sincerity. After expressing, in becoming terms, his regret that his conduct should not have met with the approval of the home authorities, the Governor-General deplures the certain effects to be expected from the publication of Lord Ellenborough's despatch. Not only would the influence of the Government be seriously impaired, but delusive hopes would be entertained by the population of Oude, of a nature to encourage them to persistence in revolt. Under ordinary circumstances, the immediate and personal consequence of such a document would be the resignation of the high functionary so wantonly insulted; but the existing crisis was far too grave for indulging in feelings of personal pique and resentment. Convinced that any change in the head of the Government which implied a repudiation of the policy pursued towards the Oude rebels would retard the pacification of the country, and be in every way extremely injurious, his lordship was resolved not to be turned aside from the path of public duty by any taunts or sarcasms from whatsoever quarter they might be directed against him. Nothing, therefore, would induce him to desert his post, by a spontaneous act, in the midst of unexampled difficulties, dangers, and toils; but if the Court of Directors, on further consideration, still judged him to be in fault, he would make it his respectful but urgent request to be relieved of his high responsibilities with the least possible delay. Thus much being said by way of preamble, Lord Canning next proceeds to review the tenor of the offensive despatch. He points out the extraordinary tendency of certain paragraphs, from 10 to 14 inclusive, which intimate a doubt as to the propriety of the annexation of Oude, and appear to lead to the conclusion that "the hostilities which the people of Oude have been carrying on against us have rather the character of legitimate war than that of rebellion, and that the people of Oude should be regarded with indulgent consideration." Though naturally declining to enter upon this question, his lordship readily admits that there are circumstances in the case which draw a wide distinction between the conduct of the Oude landholders and that of the sepoy mutineers. A very different scale of punishment had therefore been proposed. There was no intention of inflicting death, transportation, or imprisonment; at the same time, as the act of rebellion could not be passed over with impunity, it had been deemed both expedient and just to deprive of their rights in the soil all such obstinate and perverse rebels as still refused to tender their submission. "An uncompromising assertion of our authority in Oude is perfectly compatible with a merciful exercise of it," and a careful consideration of all the facts of the case will show that the utmost lenity, consistent with justice, has been exhibited towards these deluded subjects of the Government. So determined was the Governor-General that no unnecessary severity should be employed, that he proceeded in person to Allahabad, in order to judge as impartially and correctly as possible what course might be most advantageously followed. The conclusions at which he thus arrived were the exemption of the Oude rebels from the penalty of death, and the confiscation to the State of their proprietary rights in the soil. But as proclamations and threats have little influence with the natives of India, the Governor-General would have preferred simply to place instructions in the hands of the civil magistrates attached to the different bodies of troops, leaving it to them to explain to the people the benevolent designs of the Government. Unfortunately, the expedition into Rohilcund delayed the subjugation of Oude, and thus there was no alternative to declaring the confiscation of the proprietary rights of all who still refused to lay down their arms. It must be remembered that many of the talookdars were, at least, harshly treated at the time of the occupation and settlement of the province. They were consequently disaffected to the English Government even previous to the mutinies, and when these broke out they naturally availed themselves of the opportunity to recover their rights and privileges. To punish these men with extreme rigour would be clearly unjust, at the same time that it would have been very impolitic to have granted to their arms what had been denied to their petitions. Only one course then remained, and that was to declare that the sole title to landed property was derived from the will of the Government, and that the only way to obtain favourable consideration was by prompt submission. The spirit of the proclamation was thoroughly understood by those to whom it was addressed, very many of whom have tendered their allegiance, but have been prevented from openly joining the British by fear of the overwhelming masses of insurgents that surrounded them on all sides. There is every reason, however, to believe that as soon as the Commander-in-Chief is able to take the field, the majority of the influential landowners will make their way to his camp. This is, indeed, but a feeble précis of Lord Canning's lucid and masterly defence of his conduct, which would never have been impugned but from motives of party strife. If less evil has resulted than might have been anticipated from this instance of Parliamentary interference, no credit is due to those who, for factious purposes, scrupled not to shake the authority of the Governor-General at a momentous crisis, and for the sake of political capital endangered the stability of our Indian Empire.

THE PAHLUNPOOR DISTRICTS.

THE history of the connection of the British Government with the Pahlunpoor districts is a striking illustration of the gradual and inevitable growth of our Indian empire. In this case, at least, there is not the slightest ground for imputing to the English authorities any selfish or ambitious motives. Their interference and protection were sought for by these independent states, nor have the latter ever had any reason to regret the line of conduct they voluntarily adopted. From the first establishment of a political agency, peace and prosperity have prevailed where previously bloody feuds and acts of violence were things of daily occurrence. Large tracts of land, formerly desolate and uncultivated, are now occupied by an industrious and happy population, who have learned to prefer the pursuits of agriculture to rapine and murder.

The Pahlunpoor states are eleven in number—four under Mussulmaun chiefs, five under Rajpoots, and the two others governed by Koolee Thakoors. These districts are situated in the north-western part of Guzerat, and extend nearly a hundred miles in length by the same in breadth, inclosing an area of upwards of 6,000 square miles, with 934 villages peopled by some 280,000 Hindoos and 38,000 Mahomedans. The gross amount of revenue collected within the limits of the political superintendency barely exceeds 64,000*l.* per annum; but it appears to be equal to the expenditure. Although the armed force permanently kept up by these petty chieftains is extremely insignificant, in cases of emergency not fewer than 2,000 horse and 20,000 footmen, with 174 guns, might be depended upon to do military service at the behest of their feudal superiors. The political superintendent, however, has no direct control over this motley array, but carries out his functions with the assistance of 800 of the Guicowar horse stationed at Decsa. As a military body, they are said to be worthless; but they discharge the civil duties intrusted to them in a creditable and satisfactory manner. The arms of the Contingent, which is in reality an undisciplined force, are spears, matchlocks, sword and shield: there being, besides, no uniform, every man dresses according to his own fancy. The police system is excellent, though there is no police in the ordinary sense of the word. In every village there are certain families who act as watchmen, in consideration of freely enjoying a stipulated portion of land. According to ancient custom, each village is answerable for all offences committed within its boundaries. "If," says Major Kelly, "the footmarks of robbers can be traced out and made over to another village, the responsibility is shifted over to that village, and so on until the trail stops, when the last village becomes responsible for the robbery. It occasionally happens that a village may be unjustly called on to afford restitution in consequence of being unable to carry on the tracks; but in such cases the villagers seldom fail in the end to discover the real perpetrators, who are then made to reimburse the village, and to suffer such other punishment as may be awarded." Education is generally at a low ebb. There is one English school, indeed, but with only twenty scholars, who do not appear to have greatly distinguished themselves by taste, curiosity, or perseverance. The native schools are quite elementary, and do not profess to teach more than the rudiments of reading and writing, with a few simple rules of arithmetic. The pay of the teacher is no more than one rupee a head per annum, and few boys remain under his care for a longer period than four years. The chief landed proprietors, like the Norman Barons of the olden times, profess to despise all book-learning, and are seldom able even to sign their names—the management of their affairs, consequently, falling into smarter, and oftentimes unworthy, hands. In one respect, however, a very great degree of civilization seems to have been attained. If a man carry off the wife of a neighbour of his own caste, he is compelled to refund to the injured husband the amount he expended on his marriage ceremonies. If the castes be different, it is a more serious affair, for the adulterer is then liable to fine and imprisonment—a suitable punishment for roving beyond his caste. It is not a little significant of the warlike, or rather turbulent, habits of these tribes, that in a state containing a population of no more than 2,000 souls, with a revenue not exceeding 80l. a year, the chief can gather around him 20 horse and 500 footmen, armed with swords, matchlocks, and bows and arrows, by merely undertaking to pay for their daily food.

It was in the year 1813 that the Indian Government first became connected with the Pahlunpoor State, which was then, and is still, a tributary of the Guicowar. Futteh Khan, the father of the present chief, Zorawur Khan, at that time petitioned both his immediate suzerain and the British authorities to afford him protection from his father's murderers. He did not in vain demand assistance, but throughout his life was protected alike from false friends and open enemies.

"The interference of the British Government," says Major Kelly, "has been of the greatest advantage to this petty state. From the day a British agent was placed in charge of its affairs, it has continued to prosper. Instead of being in a miserable state of anarchy and confusion, and its destinies guided by a band of foreign mercenaries, and loaded with an overwhelming debt (the condition it was first found in by us), it is now in a flourishing state, and has ever since enjoyed perfect tranquillity, both from foreign aggressions and internal dissensions. It is now released from all debt, and has a floating balance of surplus revenue amounting to Rs. 50,000, in a state banker's hands, as a deposit for any emergency or deficiency of revenue from drought or other calamity."

The intervention of the British Government was solicited by the other members of this little group of petty chieftaincies at different times, to save them from the predatory attacks of the Khosas and other robber tribes of Scinde. In all cases, their frontiers have been secured against aggression, while their internal administration has been left in their own hands—the suppression of suttee and female infanticide forming the only exception to the rule of non-interference. This is surely a bright example of the good results to be attained by the judicious exercise of moral influence, untainted by selfish motives or considerations; and may fairly be adduced in reply to the reckless charges alleged against the East-India Company, of sacrificing the honour of their country and the welfare of the natives to an insatiable thirst for conquest and revenue.

THE SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY, yesterday, paid to the credit of the Secretary of State in Council for India 108,800l. on account of the second issue of capital.

HEIGHT OF THE PERSIAN MOUNTAIN DEMAVEND.—In his last despatches the Hon. Charles Murray, her Majesty's Minister in Persia, sent home an account of a highly interesting journey through the Elboorz Chain, and of the ascent of the lofty volcanic mountain of Demavend by Mr. R. F. Thomson and Lord Schomberg Kerr, both attached to the Persian mission. These documents, which have been transmitted by the Earl of Malinsbury to Sir Roderick Murchison, to be presented to the Royal Geographical Society, will be read before that body at its first meeting in November. In the meantime it may be stated that, having succeeded in reaching the summit of Demavend with instruments, the adventurous diplomats have determined its height to be 21,500 feet, and have thus deprived Mount Ararat of the reputation so long enjoyed of being the highest point in Central Asia.

BOOKS.

Fallen Heroes of the Indian War: A Poem. (?)
 By J. V. WILLIAMSON. S. H. Lindley.

WHATEVER else he may be, Mr. John Vaughan Williamson is certainly not a poet. As his motive, however, appears to be good, we shall do him the favour not to quote his verses, though strongly tempted to do so by such lines as,

"Or Wellington, who from his summit hurl'd
 The encroaching Titan of a suffering world;"

or the following:—

"The name of Lawrence is a monument
 Of highest honour, brightest ornament,
 By the great fabric of his genius raised,
 And on the pillar of his virtues based."

By the way, Mr. Williamson is himself somewhat of an "encroaching Titan," and in token of having scaled Olympus, has appropriated the biographical notice of General Nicholson which appeared in this Journal on the 1st of December last. An ordinary prose writer would have felt it incumbent on him to acknowledge the source whence he had derived so long an article; but poets, we presume, are not to be subjected to the common-place rules of bien sance.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPÆDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP OF INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP OF THE ROUTES IN INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP OF INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 6s.

MAP OF THE PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP OF ARABIA, from the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 6s.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAGNESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for removing BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignees, Messrs. BAILEY and WILLS, of Horsley Fields Chemical Works, Wolverhampton, and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents throughout the British Empire, in bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, Sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth, when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may, with thorough comfort, be imbibed and retained in the month, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all diseases. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

Marvellous cures of sciatica, stiff joints, paralysis of the limbs and other crippling diseases of the bones, sinews, and muscles, have been accomplished by Holloway's Ointment. It is the only unguent which produces any impression on these complaints. The Pills also work wonders. The Ointment and Pills should be both used at the same time, for the action of the one is greatly assisted by that of the other. Why should any human being suffer from the above-mentioned maladies, when Holloway's Ointment and Pills are to be found in every city and town in the world? These noble medicaments are composed of rare balsams, and are as benign and safe as they are powerful and efficacious.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE arrival of the Bombay mail of the 24th September enables us to give fuller particulars on the various points of intelligence foreshadowed by the Government telegram. The most interesting event that has occurred was the insane attempt of the disarmed 62nd and 69th sepoy regiments to overpower the Bombay fusiliers at Moultan. They appear to have displayed a desperate courage, which resulted in their almost total annihilation. Upwards of 300 were killed upon the spot, and 800 were either slain or captured in their flight from the station. The 11th Punjab irregulars are said to have bayoneted a vast number of the mutineers, but the 6th irregular cavalry are accused of having used only the flat of their sabres, and even that sparingly.

The garrison of Powree, under Maun Sing (not the Oude chief), on being shelled out of that fortress by General Napier, took the road to Goonah, closely pursued by a flying column under Lieut.-Colonel Robertson. On the 5th September that officer came up with the fugitives at Beejapoor, on the Parbattee river, and, notwithstanding an immense disparity of numbers, at once charged and utterly dispersed them with considerable slaughter.

Nor is this the only exploit recorded of the British troops in Central India. Major-General Michel is reported to have defeated Tantia Topce between Roghar and Beora on the 13th September, and to have captured at least twenty-five of the guns, of which that rebel leader took possession at Jhalra Patun.

An action on a smaller scale, though distinguished by the most dashing gallantry on the part of the English officers, has taken place at Peeleebheet, in Rohilund. A small native force under Major Browne attacked without hesitation a vastly superior body of the enemy, killed 250, and captured four guns, three elephants, and a large quantity of ammunition. The fact that every officer was wounded indicates the daring nature of the attack, and the style in which the troops were led.

Four emissaries of the eternal and ubiquitous Nana have been given up by the men of the 25th Bombay native infantry, with whose allegiance they had too rashly ventured to tamper. Their credentials bore the Nana's own sign manual. Their guilt being proved beyond a doubt, they were blown from guns at Gwalior, on the 7th September.

Throughout the Madras and Bombay presidencies, perfect tranquillity is reported to prevail. But at Calcutta another senseless panic has disgraced the European inhabitants. According to the Hurkaru, it was attributable to the measures taken by the authorities to cover the embarkation of 300 sepoy convicts bound for the Andaman Islands. Whatever the cause, it is not creditable to a British community that the "white feather" should be so frequently and even ostentatiously exhibited.

The Governor-General, with Lady Canning, and the Commander-in-Chief, were still at Allahabad, but his lordship was expected to proceed to Cawnpore on the 15th Sept. in the inauguration-train on the newly-completed railway. Great complaints are made of the insufficient arrangements existing at Allahabad for the reception of troops arriving by steamers. A detachment of 200 Europeans were kept at the wharf from 8 a.m. to 11 o'clock, and then marched, under a burning sun, into cantonments three miles distant—the consequence being that 20 or 30 of the number had to be taken to the hospital. The others were kept without water until a bhistee was finally sent from the hospital, and without food until 11 o'clock at night.

The accounts of Lord Harris's health are contradictory, but it appears that his lordship is in no immediate danger, though still unable to attend to public affairs. Lord Elphinstone was at Bombay, whither he had proceeded to bid farewell to his private secretary, Mr. Adam, who is said to have succeeded to a large property in Scotland.

In answer to numerous correspondents, we take this opportunity of stating that nothing has yet been decided upon with regard to the re-organization of the native army. The commission appointed for that purpose have adjourned their further sittings until the receipt of certain papers from India, containing the suggestions of the experienced officers consulted by Lord Canning.

A general Court of East-India Proprietors will be held to-morrow, the 21st, for the purpose of electing three new Directors in the place of Messrs. Russell Elicce, Bayley, and Prinsep, who have disqualified. The candidates are Major Moore and Messrs. Dent and Plowden, who have already served as Directors of the Company in its happier days. The secretary, it may be observed, is Mr. Craufurd, long and favourably known from his connection with the transfer and dividend department.

THE COMMERCE OF BENGAL.

Mr. Bonnard's excellent compilation is unusually, inexcusably, late. The Commercial Annual, to be of real value, should be issued by 31st May, that is, within one month of the close of the official year. With the forms always standing, there can be no mechanical difficulty in the way, and Mr. Campbell was, we believe, never later than July. The volume is the clearest statistical record published in India, and we hope Mr. Bonnard will not destroy its utility by permitting himself to fall into the official habit of delay.

The commercial history of the past year is of usual interest. Beginning from 1st May, 1857, it embraces exactly the period of the mutinies. For the first time since 1833 there has been a falling off in Calcutta trade. The figures given, it is true, display a result widely different from any which experience would have induced merchants to expect. The general movement of trade has not been visibly diminished; but an analysis of the items speedily removes the first favourable impression. The total of the exports and imports in 1856-57 was 27,806,139*l.*, and in

|              | £27,934,101 |

The decrease in exports, 3,85,320*l.*, being more than counterbalanced by the increased arrivals of treasure.

An analysis of the detail of the trade gives, as we have said, a far less gratifying result. The exports, it is true, appear only to have declined by an insignificant sum, but in reality they have decreased to the extent of a million and a quarter, or more than seven per cent. The apparent equality is produced only by the enormous increase in the sales of opium, which amounted to 4,746,082*l.* against 3,823,503*l.* in the previous year. That increase, however important to the revenue, is of little benefit to trade; neither the merchants nor the producers being much the richer. The loss in exports has been principally in

The only article which has increased largely, opium excepted, is rice, which has risen from 1,514,509*l.* in 1855-56, to 1,764,310*l.*, or 14 per cent.

The export of rice has, indeed, nearly tripled since 1850-51, and seems yet not to have reached its limits, for the frightful fall in price which has injured so many Calcutta houses is due to other causes besides a glutted market. Deducting this and a few other items, the real decrease in exports is, in round numbers, a million and a quarter. And the million by which, at its usual rate of progression, the export trade ought to have increased, and we have the true commercial loss of the mutinies. It will be observed that it falls, with the exception of the one item of gunny, exclusively on the north-west.

The import trade shows a similar result. Apparently it has increased, but the import of goods has been less by 600,000*l.* The decrease has been principally in

The whole loss, indeed, has fallen on Birmingham and Manchester, the only large increase in their trade being 100,000*l.* in coloured cotton. The apparent increase is due to the import of treasure, which reached during the year the astounding sum of 7,407,424*l.*, and exceeded that of merchandise by a million and a quarter. This increase, doubtless, is in part owing to the fact that India sent this year no tribute to Great Britain; but it is scarcely more than we might have expected from the experience of the last five years. The demand has risen steadily till, in the last eight years, Bengal has absorbed twenty-four millions of specie, chiefly, though not entirely, silver:—

The six millions exported has not, be it remembered, been sent to England, but to Arracan and other provinces of the empire. It remains to be seen how long Europe will bear this drain upon one metal, a drain owing almost exclusively to the bigotted adherence to an inconvenient standard.

The general result of these figures is unfavourable; but not so alarming as might reasonably be anticipated. The loss, though large, has fallen almost exclusively on the territory actually disturbed, and has not at all affected the State revenue. There is, however, one other aspect of the question, which is far less satisfactory. The burden, partial in India, has fallen heavily on England. The trade to Great Britain has fallen from

England, therefore, in addition to the loss of life, has to endure a loss of more than ten per cent. on her trade with Bengal, nor is it probable that the deficiency will be very speedily repaired. The north-west may be pacified in another campaign, but factories and plantations require more than the mere restoration of peace. It will be at least two years, we fear, before the reconstruction of the buildings and the restoration of a feeling of security will raise the exports of the north-west to the level of 1856.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE EAST-INDIAN RAILWAY.—An inspection of the whole line of railway, from Allahabad to Cawnpore, was made previous to opening it for public traffic, on the morning of the 10th Sept. The journey was performed in about five hours, including stoppages. It is supposed that it will be formally opened on the 15th Sept. with befitting ceremony, in which Lady Canning will take a part. The actual time of running was only three hours and a quarter.

MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENT.—“THE SINGLE MARRIED, AND MARRIED HAPPY.—Wanted by a good-looking young man of an unexceptionable character, at present employed on the Agra division East Indian Railway, the opportunity of paying his addresses to any young woman (European, or of European descent) who may be looking out for a good husband. Now is your time, ladies.—Address, ‘E.I.R.’ care of the Printer.—‘Private’ The utmost secrecy preserved.”—Mofussilite.

ANOTHER HINDU WIDOW MARRIAGE.—We rejoice to announce the consummation of another respectable Hindu widow marriage at the village of Chund-riconnah with great pomp and éclat, on the 1st of the current Bengalee month of Bhaddur. During this month, a dozen Hindu widows would, in all probability, have been rescued from the horrors of brahmacharya, but for the interference of the learned reformer, Pandit Eshwar Biddiyashagur, who contends that it would be indecent haste to go through the ceremony of marriage during the current inauspicious month of Bhaddur, except in emergent cases. This is the eighth case of Hindu widow marriage in the Mofussil during the brief interval of two months, which is a circumstance of great rejoicing.—Englishman, September 9.

THE PUBLIC PEACE.—We had a sort of panic in Calcutta one night last week; not a serious one, it is true, and perhaps some of our readers have never even heard of it. The troops stood to their arms, the battery at Dum-Dum was in readiness to turn out, and at odd corners down towards Alipore, if any one had chanced to walk that way in the dark, he might have stumbled over small bodies of armed police. Now, what is the origin of these panics, which appear to be periodical, and occur at intervals of from three to four months? We have endeavoured to trace their source, but only with partial success. They appear to originate in council, are communicated to the police, and to a few nervous ladies in Chowringhee, and the affair is then complete. They do not seem to be serious, judging by their results; but it is somewhat annoying to wake up in the morning, and to find that, according to the half-divulged notions of the authorities, one ought not in common precaution to have gone to sleep at all the night before.—Englishman, Sept. 1.

MEERUT.—A letter of the 28th August mentions, that the “light horse” were suddenly recalled to Bijnore, to assist, it is said, in quelling some disturbance that had arisen between the Ghoorkhas and Sikhs. The magazine in the Dum-Dumma is all but cleared, its stores having been sent to Delhi and other stations. A magazine is to be formed at Bareilly, and Captain Forrest, late of Delhi, will have charge of it, it is believed.

THE 20TH PUNJAB INFANTRY, with the exception of three companies, move under command of Colonel Dunsford, from Benares to Buxar. Three companies of the same regiment join Colonel Turner's force at Sissaram, commanded by Lieutenant A. A. Currie.

LITERA SCRIPTA MANET.—The Boolundshuhur authorities have made a splendid haul at Malagurb. While knocking down some portion of the fort, they came upon a taishana, in which they found the whole of the duff of the rebel chief Wulleedad Khan, and amongst other papers, a book with the names, the places of residence, and the names of the fathers of all the fellows who were serving under him. The papers are said to be most important, and bring to light many an ugly transaction.

INDORE.—On the 24th August a small movable column, consisting of two guns of the Bengal horse battery, two companies of the 19th Bombay N.I., four companies of H.M.'s 92nd Highlanders, and a squadron of the 3rd Bombay light cavalry, proceeded towards Oojein, as about 500 rebels had assembled near that place. Sir Robert Hamilton is as active as ever, and we are very glad to hear that he continues in good health.

BANDA, August 26th.—The rebel bands to the south of Tirohan having given us a little occupation of late, perhaps you will like to hear what has been going on. These bands consist of the remains of the Kirwee rebel army, several proclaimed zemindars of this district, and a great number of the followers and subjects of our loyal allies, the rajahs of Bundelkhand. They are in three bands; one under Baboo Radha Govind and Galabracce, a second under Rammant Sing, of Adighur, and the third under Punjab Sing and Dere Sing, of Rewah. At Kirwee, as you know, they number in all 6,000 men, including 300 mutineers and 200 cavalry. The rebels had for some time past been laying waste the villages in the hill country of pergunnahs Eirohan and Mhow. At last, on the 13th of August, they descended into the plains, attacked the village of Hydgaoon, only four miles from Kirwee. Brigadier Carpenter only heard of the descent at 11 A.M., and he was off at 2 P.M., with a small but gallant band, to the rescue. He found them drawn up in battle array; but a few rounds from our guns soon drove them away, and as they fled up the hill, the 43rd Enfield told upon them with good effect. Thirty-six dead bodies were counted next day, and the rebels themselves put down their wounded at sixty. Besides this, their leader, Runmunt Sing, was shot through both legs, and is rendered hors de combat for some time to come. The moral effect, too, has been good. Desertions from the enemy have been numerous, and the whole body have moved out of our district. We only lost one Sikh horseman. Another band, under Punjab Sing and Dere Sing, about the same time marched in an easterly direction, and after plundering the police station of Hurgurh, and hanging and mutilating the police on the 22nd instant, attacked the town of Mow on the Jumna, drove out the tehsildar and police after twenty-four hours' hard fighting, and took possession. The avenger was however at hand. Under orders of the magistrate, Captain Griffin, who had been stationed at Chilla Taraghat in command of two guns and 500 Auxiliary Levies furnished by the Rane of Chatterpore, putting his force on country boats floated down the stream for Mow. He reached on the 23rd, and hearing that the rebels were in possession of Mow, he landed his force about two miles off, and advanced to the attack. He was received from the loopholed walls of the Thesclde and surrounding houses, where the enemy had posted themselves, with a heavy fire of matchlocks. The gallant Captain replied with his guns, and a few rounds sent the murdering scoundrels helter skelter away much faster than they could be followed up, and Captain Griffin took possession of Mow. The enemy lost three killed and several wounded, and on our side only one man was wounded. The presence of Captain Griffin, and his force at Mow, will keep that part of the district quiet again. Brigadier Carpenter, I hear, proposes moving out to visit and destroy the strongholds and head-quarters of the scoundrels. So we may hope, that in a short time, that part of the country will be quite clear of them. Major-General Whitlock is also on the move. He left four days ago, with the greater part of his force, for Chirkaree, whence he proposes to clear the Southern Pergana of Humeerpore, of the numerous bands who now infest the country. He has left us at Banda about 270 Europeans, 150 native infantry, the Madras horse battery, two troops of H.M.'s 12th lancers, and one troop of the Hyderabad contingent, under command of Brigadier Munsey. The Sikh horse, under Lieut. Dick, and a detachment of royal artillery, have left for Calpee, where Brigadier McDuff is said to be surrounded by rebels. All Naryyun Rao's jewels and cash have been sent to Allahabad. The trial of that worthy is closed, and he is now awaiting sentence. The trial of Mahomed Sirdar Khan is now commencing.—Delhi Gazette.

THE HILL CHIEFTAINS.—The Supreme Government have conferred the unmentioned rewards on the chiefs of the Simla hills, for service rendered and loyalty evinced during the crisis of 1857:—Koonthul: The rana of Koonthul to receive the title of rajah, and a khillut of Rs. 1,000 to be conferred upon him, also the fine of Rs. 4,801 imposed on him for torturing a woman supposed to be a witch, to be remitted. The rana received and protected many fugitives from Simla during the panic, and treated them with kindness and consideration. Balsun and Kotee: The thakoors of Balsun and Kotee, who also protected fugitives, to receive the title of rana, and be presented with khilluts, the former of Rs. 1,000 and the latter of Rs. 600. Sirmoor and Kuhlloor: to the rajahs of Sirmoor and Kuhlloor a khillut each of Rs. 5,000, and an addition to their present titles, also a salute of seven guns, if the chief commissioner is prepared to recommend such a mark of honour. These rajahs furnished each a contingent of 300 men during the disturbances. Khilluts have also been granted to the uncle of the Sirmoor rajah and the wazir of Kuhlloor of Rs. 800 each. Bagul: To Mya Iye Sing, brother of the rana of Bagul, a khillut of Rs. 600. Dhamee and Joobul: To the rana of Dhamee the remission of the half-yearly tribute of Rs. 720 paid by him, for his life; to the rana of Joobul a khillut of Rs. 1,000. These rana's protected and afforded assistance to many fugitives during the panic. It is also in contemplation to confer on Meah Bahadoor Singh, of Kusowlie, some reward for the services rendered by him during the rebellion.

JUBBULPORE, 26th August, 1858.—News has just come in from Dumoh of a most decisive blow having been struck on the rebels at Gurrah Cota in the Saugur district, by a detachment under the command of Captain Finch, 31st regiment Bengal N.I. This detachment consisted of 200 sepoy of the 31st N.I., and about 80 of the 3rd irregular cavalry, besides some of Captain Dickin's police (number not mentioned). The rebels had been plundering, attacking thannahs and burning villages for some months, and as they had not been molested, they had become very bold. It appears by a forced march that Captain Finch came up with the rebels, who were busily engaged plundering the town of Gurrah Cota, and by the route he marched he got between them and the jungle. Panic-struck by this sudden surprise, and their retreat into the jungles being completely cut off, they were forced to take to the open plain. The cavalry were sent in pursuit, and succeeded in cutting up 150 of them, and followed them up until it was dark, and Captain Dickin's police and friendly Thakoors allies potted them in the trees and ravines, and captured 70 prisoners. Several of their chiefs were killed, and four or five taken prisoners, amongst the former was Dewan Mokoond Sing of Punnah, and Indur Goshee is also reported to have bit the dust, besides several sepoy, supposed to be 52nd men. Amongst the prisoners was Turwur Sing, Dhokul Sing (nephew of Indur Goshee), Dawa Girar of Shahghur, Kana Dawa, and several other thakoors of importance, and three sepoy of the Gwalior contingent. Government had offered a reward for both Turwur Sing and Dhokul Sing.—Delhi Gazette.

ETAWAH.—We hear from the Etawah district that we are at length in possession of the whole of the country between the Chumbul and Koaree, the rebels, after their defeat at Chuckerungger having retired to the ravines beyond the latter river. One would suppose that having been so completely beaten, they would now give up the game as a lost one. But they, with a perversity quite unaccountable, will remain to annoy our forces yet. Our levies, &c. are to proceed to Chuckerungger, which will be the head-quarters of the Etawah district force for some time to come, being in a much more commanding position than Bhurree, and with 100 or 150 men in the Luckson Fort on this side of the Chumbul, and the main body at Chuckerungger, the rebels will be effectually prevented doing much damage, even if they cross the Koaree. Before the force left Bhurree, the fort at the junction of the Chumbul and Jumna, three of its bastions were blown up, and a large piece of the wall was pulled down, and it will be rendered for the future utterly indefensible, as soon as more powder is got together. Too much cannot be said in favour of Mr. Lane's energy. He has had much harder times than he bargained for, and Mr. Hume, who returns at the end of the month, may consider himself very fortunate in having had such an energetic officer to officiate for him during his absence. He will find his district much quieter than when he left it. The rains in the Etawah district seem quite over. The mornings deliciously cool.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 15.

AGRA, Sept. 4.—Dr. George Ranken Playfair has arrived at the station, as civil surgeon, Dr. Murray having assumed the duties of his appointment as superintending surgeon of the Agra district. Lieut. Wemyss Smith, 58th N.I., appointed to the Cantonment Joint Magistracy of this station, arrived a few days ago.

DHOLPOOR.—There has been a disturbance in the Dholpoor territory. It was at first represented to be a raid by the common enemy on a Tehseeldaree, but it has been ascertained to be a local feud. One Rundheer Sing, of Unzye, where the Tehseeldaree is situated, took umbrage at his brother being confined for default, and in an altercation with the Tehseeldar, swords were drawn and shots fired, in which the Tehseeldar and others were killed. Rundheer Sing and his followers fled immediately on the advance of a force of Sikhs from Dholpoor.

PESHAWUR, Sept. 8.—There was a grand parade held here the other day, and I cannot do better than give you the general's order after it. Division order by Major-General Sir Sydney Cotton, K.C.B., dated Peshawur, 1st Sept., 1858:—"The Major-General commanding the Peshawur division has very great pleasure in expressing in division orders the satisfaction he has experienced this morning in seeing the Peshawur troops on parade. The Peshawur force is now composed of noble troops, and the frontier of her Majesty's territory in this quarter is well defended. An occasional demonstration of power, such as was on parade this morning, serves to strengthen the hands of the executive, and to let it go forth through the length and breadth of Central Asia that a force of great strength and in the highest state of discipline and efficiency is at present on the border, prepared for any service. Contrary to the usual custom, the troops of all arms and colours have been exercised throughout the past hot season, and at this moment the condition of the Peshawur force, in health, strength, and vigour is such as might be expected at the termination of a cold season, but is rarely seen in India at its commencement. The mounted branch of the force have been continually at work, and their zeal and attention have been rewarded by their present perfection. The Infantry have been sufficiently at exercise to keep up and maintain, without injury to health, their wonted efficiency." The troops paraded consisted of:—Artillery.—One troop horse artillery, two light field batteries, and one mountain-train battery. Cavalry.—Peshawur light horse, 7th irregular cavalry, and 18th irregular cavalry. Infantry.—H.M.'s 81st regiment, three companies H.M.'s 94th regiment, Eurasian company 8th Punjab infantry, 14th Punjab infantry, Kelat-i-Ghilzie regiment, and 21st regiment native infantry.

MORAR, Sept. 6.—An action has been fought at Bejapoor, near Goonah, by a detached force from Brigadier Smith's brigade at Seepree, commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Robertson, 25th N.I., and consisting of a squadron of the 8th hussars, a squadron of Meade's horse, two 9-pounders, one 6-pounder, one 5½ howitzer, 100 of H.M.'s 86th, 120 of H.M.'s 95th, 10th regiment N.I., and 200 of the 25th N.I. This force left Powree, soon after the fort and town were captured, in pursuit of Maun Sing, on the 26th August, and after continued forced marching through the jungles, crossing rocky rivers, the colonel heard of the enemy at a village called Bejapoor; he mounted the men on camels and elephants, and marched, during the night of the 4th, a distance of twenty-three miles, arriving in sight of the enemy encamped on rising ground at dawn on the 5th, but having a river between them and us; our attacking force consisted of 8th hussars, 50th, Meade's horse 150, 86th, 75th, 95th, 90th, 10th, and 25th N.I., 100 each, the remainder were left to guard the guns. The river having been crossed, the infantry, 95th and 10th in advance, with the 86th and 25th in reserve, were pushed through a village resting on the left of the enemy's camp, while the cavalry made a detour, leaving the village on their left, and getting as it were behind the rebel camp—they were taken entirely by surprise, and just as they were preparing to go to the river for their morning ablutions, the two leading detachments charged with a cheer at the point of the bayonet, 25th and 86th well up, and soon routed the camp. So eager was the pursuit, that our men crossed the river with them, and a large number were bayoneted in the water. The rebels were chiefly the maharajah's body-guard, well mounted, and men of the 3rd, 40th, 47th, and 50th, and Gwalior Contingent. They were dressed in red, and had percussion firelocks; they were computed at 600 strong, and commanded by Ajeet Sing. Of this number between 400 and 500 men were counted dead on both banks of the river, besides those who were killed in it. Our loss has been severe—Lieutenant Fawcett, 95th, killed; Captain Poore and Lieutenant Hanbury, 8th hussars, wounded; Lieutenants Stewart and Page, Meade's horse, also wounded; 1 man 95th killed and 2 wounded; 1, 8th hussars, killed and 4 wounded; 10th N.I., 2 killed and 4 wounded; 1 of 25th N.I., and 3 of Meade's horse, with 15 horses of both regiments wounded.—Delhi Gazette.

BAREILLY, Sept. 2.—The district of Bareilly has been troubled of late by the presence of a body of rebels, who quartered themselves at Sirpoora in Pilleebheet, a village bordering on the forest. They were reported to have mustered 1,000 and upwards, both in foot and cavalry, with four guns. The first intimation we had of their whereabouts was by their having surprised one of our police chokees on the 22nd of last month, viz., Usonia, and killed two men, the rest escaping narrowly. A reconnaissance of the enemy's position was made the next day, by a strong party of cavalry under Lieut. Lance. The day following, two villages were pillaged by the enemy; when it was determined to render Neoria defensible, and hold it by a body of police, and in case of attack, speedy relief could be obtained from Pilleebheet; as, with this chokee neglected, the entire country within but a few miles of Pilleebheet, would be exposed and at the mercy of the rebels. A party of the Punjab pioneers, under local Ensign Chahners, accordingly set out for Neoria, to throw up the works of defence, and when at work were attacked by the enemy commencing the ball with round shot. Our party merely kept on the defensive, pending arrival of reinforcements from Pilleebheet, which you are aware is garrisoned. The enemy meanwhile doing little or no damage, and in the few instances in which they closed with us, their casualty list amounted to thirty killed, with a loss of three on our side. This seemed too much for them, and they now began gradually to retreat to Sirpoorn, the position they had taken up, and to which they got ere succour from Pilleebheet came. The fortification at Neoria was now speedily proceeded with, and was the same day completed. On the arrival of Captain Browne, with the reinforcements, it was resolved to attack the enemy in their position, who, from reliable information it was ascertained, did not intend again to move out to the attack themselves, and relied much on the position they had chosen for themselves being inaccessible to us, surrounded as it is by swamps and connected with the forest with but a narrow slip of land, by which they fancied they could retreat safely. To attack them then from the line of retreat they had chosen was next resolved upon. The column accordingly advanced at the early hour of 3 A.M. (the 30th August), and about 7 A.M. found themselves out of the jungle, within eight hundred yards from the object of their search. The enemy soon treated them to round shot again, and then sent grape into them when at a range of four hundred yards; and although they kept up a brisk fire, they did little harm, our advance being so steady and rapid. Not a shot was yet returned by us; but when at 100 yards we poured in a destructive volley, and with one general and desperate charge the day was ours, and the enemy's four guns and three elephants, all their ammunition and camp equipage, baggage, &c.; upwards of 300 of them were slain—one of their leaders, Ali Khan, being among the number. Our loss was five men and eleven horses killed, but upwards of forty men and thirty-one horses wounded—among the former, three European officers: one, unfortunately, happens to be Captain Browne, who received so severe a sabre cut on his left arm that it had to be amputated on the field; but he is doing well, I am happy to say. I must not omit to mention that the civil officer, Mr. Low, as usual, displayed much energy, and his intelligence arrangements were admirable; the information he procured was very accurate.—Delhi Gazette.

CAPTAIN FYFE, of the ship Moulton, committed suicide, at Calcutta, by cutting his throat, and stabbing himself with a bayonet, while labouring under temporary insanity.

BREVET-MAJOR Sir H. M. Havelock, Bart., of her Majesty's 18th foot, has been appointed second in command of the 3rd regiment Hodson's Horse.

FORT WILLIAM.—The services of General Dupuis, Colonels Adye and Harners, have been placed at the disposal of the government of India, to form a board for the purpose of investigating the defences of Fort William, Calcutta.

THE SIRMOR BATTALION has been honoured, by permission, to carry colours similar to regiments of the line, and an honorary regimental colour with "Delhi" inscribed thereon. It is in future to be called the "Sirmoor Rifle Regiment."

WAJID ALLY, darogah of Lucknow, has been presented with a lac of rupees for saving the lives of Mrs. Orr and Miss Jackson. A Calcutta contemporary, commenting upon the sum paid, says:—"The recipient may bless his stars that those whom he preserved were of the 'heaven-born.'"

FORT BHURREE.—The Fort Bhurree, at the junction of the Chumbul with the Jumna, the rajah of which has given so much trouble and annoyance, is again in our possession. It was taken on the 28th of August; the rebels made no stand at the fort itself. They collected all their available force, and tried to prevent the passage of the boats at Gurha Koodor, a fortified village three miles up the river. They were very plucky as long as our men remained in the boats, but bolted directly they landed and came to close quarters. They managed to carry off their gun, but left the carriage behind. About 25 of them, as near as can be guessed, were killed—the others succeeded in getting into the ravines, which are very bad about that place. After chasing the rebels away from Gurha, the men re-embarked, and came down to Gohani, a village opposite Bhurree, where Maconnachie and Graham joined the party. Our force immediately crossed over and took possession of the fort, which Roop Singh evacuated while the fight was going on at Gurha. They are now busy collecting the boats in the Jumna and Kooraree, and Chumbul, in order to prevent the rebels crossing into the district, and attacking their rear. Thence the force moves on to Chuckeruggur, which is likely to be in our hands in a day or two, when the rajah will have to pay for his continued hostility towards us. He and his men fired on the boats the whole way down the river, and wounded one of our gunners.—Delhi Gazette.

POWAYNE, Sept. 2.—"A native came in this morning, bringing in the heads of two rebels. He states that, five days back, the rebels attacked the Mujooi Thanna, in the Pilleebheet district, lying nigh fourteen miles N.W. of Madho Tauda; they have the Jemadar in their hands, and have organized their own thanna. But they paid dear for this, for very shortly after a British force arrived, and engaged with them. The enemy lost their four guns, one elephant, and 125 of their number 'accounted for.' The insurgents then beat a retreat towards Madho Tauda, where they were met by the zemindars, and bravely repulsed, losing two killed and four wounded, and four taken prisoners. The heads of the dead men that were brought here have been forwarded to the magistrate."

MR. KNOX.—The party of ninety sepoy who escaped out of the Jumoo territory have all been apprehended by Mr. Knox, the assistant commissioner at Kulloo. He heard that they were hovering about Spiti, one of the dependencies of Kulloo, and although the rugged nature of the country would have deterred many from pushing on, Mr. Knox, with a small party of police, made his way steadily to the borders of the Chinese territory, and there managed to apprehend the whole party. Full particulars have not yet been received, but this much we know, that a young Englishman, with a party of Sikhs, has managed to capture ninety mutineers in a most wild and difficult country, some fifteen marches distant from Sultanpore, the capital of Kulloo. This feat will no doubt redound much to our credit in the hills, and should tend to allay the apprehensions of those gentlemen of Simla who appear to be in a chronic state of alarm.—Delhi Gazette.

MOOLTAN, August 31.—On the forenoon of the 31st August, the 62nd, 69th, and native artillery rose and fell upon the guns (royal artillery), and after a considerable fight, were driven back with slaughter, one officer of Bombay fusiliers and four European artillerymen being killed; they then fled in various directions. The 11th Punjab infantry and 6th irregular cavalry behaved well, and cutting up the fugitives; some 400 pandies said to be killed. Ladies, &c., all safe in fort. No harm done to cantonments, no murder of Europeans, horse and foot sent in pursuit in more than one direction. Some pandies had taken the Lahore road, but 100 sowars in pursuit. Some sixty men of 62nd, and a few of the 69th, remained faithful. A force from the several regiments at Googaira, has gone out to cut off the fugitives; rewards are offered to villagers for their capture. Captain B. Reid, late deputy commissioner, Googaira, has gone out with that force, arrangements made in the first instance to stop all boats on the Sutlej; the only fear is, that the mutineers may get across the Sutlej into Bhawalpore; if they remain in the Baree Doab, they will be "accounted for." The mutineers left Mooltan, after the engagement, near the guns, in which near 400 men were killed, in two parties. The first party, about 400 in number, proceeded southward; they were pursued, and several stragglers cut off. They then separated into two bodies; one, about 100 in number, were driven on to a marshy island, watched all night, and attacked early in the morning by a party of Khungr police; one was killed, twenty-eight drowned, and forty-six captured. The remainder escaped for the time, but were subsequently captured. The other portion, about 300 in number, were driven into a peninsula, on the Chenab, surrounded, and watched till daylight, and were then attacked by a detachment under Lieut. Norgate: they formed themselves into rings and fought desperately; they were armed with clubs, but a few had fire-arms, swords, and spears, made of bryonits fastened on poles. 250 of them were either killed or captured, and fifty driven into the river and drowned. The loss on our side was one trooper, one sepoy (police), and one villager killed, and about twenty wounded. Another body of 300 in number started up northward; cavalry were sent in pursuit, but failed to intercept or overtake them. They were, however, pursued by the thesceldar of Sari Sidhoo, and all the police he could collect. Another party of police, under a native gentleman, Ghoolam Moostafa Khan, was also in pursuit. The customs police had also received warning, and Mr. Wright, the deputy-collector of Kulroor, collected all the force he could muster and started off towards Kurumpore. On the 3rd September intelligence reached Mr. Leeson, patrol at Kurumpore, of the approach of the mutineers, and he started to intercept them with a party of his establishment of police. He was too late to intercept them, and they succeeded in crossing the Derwanrah canal, and took refuge in a "khoond" on the Sutlej. Mr. Leeson watched them during the night, and the next morning was joined by Mr. Wright and Ghoolam Moostafa Khan. A portion of Mr. Wright's force crossed over into the "khoond," and the police, being dismounted and leaving the camp behind, proceeded with Mr. Leeson in another direction to cut off the fugitives; they, however, found the "khoond" deserted. The rebels, during the absence of the party, got in their rear, plundered their camp, took several horses, and fired the village of Hiasun Shah, and made off. On the 5th, the party having received intelligence that the rebels were at Boodhaun, went against them, met, and were attacked by the mutineers at Kurumpore Bridge. The rebels charged furiously and fought desperately, led by two native officers and a horse artillery trooper, all mounted. Our party was obliged to retire with a loss of six or eight killed and several wounded. The loss of the mutineers was at least double. Mr. Leeson garrisoned his house and Kutcherry, which is about a mile from the bridge. Mr. Wright, wounded by a blow from a club and suffering from exposure, retired to Mithoo; Ghoolam Moostafa rallied his party and took post near Mahomed Shah, about five miles from Kurumpore. About four p.m., being reinforced by a large body of police and peasantry, they attacked the mutineers and completely annihilated them. As Ghoolam Moostafa reports, "none escaped," "none were left," "all were killed." Exclusive of these parties, numbers have been brought in from all directions; in fact, all who escaped from Mooltan have been either captured or killed; but little mischief and but few outrages were committed by the rebels—they took grain and milk in the Bar and fired the village of Hussun Shah.—Delhi Gazette.

A JUDICIAL TURVEYDRO.—The stories which we hear from time to time of the fantastic tricks played by our high officials are most extraordinary, and would be incredible if they did not rest upon very good authority. We have frequently heard of a civil and sessions judge in this presidency, who insists upon natives, whom he casually meets in his morning and evening drives, closing their umbrellas, laying aside their sandals, and saluting him in a respectful manner. Should any one fail in this form of salutation, the worthy judge will take him to task on the instant, or at least he will stop to find out who the person is who thus dared to pass without doing homage. His neighbours at the station look upon

"It will be observed that in the year under review there has been a great increase in the shipping; being, in respect to arrivals, an increase of 177 vessels, or an increase of about 23 per cent., and in departures, an increase of 179 vessels, or about 25 per cent.*

"In former years the number of vessels in the port at one and the same time was about 55 to 60; but during the year under review, there have frequently been no less than 160 vessels."—Bombay Times.

PROGRESS OF THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—We are indebted to the courtesy of the telegraph officials for the following gratifying intelligence, received from Sir William O'Shaughnessy, chief superintendent of electric telegraphs in India, dated Bangalore, four p.m., Sept. 20 :—"The cable has just been laid successfully by Mr. Wickham across the Gulf of Manar, and signals sent across with one cell. The line from Kurrachee to Bombay was completed yesterday, and the offices will be opened in a few days."

MR. HENRY CLEVELAND, who arrived here by the last mail, was sworn in on the 14th September as an attorney, solicitor, and proctor of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay. He will join his practice with that of the honourable Company's solicitor, Mr. Bickersteth.

CAPTAIN (Brevet Lieut. Colonel) S. LANDON, of the 3rd Bombay European regiment, has retired from the service of the East-India Company.

SUPERINTENDENT OF REPAIRS.—Mr. Wilcox, assistant-engineer in the garrison engineer's department, is at present acting as superintendent of repairs under the municipal commissioners, and will be fixed in the appointment as soon as Government make known their wish to dispense with his services. Three candidates have offered themselves for the office—Mr. G. D. Dempsey, late architectural engineer to the G.I.P. Railway Company; Mr. James Rose, late surveyor and builder, P.C.; and Mr. R. C. Rowlands, late of the civil engineers. The commissioners have, in the mean time, informed them that in the event of Mr. Wilcox not being permanently appointed to the office, their applications will be taken into consideration along with any others that they may have received when the situation becomes vacant.

PRESENTS TO THE GOVERNMENT MUSEUM.—We are glad to perceive the native gentry of this place take a lively interest in the progress of the Government Museum, which is being reorganized in the hall and council rooms of the Town Hall. We learn that in addition to the sum of Rs. 500, presented by Mr. Juggorath Sunkersett, to be spent on Bombay inland works, three other gentlemen have made handsome contributions. Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., has given an order to the curator of the museum, Dr. Birdwood, for the purchase of textile fabrics to the value of Rs. 1000. Mr. Mungullass Nathooiboy has presented a sum of Rs. 700, for the purchase of black wood furniture of native workmanship; and a Parsee gentleman has presented miscellaneous articles of curiosity, of the value of about Rs. 300. We hope the rest of our native worthies will follow the example of their enlightened and benevolent countrymen above mentioned.

SIR HUGH ROSE.—Some of our Bombay contemporaries have recently given currency to a report that Sir Hugh Rose will very shortly take the field again in command of the Central India field force. This we are assured on good authority is a mistake. If Sir Hugh should take the field in the ensuing cold weather, it will be in command of a division of the army in Bengal. Sir Hugh has, we understand, been earnestly solicited by Sir Colin Campbell to accept a command on that side of India, and should the state of his health permit his doing so, there seems to be no doubt that he will shortly leave for Calcutta.

MAJOR A. A. DRUMMOND, of the invalid battalion, has been permitted to retire from the Hon. Company's service, from the 16th of September, 1858, upon the pension of a lieutenant-colonel, under the new furlough regulations, and to receive his stipend for the present under the Bombay presidency.

GOVERNMENT BAKERIES.—We understand that Government have resolved to establish bakeries at all the large military stations in this Presidency, as in consequence of the vast increase in the number of European troops in our cantonments, it becomes essentially necessary to insure them a proper supply of the "staff of life." With this object in view, Conductor Samuel Gordon, Superintendent of the Government Bakery in Bombay, has been ordered to Poona, where the experiment will first be attempted. Conductor Gordon belongs to the Commissariat Department, in connection with which he has long been usefully employed in catering for the wants of our European soldiery, by providing bread for their daily use. This is a very excellent measure, and Col. Pope, deputy commissary general, deserves great credit for initiating it.

MILITARY CIRCUMLOCUTION.—Our readers, we (Bombay Gazette) dare say, will recollect our having called their attention to a singular case, in which the commanding officer of the 2nd Belooch battalion narrowly escaped being tried by a court martial, for the dreadful crime of rebuking a young commissariat lieutenant, who had softly lent himself to a transaction by which the Belooches would have had to pay Rs. 1,400 instead of Rs. 700 for camel hire from Sukkur, the difference being pocketed by some scheming Banians, who acted as middlemen. We now learn that a court of inquiry has been ordered to investigate the whole affair, with Colonel Irby as president. It is now, we believe, admitted that the major was right in protesting against the attempt to impose upon his battalion; but he should have done so in the approved circumlocutory style,—that is, he should have first of all stated his grievance to the commissary general, who would have addressed his deputy at Kurrachee, and who, in turn, would have communicated with the deputy-assistant at Sukkur, and so on to the end of the red-tape worm; the Government, perhaps, getting the report of the case in about a twelvemonth afterwards!

CHURCH FOR NATIVE CHRISTIANS.—The friends and members of the Church of England in this place having, with the aid of the Church Missionary Society, completely paid off the cost of the new building of the Robert Money School, are now directing their efforts to the erection of a church for the native Christians in connection with the Church of England, and have issued a circular, from which we learn that there exists at the present time no place of public worship in Bombay for the devotion of the native Christians worshipping in communion with the Church of England. They now meet in the large room of the Robert Money School, which, in several respects, is very unsuitable for the purpose; and it is felt that they ought to have a home for their faith and worship, in which, as often as may be desirable, the service of the church shall be solemnized in their own vernacular, the word of God be preached, and all those occasional offices be celebrated which tend in so high a degree to cement the ties of domestic and social Christianity. The number of baptized native Christians is 150, of whom 32 are communicants. There is now ministering to them, as their pastor, a native clergyman in the employment of the Church Missionary Society. And it is believed, if a suitable church could be erected for these native Christians, it would stimulate amongst the heathen a spirit of inquiry, and lead them to consider whether they too might not find peace in the church of Christ. It is proposed that the structure of the building shall be plain, substantial, and commodious. But the magnitude and architecture of the church will necessarily depend upon the amount which may be contributed for the object. Ground has been secured for the proposed church immediately behind and adjoining to the premises of the Robert Money School. It is proposed that the bishop of the diocese, the archdeacon, and the senior presidency chaplain, and their successors in office, be the trustees. The appointment of the minister, it is thought, should rest with the Church Missionary Society, or its representatives in Bombay, so long as they shall be willing to provide for the due maintenance of the services of the church. We are requested to add that contributions will be received at the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, in Bombay and London; to be paid to the credit of the Trustees of the Native Church Building Fund, viz., the Lord Bishop, the Venerable Archdeacon, and the Senior Chaplain. The subscription list has been liberally initiated by the Lord Bishop, E. Heycock, Esq., and D. J. Kennelly, Esq., and we trust that the appeal to the Christian community will be generously and speedily responded to.—Bombay Gaz.

BELGAUM, 15th September.—On Saturday last the whole of the troops, European and native, were assembled to witness the grand and imposing ceremony of decorating Lieutenant Kerr, of the southern Mahratta horse, with the Victoria Cross. The whole of the members of the civil service were present, and many fair ladies graced the scene. As soon as the gallant General Farrell made his appearance, he was received by the troops with presented arms, a compliment which he returned in the most elegant manner. All preliminaries having been arranged, the General proceeded to read a letter from the adjutant-general of the army, in which he recounted the many brilliant deeds performed by this distinguished young officer, and which has entitled him to the highest military honour in the gift of our beloved Queen. I was really quite at a loss which to admire most—the beauty of the language in which the letter from the adjutant-general was couched, or the splendid intonation of voice in which it was read by General Farrell. I will boldly assert there was not a soldier on parade but could distinctly hear and understand every word that was uttered by the gallant general. When he had finished reading the letter, together with all the extracts from the London Gazette bearing on this subject, he turned to the hero of which this letter is the subject, and addressed him in the warm language of friendship, expressing a hope that he might live long to enjoy the honour that was now conferred upon him by a benign monarch and a grateful country. There was only one thing that I regretted, and that was that I had not the pleasure of seeing the cross pinned to Lieutenant Kerr's breast by the "girl he left behind him." When the general had concluded his brief but eloquent address, he desired Lieutenant Kerr to advance on his right hand, and he then placed the cross upon his breast, and the ceremony was over.—Bombay Times.

H.M.'S 51ST REGIMENT have been ordered off immediately from Kurrachee to Mooltan, and H.M.'s 46th Regiment, now on their way to Bombay by the overland route from Corfu, will, immediately on their arrival, be despatched to Kurrachee. These movements of European troops have been caused by the recent outbreaks at Mooltan and Dehra Ismael Khan, and the uneasiness felt for the safety of life and property wherever disarmed Bengal regiments are stationed in the Punjab.—Poona Observer, Sept. 18.

DEATH OF DAVID M'CULOCH, Esq.—We deeply regret to announce the death of the above gentleman, whose name, as a synonym of personal worth and commercial probity, has been long familiar as a household word to the inhabitants, European and native, of this island. Calm and resigned, he died at eight o'clock on the morning of the 12th September, of intermittent fever, from which he had been suffering for eight days; but it was only within the last three days of his illness that some of his immediate friends apprehended a fatal issue to the attack. His remains were conveyed, the same afternoon, from his late residence in Meadow-street to the Free Church of Scotland, and, after an impressive address from the Rev. Dr. Wilson to the worshippers who had been called together by a necessarily brief summons, were consigned to their last resting-place in the Scottish cemetery, Col. Scott officiating as chief mourner. The long line of carriages that formed the funeral cortege, and the numerous assemblage in the churchyard, which would have been multiplied had a longer notice been possible, and who, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, witnessed the last and melancholy ceremony, spoke eloquently of the esteem in which the virtues of the deceased were held by all classes of the community, whether native or European.—Bombay Gazette.

INDIAN NAVY.—The Bill for better securing the observance of an exact discipline in the Indian navy, has been submitted for the assent of the Governor-General.

BANDA BOOTY.—The property captured by General Whitlock's column at Banda, consisting of specie and gold bricks, is valued at three crores of rupees.

THE SIR JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHAY'S ESTATE BILL has been read a third time in the Legislative Council of India. On the motion of the Hon. Mr. Peacock, the Bill is to be transmitted to England for the requisite sanction of her Majesty in Council.

Koelser, whilst Benares had been denuded of troops to assist in the operations against Koer Sing. Thus the central situation of Azimgurh enabled me to watch the proceedings of the rebels north of it, to cover Benares and Ghazepore, and to direct and control the combined movements in pursuit of Koer Sing.

4. At daybreak on the 17th inst., Brig. Douglas, in obedience to my instructions, attacked the rebels near Azimgurh, drove them from their position with much slaughter, and followed them to Ghosee, whence they fled to Nugra, and thence to Secunderpore, closely pursued by the brigdr.

5. On reaching Secunderpore on the 19th, it was found that the rebels had proceeded but a few hours, with the intention of crossing the Gogra; as soon as he possibly could, the brigdr. followed, and at daybreak of the 20th instant, came up with them at "Muneeer Khass," and, taking them by surprise, killed and wounded a great many, captured a brass 9-pounder gun, complete, with limber, horses, &c., two ammunition waggons, several elephants, horses, and bullocks, with twenty carts laden with stores, harness, &c., and dispersed the main body, the bulk of which fled towards Bulliah and Beyreah.

6. Nineteen elephants were separated from the rebel force during this attack, and, making their way to Ghazepore, were handed over to the magistrate there by the native in charge.

7. Col. Cumberlege, who had been posted at Mhow to cover Ghazepore, and co-operate with the pursuing force,* was duly warned, and directed to move towards Bulliah, and endeavour to intercept the fugitives.

8. No time was lost by Brig. Douglas in renewing the pursuit, but on reaching Sheopore on the 21st, it was found that Koer Sing had effected the passage of the river in boats, which had been prepared by his adherents, and were in readiness for him! The other 9-pounder brass gun, which Koer Sing was known to have, here fell into our hands, together with several elephants and much ammunition.

9. A party of rebels is reported to have crossed near Bulliah, but I have not yet learnt what steps were taken to intercept them by Col. Cumberlege, who was placed there for that purpose.

10. Having left a sufficient force in Azimgurh, I am now en route with provisions to effect a junction with my scattered troops, who have been directed to meet me, when I shall be in a position to operate as may be necessary, against any bands of rebels, either of Koer Sing's force, who, unable to cross, may still remain in the district, or against those to the northward of Azimgurh, who may again venture to collect in strength.

11. I regret extremely that, after the very great exertions which have been made to capture Koer Sing, he should have evaded our pursuit; he returns, however, to his own district a fugitive, hunted and nearly worn out with fatigue, and dispirited by the loss of nearly all his warlike munition.

12. Since the rebels quitted Azimgurh, we have deprived them of five guns (two of which belonged to the Government), about thirty elephants, all their ammunitions, and most of their stores and plunder. A large number of the rebel sepoys have been killed, and every report agrees that the remainder are much dispirited.

13. I beg you will do me the favour to bring to the special notice of H.E. the C-in-C. the very extraordinary exertions made by Brig. Douglas and the troop under his command, and the judgment and untiring energy with which this officer has conducted the pursuit. I consider that all has been done that it was possible for a military force to do under the circumstances; and that, but for the unforeseen event of boats being in readiness on the river, the whole of the rebels must have been captured or annihilated. Brig. Douglas was just in time to fire a few rounds from his guns at the rearmost boats, and to sink one of them.

14. Much credit is also due to Mr. Davies, C.S., magistrate of Azimgurh, who accompanied the brigdr. and aided him with his local knowledge, and the correct intelligence of the movement of the rebels.

EDWARD LUGARD, Brigdr.-Gen.

Comdg. Azimgurh Field Force.

P.S. Since writing this, I have received from Brigadier Douglas a more full and connected despatch than his daily reports; copy of this I beg to enclose.

* 2 Guns, 6-pounders, 2 battery guns, 50 men 2nd dragoon guards, 180 men 4th Madras cav., 300 men H.M.'s 11th L.I., 100 men 10th and 97th foot, 100 men Madras rifles.

From Brigdr. JOHN DOUGLAS, C.B.,
Comdg. Brigade of the Azimgurh Field Force,
To Brigdr.-Genl. Sir E. LUGARD, K.C.B.,
Comdg. Azimgurh Field Force.

Dated, Camp Sheopoor Ghaut, 22nd April, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward for the information of Brigdr.-Gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., a detailed account of the operations of the force under my command, from the 17th to the 21st April inclusive, the object being to press the rebels as much as possible, and to force them to give up their guns.

On the 17th, according to instructions, I marched at 3 A.M. from Nuthoopoor, with a force as per margin,* and found the enemy strongly posted at Nughai near Azimgurh: I sent the cavalry and horse artillery of the advanced guard through the village by the road, the infantry cutting across the fields; the guns became immediately engaged, but the enemy stood well behind their breast-works, at the edges of tops of trees. It was now certain that a large force was opposed to us with art., as they came round on almost every side, and made several attempts to charge the guns. I threw part of 37th, 84th, and the co. of Madras rifles, into skirmishing order, with supports, who rapidly advanced under a very heavy fire, carried the enemy's positions, and drove them off: they retired in good order from top to top, followed by the infantry; a number were bayoneted in their trenches, and a colour was taken by the 37th. Whilst the infantry were clearing our front, the enemy appeared in great force on our left, and were kept in check by the H.A. and Maj. Cotter's batt., supported by the cav., who made several charges. I followed the enemy for some distance, and a number were cut up; they were very determined, and evidently trained soldiers. In their retreat they divided into two bodies, and I halted for some time, till I could ascertain which was the main body; I then started in pursuit along the lower Ghosee road, passing through Chuprah and Etawah, at which latter place the enemy seemed to have united. Our force bivouacked at Ghosee, within four miles of the enemy, after a march of twenty miles; from information afterwards received, the enemy, on our arrival, moved six miles further on.

On the 18th, we marched to within three miles of Mygra, a distance of about twenty-four miles, the cav. and H.A. going on in advance, and following the enemy till they took up their position in the town of Nugra; during the evening information was received, that the enemy, hearing of our approach, had rapidly left the town, but the spies could not inform us which road they had taken; about midnight we heard that the enemy had retired towards Secunderpore, and intended to cross the Gogra there. At two A.M., on the 19th, we followed in pursuit, and bivouacked four miles beyond Secunderpore, and within four miles of the enemy at Muauhur in the Ghazepore district. During this long march we picked up several of the enemy's stragglers. We here heard that the enemy were in much distress by the rapid pursuit, not having had time during the last two days either to cook or sleep. On the 20th, we started so as to arrive at Muauhur at daylight, and found the enemy posted in some very thick woods to the right of the village. I ordered a few rounds of grape to be fired, and then advanced part of the 37th and 84th, and Madras rifles, in skirmishing order, through the wood; the cav. and horse and Madras art. moving round by the right. The enemy were quickly driven from their position, broken, and pursued for six miles, by the cav. and art.; the H.A., and two of Maj. Cotter's guns, supported by the greater portion of the milly. train, proceeding along the bank of the Gogra, where a few of the enemy crossed in boats, but under a heavy fire. Two of Maj. Cotter's guns, with a small portion of the milly. train, and the 3rd Sikh cav., followed to the right in pursuit of a large body of about 1,500; unfortunately, one of the guns broke down in consequence of the rough nature of the ground, and they were obliged to be withdrawn, the Sikhs having continued the pursuit for several miles, cutting up a great number and dispersing the remainder. Captain Pearce, comdg. the Sikh cav., desires particularly to mention the gallant conduct of sepoy 1772, Furradun, Madras rifles, who kept up with the cav., killing several of the enemy. In the hasty retreat of the enemy, they abandoned a brass 9-pounder gun belonging to the H.E.I.Co.'s service, complete in horses and ammunition, several limbers and waggons, an immense quantity of ammunition, and a large quantity of treasure, a number of bullocks and bakeries, and four elephants, and the regimental colours of the 28th B.N.I., found wrapped round the body of a Subadar who was shot. The enemy on this occasion were completely dispersed. Having collected my force, I proceeded to Bansdeh, where the roads diverge to Bulliah and Beyreah, and there halted till I could ascertain which road the rebels had taken. Koer Sing was reported first to have gone to a village named Rajagaon, and afterwards to Taintwar, where the dispersed rebels had their rendezvous. I proceeded in that direction, and found several bodies of the enemy on my left, and I also understood that they were holding the village; it being nearly dark, and the country thickly wooded, I did not consider it advisable to advance further, and bivouacked within two miles of Taintwar. During this night no spies came in; we were under arms at 2 A.M. on the 21st; but at this time a spy came in, saying that the enemy had collected all their forces in a dry tank close to the village, and our reconnoitring party made the same statement, which prevented my moving off till daylight. On advancing, I found that the enemy had moved off, and I am led to believe that they went at a very early hour. I immediately pushed the cavalry and horse artillery on as quickly as possible to the ghaut here, where it was reported the enemy intended to cross the Ganges; but from all information I was led to believe that they had no boats, and must ford on elephants, in which case I should have been up in time to have prevented their crossing; the information, however, on this head proved false, as they were provided with boats, and the cavalry and horse artillery arrived only in time to cut up about 200, and sink one of the last boats that crossed. On this march we took another horse artillery brass 9-pounder gun, belonging to the Hon. East-India Company's service, complete in every respect, and several elephants. I inclose a return of the killed and wounded in the two actions, which must be considered very small in comparison with that of the enemy, which I believe could not have been less than 1,000 men. I believe the original number of the enemy to have been between 4,000 and 5,000 men, nearly all sepoys; a good many of them are still on this side of the river. I beg to bring to your notice the admirable manner in which the troops performed this rapid and arduous march of nearly 120 miles in five days, many hours in each day under a burning sun, and never under canvas. I beg to thank Col. Riddell, R.A., for the assistance he rendered me during the action of the 17th, and whose orders were to return to Azimgurh; I have also to thank Maj. Cotter, Madras Art.; Capt. Lightfoot, comdg. the 84th regt.; Capt. Harrison, comdg. 37th regt.; Capt. Wyatt, comdg. milly. train; Capt. Pearce, comdg. 3rd Sikh cav.; Capt. Broome, comdg. detach. Madras rifles; Lieut. Fulford, comdg. Punjab sappers, for their able co-operation during the two actions; also Maj. Mitchell, R.H.A., who was several times detached in command of cav. and art.; also Lieuts. Jennings and Beadon, 3rd Sikh cav., for the assistance they gave in reconnoitring and collecting information. I also beg most particularly to mention Capt. Stevenson, 79th Highlanders, major of brigade, and Maj. Turner, R.A., who acted as Art. Staff Officer, and who both rendered me valuable assistance. In conclusion, I beg to return my best acknowledgments to Mr. R. A. Davies, the collector of Azimgurh, who accompanied me throughout the operations, and gave me the greatest assistance by his valuable informations; he also carried orders for me during the actions, and behaved in the most gallant manner.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Brigadier,

Comdg. Brigade of the Azimgurh Field Force.

P.S.—It has just been reported by the magistrate at Chuprah, that Koer Singh is wounded in the thigh and arm.

Capture of Mohumdee.

The Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Dep. Adj.-gen. of the army, dated 28th May, 1858, forwarding two despatches from Brig.-gen. Jones, C.B., announcing his advance on Mohumdee, and his capture of that place:—

From the Dep. Adjt.-gen. of the Army to the Sec. to Govt.—Military Dep., with the Gov.-Gen.

Sir,—By desire of the C.-in-C. I have the honour to forward, for the information of the Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen., two despatches dated the 24th and 25th inst., from Brig.-Gen. J. Jones, C.B., announcing his advance on and capture of Mohumdee.

2. The Brig.-Gen.'s operations were, his Exc. considers, pressed with their usual vigour, but the retreat of the enemy was so rapid that he was not able to inflict heavy loss on the fugitives.

3. The C.-in-C. had himself arrived at Shahjehanpore with a weak escort on the 18th. On the afternoon of that day the enemy showed in considerable force, and there was a prolonged skirmish. The arrangements of the force did not permit of an advance, and his Exc. restricted the efforts of the troops. The enemy suffered from the effects of our cannonade.

4. The C.-in-C., thought it advisable to remain at Shahjehanpore till a sufficient force had been assembled at that place to admit of the brig.-gen's forward movement being made with perfect safety. His Exc.'s presence being much needed on the line of the telegraphic communication owing to the numerous references from the commanders of the various columns still in the field, he returned to Futtelgurh on the 25th instant, very exact instructions having been given to Brig.-Gen. Jones, for his guidance.

H. W. NORMAN, Major,
Depy. Adjt.-Genl. of the Army.

H.Qrs. Camp Futtelgurh. May 28, 1858.

From Brig.-Gen. J. JONES, C.B., comdg. Shahjehanpore Field Force. To the Chief of the Staff.

Dated, Camp, eleven miles from Mohumdee, May 24th, 1858.

Sir,—I attacked the enemy at day-light this morning. The fort was taken quickly, and without loss, but the enemy retired with such speed that I could not come up with them. The carriage of one of his heaviest guns was broken to pieces by a 24-pounder shot, but the gun has not been found. One only was taken in the fort, a gun that had burst.

The enemy were very strong on their own right, and large bodies of their cavalry out-flanking us, checked the advance of Brig. Hazart with a large portion of the cavalry, and Tombs' troop of horse artillery on our left. The rebel cavalry charged the Mooltani cavalry, thirty-nine of them riding through the regiment; five or six of Curzon's men were wounded, but all the rebels that broke through his regiment were killed. A waggon of Maj. Hammond's battery exploded while moving with the carabineers at the gallop, and two Europeans and one native were killed. I advanced about nine miles with great rapidity, but I could not come up with the enemy. The cavalry and light guns were pushed on a few miles further in pursuit. The guns they (the enemy) principally used, were drawn by horses, and with these he covered the retreat of those drawn by bullocks, withdrawing the latter at the first round from our artillery.

The country greatly favoured the retreat of the enemy, being everywhere open and unbroken so that they could scatter; and sufficiently wooded to conceal their principal line of retreat.

The force will reach Mohumdee early to-morrow; it is about eleven miles from my camp.

A few fatal cases of sun-stroke occurred.

JOHN JONES, Brigadier-General,
Comdg. Shahjehanpore Field Force.

Dated Camp Mohumdee, 25th May, 1858, 4 p.m.

Sir,—I arrived at Mohumdee this morning. I found some of the enemy's cavalry in position in front of the town, but on driving them away, the town was discovered to be abandoned. One damaged gun was taken in the fort. The rebels retreated over the river Goomtee and into the jungles.

The town is now occupied by some of Coke's Inf., and arrangements are being carried out for blowing up the fort.

I am in hopes of capturing some guns still, for information has reached me that the enemy did not succeed in bringing them all away from Banaye.

I regret to say, that these operations have cost, and are likely to cost, the lives of a considerable number of European soldiers struck down by the sun.

The main body of the rebels under their leaders retreated yesterday into the jungles, carrying their families with them.

J. JONES, Brigadier-General,
Comdg. Shahjehanpore Field Force.

INDIAN TAXATION.

The increasing excess of expenditure over income in India has for some time past attracted the serious attention of Government. Every year the deficiency becomes greater, nor is there any prospect of its reduction except through the imposition of new taxes. But on what articles are these to be levied? Shall objects of first necessity, or of art and luxury, be selected for this undesirable honour? That is the question; and one not easily answered in dealing with a people imbued with more than a Jewish aversion to part with their money, and whose wants are so few and simple. It is very clear that every sort of evasion will be practised that native ingenuity can suggest, and that direct taxation alone presents any likelihood of being sufficiently profitable to justify incurring the odium attendant on additional imposts. The most simple form is a poll-tax, which might also be the most easily and cheaply collected, by making every potail responsible for his village; but, on the other hand, it has been more than once tried under native rulers, who were compelled to give it up on account of its perilous unpopularity. Next in simplicity and productiveness comes an income-tax, which, according to the Friend of India—no mean authority on such subjects—might be expected to yield two millions and a half sterling. This estimate is based upon the calculation that the annual income of the people derived from trade, manufactures, and other sources unconnected with agriculture, amounts to fully fifty millions, and that a tax of five per cent. could be levied without serious detriment to the prosperity of the community. Our contemporary observes, indeed, that such a tax would meet with a determined opposition from every European in the country, as "they do not emigrate to be taxed, and an impost of Rs. 50 a month on every man earning Rs. 1,000 a month would be most keenly felt and bitterly resisted." And justly so, if Government servants, whether native or European, were called upon to pay, for it would then be equivalent to an underhand reduction of salary. But there is certainly no reason why settlers and traders should be exempted from its operation.

The Friend suggests another tax, which would not only yield a good revenue but would avoid giving offence to the prejudices and susceptibilities of the natives. This is no other than a wedding license. It is supposed that in India the annual number of marriages is one to every hundred souls, or at least a million and a quarter every year within the British territories. On these occasions the natives utterly forget their usually parsimonious habits, and scatter their money on all sides with both hands. "The ordinary expense of a wedding in the shopkeeper class (that is, among persons possessed of more than 50 rupees a month) is Rs. 300, while even the poorest, the ryots included, spend from 30 to 50 rupees." Now, assuming that the better class marriages are one-tenth of the whole number, and that the highest-priced license cost Rs. 20, and that the remaining 1,125,000 couples paid only five rupees for a second-class license, the produce would be—

|-----------------------------------|---------------|
| 125,000 licences, at Rs. 20 ..... | Rs. 25,00,000 |
| 1,125,000     "     Rs. 5 .....   | Rs. 56,25,000 |

Total—£812,500 or Rs. 81,25,000

This estimate would probably be found within the mark, as every one would strive, from ostentation, to purchase the most expensive license, especially if the one document were illuminated in the Persian style, and the other a simple certificate.

A succession duty might likewise be imposed with advantage to the State, and without exercising any pressure on the poor. From this source alone half a million sterling might annually be realized; but not improbably a sufficient revenue might be obtained from the taxes on personal property and marriages to render it unnecessary to multiply causes of unpopularity.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF THE NATIVE ARMY.

No question connected with India is at this moment more immediately pressing than the re-organization of the native army. The problem is an exceedingly intricate one, and requires to be solved with great carefulness and delicacy. In the place of a large, well-disciplined homogeneous force, urgent local necessities have called into existence swarms of irregular troops even more numerous than the body they were intended only temporarily to replace. A present danger has been evaded by incurring a risk a little more remote, and we now stand in the position of a man on the point of being drowned in the waters with which he has extinguished a conflagration. The Praetorian cohorts of Brahmans have indeed disappeared, but only to make room for yet more hazardous instruments in the form of Sikh and Punjabee levies. Under one designation or another, a larger numerical force is now on foot than previous to the mutinies, and one maintained at still greater cost and peril to the State. As the ancient Britons called in the aid of the Saxons against the dreaded Scots, so did the Indian authorities, in their dire extremity, have recourse to the warlike inhabitants of the Punjab to save them from the treacherous Poorbeas. That the parallel may no further be carried out, has become an object of the most anxious consideration.

It is agreed on all hands that henceforth the European element must be far more largely introduced than heretofore, if we would hope to maintain our position in India. But it does not follow on that account that a much larger proportion of Queen's regiments will need to be permanently stationed in the east. For many reasons it will be found more desirable to keep up two distinct services, one exclusively destined for Indian duty, and the other acting in a supplemental manner. It may seem impertinent to offer suggestions on a matter so purely professional, nor are we insensible of our own inability to grapple with a question embracing such vast interests, and beset with such numerous difficulties; but, as fools rush in where wiser men repress their steps, we shall venture to sketch the outline of a new military establishment for the Bengal Presidency.

In the first place, we would have fifteen regiments of European and Eurasian infantry, each 800 strong, which would give a force of 12,000 bayonets. Of light cavalry there should be ten regiments, or 5,000 sabres in all; and the artillery should also be greatly augmented, but entirely European, with the exception of a few companies of Indo-Britons and native Christians for special service in the Burmese provinces and on the north-west frontier. At the same time, a native regular force is quite indispensable, though it might perhaps be advantageously modelled after what is commonly called the irregular service. It has been suggested in one of the Indian journals, and not unwisely, that there should be no more than thirty regiments of native infantry, each mustering 500 bayonets, and commanded at the most by six officers. Six regiments of cavalry, armed and mounted after the manner of the Scinde horse, would add 3,000 sabres, and complete the cadre of the native army. But there are many duties, not strictly of a military nature, which nevertheless can only be properly discharged by a quasi-military force. Such, for instance, are the escort of treasure and Government stores, mounting guard at jails and public offices, the surveillance of the frontiers of independent states, and the suppression of gangs of marauders and robbers. For this purpose, it is advisable that a force should be maintained somewhat analogous to the Irish constabulary. Probably not fewer than 30,000 men, horse and foot, would be required for this service, which might be officered to a great extent by meritorious non-commissioned officers from European regiments, subordinate to a small number of carefully-selected officers of a higher grade, and specially qualified for the very responsible duties that would devolve upon them. While retaining the system of promotion by seniority as a rule, we would have officers who have distinguished themselves in the field promoted to the first vacancy in their own or some other corps. Those passed over might complain, but a motive for emulation would thus be afforded, and the service generally rendered more efficient. With respect to the native regiments, almost absolute power should be entrusted to the commandant—certainly as regards the promotion of native-commissioned officers and privates. To recapitulate, the new establishment thus formed would consist of 12,000 European and Eurasian infantry, and 5,000 European and Eurasian light cavalry; 15,000 native infantry, and 3,000 native cavalry, comprising Sikhs, Punjabees, Rajpoots, Goorkhas, Bheels, and aboriginal Indians; and a constabulary force of 25,000 bayonets and 5,000 sabres, similarly constituted. As for the ordinary police, there is no better system than that of rendering every village liable for the offences committed within its borders.

It is almost needless to add that we do not contemplate the possibility of anything so absurd and suicidal as a return to the system of contingent forces. Every native fortress throughout our own possessions must, of course, be dismantled, and the walls of every fortified town laid level with the ground. Half a dozen strategical stations, containing magazines and arsenals, and garrisoned wholly by Europeans and native Christians, should be carefully selected, and their fortifications so constructed as to be capable of defence by a small as well as a large force.

These rough hints and suggestions we offer, with all diffidence, simply for what they may be worth. We do not, indeed, imagine that our opinion on such matters is likely to carry much weight; but it is the duty of every honest journalist to express his calm, unbiassed views on the topics of the day, and that duty we have endeavoured to discharge to the best of our judgment and ability.

THINGS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—It has often fallen to my lot to observe that the generality of men of superior education and of good general information are, unless they are connected with India by some close tie, but ill-informed on Indian topics; nay, are utterly ignorant of the very alphabet of Indian history, geography, and politics. Can we wonder at this state when the acknowledged organs of instruction show such gross ignorance on the subject as they do.

An illustrated contemporary of yours recently gave portraits of most of the members of the new Council for India, accompanied by short biographical sketches, in which it tells us that "the latter Board" (i. e. the Board of Control) "merged into the Council of State for India, the result of a bill to that effect, introduced by Lord Stanley." If a bill for the purpose stated was introduced into Parliament, it did not become law, and it certainly was not introduced by Lord Stanley, whose bill became law, and if I mistake not, put an extinguisher on the Board of Control. Certainly it did not merge that body into the Council of State for India, whatever that may be.

Of Sir James Hogg, the biographer says "he was first chosen a Director of the Court of Proprietors, io, &c." I do not know of such an office, do you? We are also informed that, "at the abolition of the Court of Directors, he was one of the Political and Military Committee." This, as a matter of fact, is incorrect. At the time when the political functions of the Court of Directors ceased (it is not abolished), Sir James was a member of the Finance and Home Committee.

We are further informed that "Sir Henry Montgomery" (a Madras civilian, be it remembered), "who has recently returned to England, was formerly on the staff in Ireland."

We are told that Mr. Mills "is on the Committee for Finance and Home Affairs, and third member of the Secret Committee." I was under the impression that the Secret Committee was abolished; but perhaps I am in error on this point.

These are a few inaccuracies that have occurred to me from a casual perusal of the paper; whether there are others, I will not say.—Yours,

ORIENT.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. SORE THROAT, QUINSY, ULCERATED THROAT, and DYPHTHERIE.—The sore throat, with more or less hoarseness, prevailing at this season of the year, has for twenty years been treated with the above remedies with a degree of success far surpassing that of any other mode of treatment. The cures have been so remarkable, speedy, and numerous, that it was predicted the new disease Diphtherie, consisting of small ash-coloured ulcers in the interior of the throat, attended by fever, often fatal, might be arrested by the same means; and such has been the case. This disease, in its first stage, seems even more amenable to Holloway's Ointment and Pills than the simpler forms of inflammatory sore throat.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The movement lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

A deceptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, Sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary result of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied; a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth, when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may, with thorough comfort, be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 11, Gyle-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 24th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 23rd September is utterly void of public interest. The proclamation announcing the transference of the Government of India from the Company to the Crown had not yet been issued, but was expected to appear in a few days. The event was to be celebrated in the Presidency towns by general illuminations and a brilliant display of fireworks.

The heavy rains have hitherto prevented the resumption of field operations on a large scale, but the force at the Commander-in-Chief's disposal is sufficient to deal with the remaining masses of insurgents in a very summary manner, as soon as the rainy season has terminated. The main body of rebels was reported to be concentrated in the neighbourhood of Amaihee, between two rivers, and advance or retreat alike forbidden by considerable forces of British troops. A detached band, estimated at 3,000 fighting men, who had taken up a strong position on an island in the Gogra, was attacked and routed by two companies of Europeans, a troop of Hodson's Horse, and the Contingent of the Rajah of Kuppoothalla. The enemy is said to have lost 1,000 men in this gallant affair, with a very trifling loss on the part of the assailants.

The railway from Allahabad to Cawnpore was opened on the 15th September in a quiet, unostentatious manner, and will greatly facilitate the advance of troops from Lower Bengal to the Upper Provinces.

Under the head of "Official Gazette" will be seen a long list of promotions and alterations of rank in the Artillery and Engineer services of the Madras Presidency. It will be remembered that those of the Bengal Presidency appeared in our issue of the 15th October.

The only point of interest in the news from China is the return of Lord Elgin to Shanghai from Japan. His Lordship has concluded a treaty similar to the one lately obtained by the Americans. A representative of the British Government is to be permitted to reside at Jeddo; five ports, including Kanagarra, Nagasaki, and Hakodadi, are to be opened to free trade within twelve months, as are likewise the cities of Jeddo and Ohosaka; while a duty of five per cent. is to be levied on exports and of twenty per cent. on imports, with the exception of cotton and woollen goods, on which no more than five per cent. is to be imposed. On the other hand, the Emperor yacht was presented to the high dignitaries deputed by his Majesty to receive this token of goodwill from his "cousin" of Great Britain.

BENGAL.—Lieut.-Col. Towgood, 35th Bengal N. I., of Arbrofield, near Reading, Oct. 24; Lieut.-Col. William Prendergast, 8th Bengal L.C., at Alipore, aged 44, Sept. 15.

A SOCIABLE CLUB.—"We understand that a club has been formed by several Parsee gentlemen—the headquarters being a garden near the Gowalia Tank—with the view of affording their wives the privilege of mixing in the society of males. It is a sine qua non for each member of the club to be present with his wife. Before their evening meals, the individuals composing the little interesting party, mixing promiscuously amongst themselves, take an airing along the garden walks, and probably fancy themselves strolling in the bowers of Elysium for the while. While at their meals no scrupulous restraint crosses the gentle flow of witicisms and harmless repartees; and the members separate after an evening's rational entertainment."—Bombay Times.

A CORRUPT PRESS.—It seems that some of the lower order of native newspapers have made it a regular profession to earn their maintenance by extortion. The rascally editors make a dupe of some wealthy but uneducated native gentleman, by threatening to comment upon his household affairs and private character, and demanding a certain amount of money to silence their mouths, and the discussion drops as soon as the black mail is paid by the innocent and timid victim. This, we are afraid, will continue until an example is made of one of them by imposing upon him a heavy punishment of incarceration as the result of a criminal action. We learn that the editor of the Chalook is at present in a dilemma, in consequence of two or three Barian merchants having taken measures to obtain redress by dragging him before the Supreme Court."—Bombay Gazette.

CASH PAYMENTS.—Traders in Madras are trying to introduce a ready-money system by giving ten per cent. discount for cash. They will fail. The Calcutta shopkeepers give fifteen, and have failed utterly. Men will not carry rupees about, and until a gold currency is introduced, cash payments are hopeless.

AGRA UNCOVENANTED AND SAVINGS BANKS.

We are glad to find from the half yearly reports of the Miniature Banks at this station, that success has attended their operations during a most calamitous period; and that the proprietary themselves are free from all apprehension of losses, and anticipate a remunerative future from their past uninterrupted success, is evidenced from the fact that they feel themselves justified in increasing their establishment, and substantially rewarding their officers by enhanced allowances. The Agra Savings Bank has a capital of 30,000 rupees, a reserve fund of 15,000 rupees, with a divisible balance of 8,227-5-7, enabling it to declare a dividend of twenty-four rupees per cent., and a bonus of twelve rupees, which substantially amounts to a dividend of thirty-six rupees per cent., a return sufficiently handsome to satisfy the most avaricious of Bank Stock Proprietors, and one unequalled in the annals of European Banks, calling for a few explanatory remarks. It is a principle to which Banks in general adhere, of fixing a ratio between fixed deposits and capital; and that this varies from 2 to 1 and 3 to 1, but is never allowed to rise higher. To maintain this ratio deposits are certainly not refused; but the increase of capital becomes absolutely imperative, and is regulated by the accumulating influx of deposits. The principle does not seem to be recognised by these little Banks; and yet we do not think their deviation is to be condemned. The danger which is apprehended from an excess of deposits, arises from the probable inability of Banks to meet any sudden run on them, occasioned by various circumstances scarcely necessary to mention. The danger can be obviated by limiting individual deposits, so that the run must be general ere it can cause any effect. The average gain on fixed deposits of the Agra Savings Bank is six per cent. in loan transactions, and though fluctuating in exchange, it is always more remunerative. When it is borne in mind that deposits bear to capital a ratio of 6 to 1, the high dividends are satisfactorily accounted for. The Savings Bank has now worked successfully for upwards of seventeen years, steadily increasing its capital, raising its reserve fund to half its capital, gaining yearly the confidence of the public, as evinced by its proportionate increase of deposits, and declaring year after year its handsome dividends.

The Uncovenanted Service Bank has a capital of 10,500 rupees, a reserve fund of 17,500 rupees, and a divisible surplus of 8740 4-7, enabling it to declare a dividend of 12 per cent. It has during the past half year adopted a principle which in future is to be adhered to, viz., the exclusion of all unrealised interest from the profits of the Banks, thereby giving the proprietary what is virtually and substantially their profits. Exchange seems to have engaged special attention, and the results of the deliberation of a committee appointed for the consideration of so important a question have been embodied in the resolutions of the general meeting, and published in the supplementary sheet to their half yearly report. It appears that the exchange operations of both these Banks have during the half year under review rapidly enlarged, and it was the return from this particular branch alone which enabled the managers to declare their usual handsome dividends. Exchange has universally been acknowledged to be the most lucrative department of a Bank, and it has been entertained by many that the risk attendant is in proportion. However satisfactory the dividends were to the shareholders of the Uncovenanted Service Bank, they felt it a duty incumbent on them to examine the question and to see how far exchange operations could be carried on consistently with their small capital, and whether the returns received justified the risk undertaken.

The resolutions of the shareholders, based on the deliberations of the Special Committee, are in favour of exchange, placing no limits, but adopting a few precautionary measures, which the Committee have deemed advisable to suggest; such as the appointment of a referee, and a limitation in some measure to the powers hitherto invested in the Manager. Supported by all the principles of Banking, its nature and operations examined and tested by theory, and its soundness and profitable results verified by practice, exchange cannot be repudiated in toto by any Bank; but without enumerating its several advantages and its universal adoption by Banks, we would particularly draw the attention of such Banks as have their fixed deposits raised high above their small capital to this most available and profitable branch. The capital invested in exchange operations is very controllable, and from the quickness of returns readily available to meet emergencies. The apprehension of sudden and large withdrawals from deposits vanishes, and it becomes unnecessary to keep a large margin for an unprofitable large cash balance in hand.—Delhi Gazette.

REMINISCENCES OF LUCKNOW.

The last number of a half-yearly periodical entitled "Indian Annals of Medical Science," contains some interesting notes by H. M. Greenhow, Esq., taken during the ever memorable siege of Lucknow. From these records of the impressions made on the mind of an intelligent professional man by the incidents of one of the most fearful events in the annals of this country, we make the following extract:—

"After the closing in of the enemy, and the cessation of communication with the surrounding country, people began to feel the hardships as well as the perils incident to their situation. At the first alarm most of the servants, thinking the garrison doomed, had fled, leaving their masters to find for themselves. To ladies particularly this was a great loss; and, subsequently, when arrowroot and sago, sugar and port-wine, were not to be had, when milk was very scarce, and eggs sold at two rupees a-piece, and whenever soojee was not abundant, it may be imagined that people put on grave faces, and looked anxiously for 'The Relief.' As will be seen presently, children especially were the sufferers, for broth, soojee and rice, were literally their only food. There was certainly porter for those who urgently required it; but beer was not to be had after the early days of the siege. Meat and attah were the staple food of adults; but ladies, especially the sick, could with difficulty eat or digest Chupatties, and no bread was seen during the whole siege.

"The sanitary arrangements were carried out before the besieging army arrived in a very vigorous manner, and the whole area of the entrenchment was cleared of filth to an amazing extent. When, however, the siege began, the establishment of the sanitary officer vanished, and he was left comparatively powerless. The garrison then had to bury dead horses and other animals of all kinds; and some difficulty was experienced in getting these and the bodies of natives and others disposed of in the proper manner. Europeans were interred in the churchyard, which had been included in the entrenchment; but it is believed that the enemy have not allowed the bodies to rest in their graves.

"But, in spite of every effort, where persons are crowded together as in a garrison, and are under a tropical sun, and where servants, so particularly necessary in India, are few and far between, filth and nuisances will collect; and it may be conceived that, after a few weeks, the air of the entrenched enclosure became tainted, and disease became prevalent. Perhaps it was well that the season was comparatively a dry one. At the beginning the heat was great; but after the first two or three weeks rain fell in some quantity, and the air became cooler, the thermometer generally ranging from 85 to 90 deg.

"Whether the women and children, who were for the most part shut up in the houses, and consequently unable to enjoy what fresh air there was, or the officers and soldiers, who often slept out in the damp trenches or were exposed to great exertions in alternate sun and rain, suffered most in health it is not easy to say; but undoubtedly all were severely tried, and the trial proved too much for many. It may be mentioned that the women and children of H.M.'s 32nd Foot—which Regiment formed the staple of the Lucknow garrison,—had nearly all perished miserably at Cawnpore; their fate foreshadowing, as it were, that of Lucknow, should it fall before the arrival of relief.

"No building in the entrenchment was safe from shot, shell, and bullets, but the European and Native hospitals were chosen in spots as free as possible from fire; and though, in the former, several men were wounded by balls that penetrated, and though the upper story was riddled by round shot, yet the arrangements were good, and everything was carried on in a regular and systematic manner. The Medical Staff lived in the hospital; women were allowed to nurse their husbands; boys from the Martiniere College acted as helpmates to the nurses, and made themselves useful in cooling the patients with handpunchah, &c.; while for several weeks certain benevolent ladies lent their aid to smooth the pillows and dress the wounds of the poor fellows, both officers and men, who lay in the different wards.

"All luxuries that could be procured, as jellies, port-wines, arrow-root, and sago, were made over to the hospital soon after the commencement of the siege; and for the sick throughout the garrison incidents for these things were sent in by Medical Officers as they were required. But, as already mentioned, the supply was not equal to the demand, especially towards the end of the siege.

"In the Native hospital, also, matters were carried on in a regular manner. The stock of servants was but very limited, most having fled at the first alarm. But the hospital, though greatly crowded at times, answered its purpose sufficiently well, and the patients received every attention.

"Taking all the above mentioned circumstances into consideration,—remembering the disagreeable conditions of affairs in the garrison at the commencement of the siege, the effect of the loss of dear relations during its continuance, for women sometimes saw their husbands shot before their very eyes, the hard work in the heat and wet of the men, the anxiety, close confinement, and insufficiency of suitable food of the women and children, the almost necessarily defective sanitary arrangements and over-crowding of the whole garrison,—taking all these things into account, can it be wondered at that cholera, diarrhoea, dysentery, and fever found their victims, and that besides those who died of their wounds, many met their death through disease?"

The sufferings of delicate women, in the most delicate of conditions, and the ravages of disease among the infant portion of the beleaguered community, are thus indicated:—

"A good many births took place during the siege. As might be anticipated, many were premature, for what a position was it for ladies and women to be in! Round shot frequently crashing into the houses; shells bursting in the roads and open spaces, and in the very verandahs; bullets constantly whistling through the air, or 'thudding' against the walls; and mines occasionally shaking the very earth! Such were the sights and sounds which met one on every hand; while our own heavy guns, morning and evening, replied to the enemy's fire, and shook the air with reverberations. At the commencement of the siege it was especially remarked how all the children, of every age, felt the confinement. The weakly gave way at once. The strong alone survived; while new born children almost invariably pined and died."

Dr. Greenhow furnishes a table, from which we derive a more reliable estimate of the numbers of the garrison at the commencement, and the losses sustained during the siege, than has yet, we dare say, been made public. On the 30th of June, 1857, the garrison hemmed in at Lucknow by a force of from 12,000 to 15,000 men, which was subsequently fully doubled, and who had with them from 30 to 40 guns, was as follows: EUROPEANS: officers, 130; non-commissioned, 63; chaplains, 2; drummers, 20; privates, 507; non-military combatants, 147; women, 257; children, 281; total 1,467. NATIVES: Fighting-men, 611; public camp-followers, 162; private camp-followers, 742; total 1,515. Grand total of garrison, 2,982. The following is the return of killed and dead from the 30th June to the 25th September, the date of Sir James Outram's arrival:—EUROPEANS: Officers, 28; non-commissioned officers, 43; chaplains, 1; drummers, 6; privates, 248; non-military combatants, 23; women, 15; children, 41 total, 405. NATIVES: Fighting-men, 133; public camp-followers, 19; total, 152; private camp followers, loss unknown. The total loss of the garrison, therefore, from the misdeeds of the enemy and other causes, was about one fourth. The memoranda which Dr. Greenhow has so carefully preserved will be invaluable materials to the future historians of the Indian rebellion.—Bombay Gazette.

PEACE, PEACE, AND THERE IS NO PEACE.

The revolt of the Sepoys in Mooltan and Lahore reads us a lesson as plain as the handwriting on the wall. It was resolved, in defiance of the terrible teaching of the year as of the plainest maxims of State policy, to rearm some of the disarmed regiments. The Government, with that innocent credulity which its friends denominate forbearance, believed that the danger had passed away, that some of the passive Sepoys were loyal, that they were, at all events, too thoroughly cowed to attempt new outrages. The strong bond which linked the Bengal army into one mighty brotherhood was forgotten, and it was resolved to discharge only those guilty of overt disaffection. The remainder were to be rearmed, and employed as if no mutiny had taken place. Accordingly one day towards the end of August the two disarmed regiments at Mooltan were acquainted with their fate. A Government, merciful beyond all precedent, had doomed the guilty regiment, the 69th, only to dismissal.

The innocent one, the 62nd, was to be rearmed. The men manifested neither pleasure nor wrath, but on 31st August, about twelve o'clock, the two regiments and the native artillery made a sudden rush upon the European artillery of the station. They did not want the guns, it appears, so much as the horses with which they hoped to escape. They had no arms, but the side posts of their bedsteads furnished formidable clubs, and as the artillerymen turned out they assailed them with a courage which under other circumstances we might have admired. The artillerymen, however, although few, were armed, and after a desperate struggle of half an hour the Sepoys gave up the attempt. They turned and fled, leaving three hundred of their own number and five of the Europeans dead upon the field. By this time the Bombay Fusiliers had been alarmed, and came up rapidly, their Adjut., Lieut. Miles, a little in advance. Unfortunately he had to pass a narrow lane, where a party of the Sepoys seized him, dragged him from his horse, and beat him to death with clubs. The 11th Punjabees arrived soon after, for some reason or other furious with rage, and the Sepoys were mercilessly cut up. The 6th Irregulars, Hindoostanees, though said to hesitate, did obey, and rode sabring through the crowd. The Sepoys, now utterly disheartened, broke up, most of the gangs making for the Sutlej and Bhawalpore. They, however, failed, all the boats having been removed, and they returned. A few reached the Chenab, but were unable to get farther than an island in the stream, where they were surrounded. Some burnt thannahs along the Lahore road, and when pursued took to the jungle, but the inhabitants have risen, and their doom also is sealed. The military authorities caught 100 the first day. The Civil power captured 200 in two days more, and out of 1300 who mutinied 700 are already "accounted for." The remainder are hemmed in on all sides by the swollen rivers, and by Irregulars and peasantry acting under the orders of a chief, who if he fell into an overconfident plan of kindness, at least will tread out mutiny.

The instant the news reached Lahore, the regiments there showed symptoms of uneasiness. The local government was, however, on the alert, and the agitation seemed for a moment to calm down, but it is reported these regiments also have revolted.

It is asserted that the cause of this outbreak was rage at the order for gradual discharge. This, however, cannot be the case, as the 62nd, which joined in the mutiny, was in no degree involved in the order for dismissal. Other accounts declare that rumours such as only Asiatics can invent spread rapidly through the ranks. It was impossible that Government could be so weak, impossible but that mercy must hide some tremendous treachery. The Sepoys were to be hanged in detail to avoid the annoyance of resistance. Nothing is too gross for Sepoy credulity, but this is improbable, as even they can scarcely conceive Government would arm a portion of its victims. The true explanation we believe to be, that both Regiments have been waiting with Asiatic patience for an opportunity of gratifying their hate. The order for their discharge dissolved this cherished prospect, and spurred them at once to action. If they waited, the 62nd might act, but in a month half the 69th would have disappeared. The half incited their comrades, and the result was a determination to escape to Bhawalpore. For this the horses were required, and the effort to obtain them revealed, and in the end frustrated the plot. Whatever be the truth, the lesson to be derived from it is plain. Men who will mutiny on a rumour are as little fit to be soldiers as men who will mutiny out of mere hate and disaffection. The Sepoy army ought at once to be dissolved.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A MILITARY INVENTION.—We (Delhi Gazette) have great pleasure in bringing to the notice of our readers an improved plan for the transport and working of mortars, which has lately been introduced by our Commissary of Ordnance, Captain L. Machell. The arrangement consists of a neat application of Garoue's ratchet lever, attached to the head of a tilt platform cart; the levers by which the ratchet is worked unslip, and each becomes by turns a lever for throwing the mortar on its muzzle previous to mounting, for traversing when in action, and, as before stated, for working up the ratchet. A comparative trial of the two systems took place a few days ago before Brigadier Showers, C.B., commanding the station of Agra. First Captain Machell's system was tried: the mortar was dismounted, fired off, remounted, and made ready to take off the field in three minutes, and was worked entirely by four men. Then the old system was tried: the mortar was dismounted, not fired off, remounted, and made ready to take off the field in thirteen minutes, and it took the united strength of twelve men to bring down the platform with the mortar on it, whereas one man can at once effect this by Captain Machell's plan, and with very little exertion; thus proving that three mortars can be worked by the new plan in a fourth of the time, or even less, and with the same number of men that one upon the old system is at present, besides being able to advance seven hundred yards, and again come into action. We ought to mention that the experiments were tried upon 8-inch mortars. We are quite sure that Captain Machell's plan will meet with Lord Clyde's approval, and are glad to learn that a mortar and platform upon the new principle have been at once sent off by our Brigadier for his Lordship's inspection.

THE DACCA NEWS.—Probably few of our readers are aware that there is a sort of apology for a newspaper published at Dacca. In this case ignorance is bliss, and we cannot commend the curiosity of the man who shall seek to become personally acquainted with the Dacca News. It is apparently conducted by an amateur editor, an egotistical, insensible Scotchman, who affects the coarsely humorous style peculiar to his countrymen of the self-educated class. This gentleman is, moreover, an indigo planter, but by no means a favourable specimen of that generally self-sufficient and querulous order of beings. Now it has been our fortune to incur the displeasure of this individual, and we sincerely hope that so long as he adheres to his present opinions and his ordinary mode of expressing the same, we may never do anything to bring down upon us his praise and good-will. So far as we can gather from his verbiage we have committed two great faults: the one, that we spoke of the Civil Service as being composed of "gentlemen" in the highest and fullest sense of the word; the other, that we do not exchange with the aforesaid Dacca News. To both these indictments we plead "guilty," and can hold out no hope of repentance. But it so happens that we did see in one of the Indian journals an article in extenso, a summary of which we borrowed from the Friend of India. This article was not very creditable to our contemporary in his capacity of indigo planter, and we are therefore pleased to observe that he is so far ashamed of it as to be tetchy on any allusion to it being made. For the future we promise not to offend him by attaching the slightest importance to either his statements of facts or his incidental reflections. What more can we say?

THE DEATH OF MR. SWEETING, the Assistant Magistrate at Dinagore, is announced by the Englishman. He had endeared himself to every one in the station by his amiable qualities. Mr. Sweeting was one of the competition-men and promised well.

THE COVENANTED AND THE UNCOVENANTED.—A correspondent complains that whilst the covenanted servant of Government is allowed eight annas a mile for travelling expenses, the uncovenanted servant is only allowed four annas a mile. The regulation was made on the supposition of the superior rank of the former, and is a part of the traditional policy of the Company. All these anomalies will soon be remedied, a deficit being the most radical of levelers.

HOSHUNGABAD has suffered severely from an irruption of the Nerbudda. The Government have ordered the sum of 2000 rupees to be distributed amongst the greatest sufferers.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS.—The Englishman understands that on Sunday evening, the 12th September, there was an emeute in the Hooghly gaol. The whole of the prisoners rose and attacked the gaol. The Police Burkundazes, however, prevented their escape. The burkundazes were compelled to use force, and about eight of the convicts were severely wounded. This is almost the first time a gaol guard of this kind has fairly put down an emeute. The men, we believe, are nearly all native Christians.

SINGULAR POST-MORTEM.—Recently a boatman at Madras was drowned. The boat he was in was upset in the surf, and the man perhaps not being so good a swimmer as most of the Madrassees are, or the surf being unusually high, perished. There were plenty of witnesses to the fact, but a coroner's jury was empanelled, and strange to say the body dissected. We are not told whether any cockles were found inside, or how much sea water the body contained, or whether it was discovered that the man died of apoplexy. But as a fitting sequel to the story, all the Madras boatmen struck work. They had no notion of having their bodies dissected after death, a fate that apparently seemed inevitable as most of them expect to be drowned. They were at last pacified.

THE BEGUM.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette gives us an insight into the Court of the Begum at Boondee. Major Bruce, the head of the intelligence department at Lucknow, despatched to Boondee a native doctor. He was to remain near the person of the Begum, and from time to time report the pains and dis-eases of the rebels. The physician accordingly departed, was introduced to Mummo Khan, the Minister of the Begum, and to Her Majesty. His professional services were soon called into requisition, and both Minister and mistress were cured of some trifling ailments. After some days some sepoy presented to Mummo Khan in full Darbar a petition. Mummo Khan being unable to read, handed the paper over to the hakeem. The hakeem saw at a glance that it accused him of being a spy, and contained a most minute account of his parentage, and made of life previous to his appearance at the Court of the Begum. He affected in life ruse, and attempted to prove himself innocent. He was taken before the Begum, who in remembrance of his services declared him innocent, and dismissed him through a private gate of the Fort, so that he might avoid his accusers. He is said to have represented to Major Bruce that Lucknow is so full of the enemy's spies that just now the life of no British emissary at Boondee would be safe for an hour. The best plan would be to bribe Mummo Khan himself.

MERIT REWARDED.—The President of the Council of India in Council is pleased, as a special case, to admit B. Asad Ali Khan, of the Behar Irregular Horse, to the 2nd Class of the Order of British India, with the title of "Bahadur," from the 29th May, 1858, in consideration of his gallant conduct in the defence of the Tehsee and Thannah of Kaengunge, in the Furruckabad District, and of his exemplary loyalty to the State.

THE YEOMANRY CAVALRY.—We (Englishman) earn that the President in Council has been pleased grant a further extension of three years, to the ear's leave granted to the gentlemen of the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, employed at the different Government Offices, who will be permitted to reckon the period so employed under Civil employ. We notice the circumstance as it will be gratifying to the Corps to learn how highly the Government are disposed to value their services, although so large a reinforcement of Cavalry may so shortly be expected from England. The Corps may now be borne on the Military Roll for a further period of three years.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A large Panshy boat was capsized the other day little beyond Channanogore. It had 70 persons in it, more than three-fourths of whom were drowned. Amongst the survivors was the manji, who has been confined for having engaged to take so many persons in infringement of the Police rules on the subject. It is hoped that the local police will take measures to prevent a recurrence of accidents of this nature.

BHANGULPORE, Sept. 6.—The Sonthal police corps numbers some 300 strong, and is composed of as fine a set of men (athletic and broad-shouldered) as any police corps enlisted from among the aborigines of either Southern, Western, or Eastern India, whether Bheels, Coles, Dangers, Paharees, or Nāgārs. I have heard it said, that Mr. Yule had the greatest difficulty in getting the Sonthals to enlist at first; and that at one time he quite despaired of success, until, by way of experiment, having picked up a score or so of miserable, starving wretches in the jungles, he had them brought into Deogurh, and fed and clad there for, say, a couple of months. The men picked up flesh fast enough, much faster in fact than had been anticipated; and the alteration in their condition and appearance went a good way, in a very short time, in bringing in the other recruits.

GORUCKPORE, Sept. 3rd.—“The eastern part of the district has been invaded by a band of 300 sepoys, probably a party of those driven out of Bansee by Brigadier Douglas. These marched upon the Deoriya Tushlee, and meeting five Moonsuffee Burkundzees murdered three and cruelly maimed the two others. The three corpses and the two wounded men were brought in last evening. The night before last a detachment of 150 Mudrassee of the 27th M. N. I., I have not learnt under whose command, were sent out to meet these mutineers. Our joint magistrate, Mr. Lumsden, has gone out with this party, accompanied by a few sowars. I was nearly omitting to mention that Mr. H. Wilson, the assistant magistrate, has proceeded to Bansee to relieve Mr. W. Peppe, hon. deputy magistrate, who returns to the station. Mr. Bozman, assistant planter to Mr. Bridgman, has been obliged to return to the station. He had gone out to his factory for the purpose of manufacturing the plant, but the rebels have not allowed him to finish.”—Bengal Catholic Herald.

PATNA, Sept. 2.—“The last report we could get was that the enemy were very busily employed in intrenching themselves, and building barracks, and they have established civil and criminal courts, Thuseeldarees, Thannahs, &c. They have hanged a number of Zemindars for default of payment of revenue, and have likewise sold several villages to the highest bidders by public auction, and have proclaimed their leaders as follows:—Unmer Sing, Raja of Shahabad; Joodur Sing, Raja of Sahilgunge; Ullee Kurrim, Nazim of Behar and Patna; Moulvee Mandhee, Nazim of Tirhoot and Sarum.”—Bengal Hurkaru.

A SLIGHT DELUSION.—“The 3rd Europeans are under the impression that as soon as the proclamation has been issued they will be free men; inasmuch as they bound themselves to serve the Company, but they made no rash promises to the Queen. The least they expect is another ‘Bounty’ and re-enlistment, failing which they promise a row. If their notion was correct, it would be rather an interesting proceeding, but if they will be good enough to carefully peruse their attestation papers, they will find that they were too securely nabbed.”—Punjabe.

RETURN OF TROOPS TO ENGLAND.—“It is rumoured that several regiments in Bengal have received orders to hold themselves in readiness for embarkation for England, and that among them are the 10th, 32nd, and 84th Foot. The regiments going home have done their duty right manfully, and have deserved well of their country; it is therefore nothing but fair that they should, after having borne the brunt of the mutinies, rest awhile to recruit their jaded energies.”

A NARROW ESCAPE.—“The steamer Kuladyne, which had the pleasant duty of towing the Soonawooly with the Viscountess Canning up to Allahabad, returned to this place on the 4th Sept.; she is going up with the treasure to Fyzabad, and from rumour, I have been given to understand that the Huringotta steamer accompanies her. While she was taking in her coal on board, at 6 P.M., the vessel was found to be bodily in a sinking state, and had it not most fortunately and opportunely been for the apothecary, a Mr. Matthews, going to his cabin, she would in less than half an hour's time have gone down, never to be recovered. It was owing to the coal being taken in on one side more than on another that gave her that lift, and caused the opening of one of these valves, and the filling of the vessel.”—Phoenix.

CACHAR.—Lieutenant R. Stewart, Officiating Superintendent in Cachar, considers that the stagnation of traffic in that province is owing to the want of good roads. To remedy this defect at once is clearly impossible. As a palliative it is therefore proposed that an annual fair shall be held at Silchar, the Sudder Station of Cachar. The fair is to last for five days, and this fair is fixed from the 30th December to 3rd January inclusive, when travelling in Cachar is comparatively easy. A notification of the fair and its objects has been published, and distributed amongst the different tribes of Nagas, Kookes, Cossiahs, Meekirs, Cacharies, Angamies, Kutcha, Nagas and Shooshaish.

Dacca.—“The senior students of the Dacca College have yesterday applied to Mr. Brennand for the introduction of the Holy Bible as a branch of their College studies. They are now perfectly aware of the adaptability of the Bible, not only for its use in the higher branches of literature, but for the high and pure moral doctrines inculcated by it. The step they have taken will, no doubt, expose them to the hatred of their countrymen. They have, however, so much profited by the lectures they have received from their professors, that they are perfectly satisfied with their actions as long as they are in accordance with the dictates of conscience. Mr. Brennand has undertaken to instruct them in the New Testament every Sunday morning.”

JOLLY TARR.—The petty officers, sailors and marines of the Shannon held an impromptu meeting among themselves, and the handsome sum of two hundred and thirty rupees was subscribed by them forthwith. With this sum they proceeded to one of their principal officers, begging him to transmit it to some magistrate, or public functionary, to be used entirely at his discretion, as an humble contribution to the charities of Calcutta, from the crew of the Shannon, in token of their cordial sense of the compliments paid to them.

MISTAKEN CLEMENCY.—It is currently reported that Rajah Lonai Sing, of Muhumdee, is likely to be pardoned. If such be the case the Government will have pardoned one of the greatest miscreants of the late crisis. This is the man who sold to the Begum of Lucknow, Capt. P. Orr, Sir M. S. Jackson, Lieutenant Burnes, Sergeant Major Morton, with Mrs. Orr and infant, Miss Jackson and a girl of the late Mrs. Christian, C.S., for the sum of eight thousand rupees. By the Begum they were all most brutally treated, the gentlemen having been murdered, and the ladies being kept for five months under the strictest imprisonment and privations of every sort, under which Mrs. Christian's little girl speedily sunk. The first thing Lonai Sing did when the party sought protection at his hands was to throw the gentlemen into irons, which had such an effect upon Messrs. Jackson and Burnes that they both lost their senses. What makes the matter worse is that Captain Orr had in former days befriended Lonai Sing, going so far as to stand his security for rents in the time of the late King to the extent of one lac of rupees, which was done on several occasions, and the first act of this villain was to throw his benefactor into irons, although the unfortunate wife of Captain Orr fell at his feet and endeavoured to recall former times to his memory. All was in vain, he was engaged in the game of extermination, and nothing would stop him, and this man is to be pardoned!—Englishman.

RAWUL PINDEE, August 31.—“Brigadier Chute leaves us this evening for Lucknow. He has been appointed to the command of the Brigade there. He is to be succeeded by Colonel Kelly, I.L.M. 37th Regiment. The heat is tremendous; no rain, and the air dry and fiery. We can't, however, have much more of it, in another month it will be becoming cold.”

Mrs. KINSLEY.—“We understand that the Government of India have taken favourable view of the case of Mrs. Kinsley, one of the oldest residents in the North West, and have granted her a pension of rupees 125 for her mainenance. Her husband, the late Mr. Kinsley, during his lifetime was employed, on the recommendation of the Marquis of Hastings, in the service of the late rebel Nawab of Jujjur, who, our readers must recollect, was hanged at Delhi a few months ago. Long before the insurrection broke out, the Nawab promised to grant a pensionary support to the family of Mr. Kinsley, if ever his services were dispensed with by any of his (the Nawab's) heirs, executors or administrators. As the properties of the late rebel Nawab have been confiscated and resumed by Government, and as there is no separate fund of that native chief from which Mrs. Kinsley, the widow of Mr. Kinsley, can receive her pension, she applied to the British Government for the same.”—Phoenix.

BANDA, August 29.—The neck of the rebellion has been broken, and the British Government firmly re-established here. Certain parties, who rendered assistance to Government in punishing the refractory Zemindars of Banda district, have received handsome presents and rewards from Government. The Banda jewels will soon reach the Presidency for sale. The Aheers who betrayed the civil officers have been apprehended.

SUMBULPORE.—A native Zemindar named Monohar Sing has been creating some disturbances in the villages on the other side of the river Mahanuddee, in the neighbourhood of Sumbulpore. It is said that he, with 200 armed men and some budmushes, have been plundering villages. Troops have been sent after them. Colonel Forster, the Commissioner, has left Sumbulpore for Calcutta.

CAWNPORE, Sept. 8.—“Nothing is more disagreeably remarkable here than the disrespectful bearing of the Natives about the place. Not that they dare by an overt act to insult or show disrespect to their masters, but as for paying an Englishman, whether gentleman or not, the compliment of a salute, it is far from them. At several other stations in India it is different; the Natives in many places, as a general rule, do salam a ‘sahib’ as they pass, but here, all classes, with the exception occasionally of a peon, pass by without taking the slightest notice of one. Now, considering we fail to govern the Natives properly, except by their own notions, we should exact those marks of respect which are due to their superiors and masters, and which, if we happened to be Seikhs, or Afghans, or their own countrymen, they dare not fail to pay.

The Ganges is falling fast, and will not probably rise any more this season; the bridge of boats has stood all the floods and behaved admirably. Now what can be done in one place can be done in another; next season it is to be hoped the Allahabad engineers will manage to keep their bridge also up during the monsoon. Very little is being done here; occasionally a Sikh regiment on its way down passes through, and we have small detachments of troops leaving constantly for the North West. The Kafaortallah Rajah's men have lately had a scrimmage with the rebels near Durriabad, killing 150 of them. Among the slain were found several of the 17th N. I.”—Englishman.

BUXAR, Sept. 13.—“Things are going on much as usual in this district, where the rebels have it pretty much their own way, and go on looting and destroying wherever there is anything to be got; in the interior of the district, which they have nearly all to themselves, establishing thannas, tuseldarees, &c., &c., and proclaiming themselves supreme for the nonce; our troops merely occupying the Trunk-road, Arrah, Buxar, Doonrong, and a few other places! The enemy are said to be in considerable force near the latter place, and between it and Jugdispore, and make frequent feints to draw our troops out, just to harass them, knowing this dreadful sun does more havoc among the men than they can inflict, for they never stay to fight, but bolt immediately they hear our troops are on the move. The latter, therefore, do not go out often, and it is well they do not, as they suffer dreadfully from the sun. A few days ago it was reported that Jugdispore was to be attacked immediately, but I believe it has been postponed (very wisely so) for another month; it would be perfect madness to send troops out now to the Jugdispore Jungle. We have another Seikh corps here now, the 20th Punjab Infantry, so are pretty strong in troops, though the European hospitals are pretty full. It is quite unsafe to move in the district away from the stations, and the road between this and Arrah (forty-five miles) has been closed for the last two months and upwards. River very low, not a drop of rain yet this month; everything dreadfully dear. Though nothing of great importance has taken place of late in our immediate neighbourhood, little occurrences do now and again happen, quite sufficient in themselves to show that the spirit of rebellion is assuredly not flagging in this part of the country. On the night of Tuesday, the 7th, a Mooktear and his brother, in charge of the Chowrah Indigo Factory, about six miles north of this place, were murdered by a small party of Sepoys, aided, as I understand, by the villagers. On the same night the Government Dak was plundered somewhere near Bhulleah, and the Dak man severely wounded. Day before yesterday three Fakeers came in here with their noses cut off; they had gone begging to the rebel camp at Serinja, when the rebels taking them for spies, it is said, killed three men and dismissed the others minus their noses. The poor wretches are now in the hospital at the Fort. You will perhaps remember that Serinja is six or seven miles south of Buxar. Yesterday the village of Bullooa was plundered by a body of rebels, reported to be twenty Sowars and a number of Sepoys. Bullooa is within three miles of the Fort, and not very much beyond rifle shot of the British camp, but separated from it by Thora-Mullah."—Englishman.

BARASETT.—The Deputy-Collectorship at Barasett will be converted into a full Collectorship, and the magistracy separated from it and placed under a first-class unvenanted magistrate.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS.—Instructions have been issued by Government that all ordinary personal property, live-stock, &c., of the rebels should be sold, and the actual price entered in the column of estimated value. Valuable property, jewels, &c., will be retained pending the orders of Government. The authorities in the North-Western Provinces have been directed by Government to collect all the Putwaree maps and records of the field measurement which were in progress when the disturbances broke out for the purpose of making new settlements in the disturbed districts. Orders are being issued for the illumination of all public buildings on the evening of the day on which the proclamation is to be published, and we trust that the residents of this town will follow the example set by the authorities. We also hope that the men-of-war now in the river will do the same, for the illumination of a ship will be quite a novelty to the natives, and to many others who have never been out of India. Government have decided upon the erection of a barrack for two companies of European soldiers, at the Cossipore Gun Foundry. Mr. Assistant Engineer Barnfather has been directed to undertake the duty, in subordination to the Executive Officer of the Barrackpore Division. The Government has increased one-third of the monthly stipend of the pensioners who assisted the Government officers in maintaining order in Hazareebaugh, when that station was reoccupied after the mutiny. Orders have been issued by Government that advances are to be made to the opium cultivators in the B-nares division, except in those localities actually disturbed for the season, 1858-59.—Englishman.

LIEUT.-COL. BAIRD SMITH, C.B., has been appointed Master of the Calcutta Mint.

YOUNG ARTILLERY OFFICERS.—The Governor-General has ruled that all young artillery officers should be sent to their destinations at the public expense, after having passed their drill and course of instruction at regimental head quarters.

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.—We learn that there will be a number of changes in the Railway Department, which it is said will shortly lose the valuable services of Major Goodwyn, the present consulting Engineer to Government, and that Captain Greathed, now at Allahabad, will succeed to the Acting Appointment until Major Strachey is relieved from the present responsible office of Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department. The salaries of two of the Railway staff here and at Howrah, Messrs. Stephenson and Campbell, are likely to be raised. They are both efficient officers, and well up to their work. The latter has most arduous out door duties, which he performs with untiring energy, and both are well deserving of increased emoluments, for to their offices no pensions are attached.

THE BALANCES.—The Calcutta Gazette of the 4th instant contained the following notice:—"Notification.—The Government being again in a position, by the receipt of regular returns from the several local governments, to resume the publication of quarterly statements of the cash balance in the Government treasuries throughout India, the following statement, showing the cash balance at the expiration of the fourth quarter of the official year 1857-58, is published for general information:—"

| Date.            | Amount of Balance.         |
| 30th April, 1858 | Co.'s rupees 13,55,18,567. |

C. H. LUSHINGTON,

Secretary to the Government of India."

That notice lands the Government in the following dilemma. Either they are borrowing at 5½ per cent. with thirteen millions lying idle, and are therefore bad financiers, or no such balance exists, and the statement is delusive; or the Government do not know how much they have or have not, and spend and borrow at haphazard. For ourselves, we believe the balance is a matter of paper account and estimated assets.—Friend of India.

THE CALCUTTA TRADES' ASSOCIATION have asked for an enactment making failure to execute a contract for which advances have been received a penal offence. There is no injustice in the request, as the native habit of pocketing advances, though regarded by the law as a civil offence, differs in nothing from embezzlement. Failing such a law, great sums might be made in Calcutta by any native firm which would insure advances. This is done on a small scale in the Mofussil. A respectable clerk will always guarantee the security of advances, receiving in return from the workmen two pice in the rupee, or three per cent. a month.

COLONEL FITZGERALD has again been removed from the command of the 27th M. N. I., and appointed to the 3rd M. European Regiment. Colonel Fischer has been appointed to command at Goruckpore. His rank as Brigadier dates back from the 24th June.

"GENERAL MICHEL, C.B., moved towards Rajghur, on the morning of the 15th September, and came on the rebels as they were marching to Beora. The attack at once commenced. The rebels first abandoned two guns; after a series of engagements, which they fought with great determination, their guns were, one after another, captured; and, about one P.M., they were in full flight, throwing away arms, kit, &c., and leaving the road strewn with limber carts and deserted baggage. The rebels suffered a complete defeat. They fled to the north, in which direction they may be met by Captain Mayne, who, with two hundred sabres, was at Ameerghur, thirteen miles north of Beora. Our loss has been trifling. The Third Cavalry did well. Lieutenant Shaw was struck down by the sun. General Michel halted at Beora on the 16th. The rebels had not crossed the Agra road, nor had they plundered Beora. The Neemuch force had not joined. The want of Cavalry enabled many to escape.

MR. A. MONEY, C.B., who has already been distinguished for his zealous services in Bahar Proper, has been transferred as Magistrate and Collector to Shahabad, where his energy and public spirit are likely to find a wider field in the course of the operations, that are on the eve of commencing, against Omar Sing and the rebel hordes, who occupy Jydeespoore, and a great portion of the Arrah district.

NAOUB, 11th September.—"Mr. Coles has this morning sent 1000 Irregular troops and two guns, under the command of Lullaie Sing, to intercept the rebel chiefs, Fuzund Ally and Badha Govind at Sheorajpore, which is only ten miles distant from this; and he himself has gone to Rutee, to have an interview with the commanding officer of the troops at that place, and it is not known when he will come back. It is rumoured here that Runmst Singh, the rebel chief, has died from the wounds he received when he fought near Sirhooneah, and some say that he has been captured by the Bewah Rajah's troops."

TOO MANY COOKS.—The Hurkaru asks very properly who is responsible for the safety of Calcutta. There is the President in Council, the Town Major, a Brigadier in command of the troops at Fort William, but not of the fort, a Major General, and a Brigadier appointed to command all the depots in and near Calcutta. The staff is as costly and as expensive as that belonging to the Regular Cavalry. Why is it maintained? The truth is every department in India wants thorough reorganisation, and we have no creative power at the head of the Government.

ORDE.—The Lucknow correspondent of the Bombay Gazette exposes the blunder made by the Governor-General in authorizing the advance of General Sir H. Grant to the relief of Maun Singh. Day by day that zemindar solicited aid against the Begum until at last the General advanced. On his arrival he found that Maun Singh could have held out for months. Had he been pushed to extremes he would again have joined the Begum, and alleged as an excuse that we left him to perish. He will not go into Lucknow, but remains at Shahgunj, and urges the most trivial excuses to avoid presenting himself to the Chief Commissioner. Maun Singh, he says, is a man quite unworthy of the confidence of the British Government, and should be left to his fate. He was merely the "secondary instrument of saving the lives of a few of our unfortunate countrymen, but made no attempt to save the lives of the residents at Fyzabad, whose plunder enriched him." The same correspondent says:—"The districts in our possession lie in a large ellipse, of which Lucknow and Durriabad are foci, the ends of one diameter being Cawnpore and Fyzabad. These cities are situated almost due east and west of each other. Our civil jurisdiction extends, on the average, twenty-five miles all round Lucknow, and not much less all round Durriabad, and our line of communication is uninterrupted from Cawnpore to Fyzabad, which latter borders upon the Goruckpore district in the North-West Provinces. To the south of this we have Beni Madho, the Nu-seerabad Brigade, the Gonda Rajah, Hunmunt Sing of Kale Kunkur, which I hear we are besieging, and that scoundrel Baboo Ram Bux of Dhoundea Khaira, with a few others. Their united numbers amount to about 45,000 men and thirty guns. To the north we have the Begum and her parliament, Hursahad of Khyrabad, Feroze Shah, Lukkur Shah, Namdar Khan, Goor Bux Sing, Hurdut Sing, and last, though not least, Khan Ali Khan, the Nazim Allah. The sum of their forces cannot be less than 60,000 men with fifty guns. I do not include among these Bulla Rao and the "sorry beast" his relation the Nana, the first of whom is at Byraitch to the north-east, with 6,000 men and seven guns, and the other, with what he may have, still further north-east in the fort of Churda. The jurisdiction of all these extends a long way towards and on the confines of the Shah-jehanpore district in Rohilkund, and towards the north beyond the Gogra to the foot of the hills." The position of the enemy thus detailed has been altered by the advance of Sir H. Grant and the re-occupation of Sultanpore.

A PLEASANT COUNTRY.—We extract from the Hindoo Patriot:—"Allen's Indian Mail ought to know that in Bengal at least, if not in other parts of India, there is not a single zemindar of any influence, a single indigo planter of long residence, or a single magistrate of great eminence, who has not murdered his man. Murder—downright murder—stark murder—plain honest killing by violence, applied for the purpose of separating body and soul. Now everybody knows this who knows anything of anything. And such a state of matters must necessarily have some effect upon the language of the community, even its conventional dialect." And the Patriot goes on to say that there are fifty other offences against law and morality of which "men in good life" are habitually guilty in India. "But the Indian world heeds them not; life simply cannot be carried on without bribing amlah, suborning perjurers, pressing labourers, breaking riyot heads, and burning houses." If the paragraph were not so utterly false, it would be a cruel condemnation of all Bengalees.—Friend of India.

BREACH OF FAITH.—A short time since the telegraphic authorities gave out that all officers in their department, who should pass an examination showing their capability to transmit twenty-five words a minute, should receive an addition to their salaries of fourteen rupees a month. The money has never been paid, and when they petitioned Sir W. O'Shaughnessy, he told them that if they were discontented with their pay, they might resign. We see an advertisement in the Government Gazette "asking for the services in the Telegraph Department of well-educated youths." Under such circumstances we hope the youths will not be forthcoming.

OJJAİN.—On the morning of the 22nd August, two hundred and ten sabres of the 3rd Irregulars, 350 of H.M.'s 92nd Highlanders, 400 of H.M.'s 19th and two guns marched on Ojjaın. Some insurgents has assembled near that town. The Neemuch force has been reinforced from Mhow by two guns of the Bengal Artillery, one squadron of the 17th Lancers, two hundred and fifty European Infantry, five hundred of the 4th Rifles, and one hundred and fifty of H.M.'s 19th.

MR. SCHLAGENTWEIT.—A letter written from the borders of Tibet informs us, we are sorry to say, of there being no doubt of the murder of the enterprising and scientific traveller, Mr. Adolph Schlagentweit. This, it now appears, took place at the end of the past or beginning of the present year. It has, however, only become recently known, at least publicly so in this country, though it would appear to have been communicated to the friends of the deceased gentleman in Germany, so far back as April last, his death having been sent to Europe from Lahore, where it was known through official letters received from Cashmere. "Why," asks our correspondent, "was this not made known to the public generally?" Our present information is very scanty, but is to the effect that Mr. Schlagentweit was murdered by a plundering party of Khokund people, who suspected that he was connected with their enemies, the Chinese. None of Mr. S.'s instruments or papers have yet been discovered, though people have been sent in search of them, and some have, it is supposed, been taken by servants of the Cashmere route.

THE FUTTLE CURREAM.—The Englishman notices a very flagrant attempt to scuttle the Futtle Curream. The Futtle Curream was owned by Ishmaljee Haji Cassem and mortgaged to Hadji Zichariah and Co. The name of the captain was Jeffereys. The last voyage of the ship was from Mauritius to Calcutta. At Mauritius she shipped some boxes of treasure. The treasure was relanded, paid into the branch Oriental Bank, and a bill obtained for it. When the ship was off Gnsper Light it was ascertained that the ship had suddenly become full of water, and it was discovered that she had been scuttled by the Nacodah and his assistant, who had managed to construct unknown to the captain a private entry into the hold. The ship was scuttled for the sake of the treasure, which would of course be supposed to have sunk, and the insurance. The vessel was insured for Rs. 50,000.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL assembled as usual on Saturday, Sept. 4th. The Governor General has assented to the Bill providing for the debts of the Nabob of the Carnatic, to the Alluvion Bill, and to the Bill by which Tanjore is placed under the laws of the Presidency of Fort St. George. Mr. Peacock presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for simplifying the procedure of the Civil Courts. He then proposed the first reading of the Bill to amend Act XIX. of 1847 the Native Articles of War. The Bill was the fruit of the conjoined labours of Lord Canning and Sir Colin Campbell. It proposes that Commanding Officers shall be able to dismiss native officers, or to reduce them to the ranks without the sentence of a Court Martial, legalises the sentence of transportation for short terms, and provides that Commanding Officers may award extra drill for an unlimited period or solitary confinement for seven days or less, also without the sentence of a Court Martial. The Bill also proposes that when a soldier shall have been illegally absent from duty for more than fifteen days, a Court of Inquiry is to assemble and determine whether the soldier has been merely absent from duty, or whether he has deserted.

ANOTHER CHEAP PAPER is about to start in Calcutta to be called The Parliament, and to be published twice a week, at two rupees a month, we take the following paragraph from its prospectus:—"Our 'policy' will be that of the earliest Indian newspaper, 'Open to all parties, but influenced by none'; our motto 'Omnibus.' It will be our aim to advocate the interests of the general public, irrespective of class, section, or rank; to act in the literary theatre of India the part which a Parliament has to perform in the political world; to bestow due attention on all who may honour us with their representation. We aspire, in fact, to be no more or less than a people's paper; and by this standard we are prepared to stand or fall."

A DISTURBED DISTRICT.—Native reports affirm, that Burgose Sing of Balaya, having got together 7000 men and four guns, is spreading disorder throughout the country on the other side of the Jumna, making attacks on Jaloun, &c., and has burnt many villages. A body of about 1000 budmashes, consisting of 200 Sepoys, Zenindars, and all kinds of rabble, with and without horses, bearing cudgels, swords, spears, and all kinds of weapons, are at a place called Choorkee, twelve or thirteen miles from Calpee. Cashee Nath, a manager of the late Ranee of Jhansi, has some men with him, and is accompanied by Dais Puth, brother of the Raja of Chirkaree, against whom he has rebelled, having some 1200 men with him. The Karindah of Narain Rao and Madho Rao of Chiterkote against whom he has rebelled, having previously stood in opposition to our Government, has with him about 7,000 men, but no guns. Lalpooree Goosall, an adherent of the Nana, with about 800 men, keeps the country between Bhadais and Bhara in disorder, he is accompanied by Roop Sing, Raja of Baharra, a distinguished budmash. "Thus are matters," says our informant, "carried on, on the other side of the Jumna, where all these villains ravage and plunder, and commit every sort of mischief, keeping the country in confusion and disorder." At Narpur, Raja Bhowur of that place keeps up the game of sedition and rebellion in that quarter.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 15.—The railway was opened this morning to Cawnpore. It was expected that the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief, with their staff, would start from the platform on the Esplanade, but they were not to be seen at the terminus when the train started. It is said they left by special train from the railway station at Kuchpoorwah. Whether this be so, or not, I cannot tell; nor could the fact, however certified, be more interesting to the public than the simple announcement that the railway has been opened for 127 miles in the North-West Provinces. More than eighty miles have been laid down, since December, 1857. Let us hope that its further progress will be at least as rapid, and that by the 15th September, 1859, communication by rail may be established with Agra. The long-expected convoy of merchant boats from Agra has not yet arrived, though it is just a month since it commenced its downward progress. The only opposition of which we have heard was in the Etawah District; but it had got safely through its difficulties early this month, and was to have been at Calpee on the 6th September. I know not if its further progress has been stopped there through fear of rebels, or for the purpose of increasing the convoy by the addition of boats laden with the produce of Bundelcund. Whatever be the cause the result is most deplorable. The accounts from down country are most melancholy. Wheat has risen to an unprecedented price; starvation threatens the people; indeed cases of it have perhaps already occurred; the rain which is expected just before harvest time has not come down, and the bunyars are growing impatient, and talk of higher rates. Look at the Benares and Ghazepore Prices Current, and they will tell you the same sorrowful tale. Ask the cause, and you will be told that the Bundelcund corn trade has ceased in consequence of the stoppage of the river communication.—Delhi Gazette.

LUCKNOW, Sept. 15th.—"General Grant is still at Sultanpoor, though detachments are frequently sent out by him into the neighbouring country to intercept or cut off any body of rebels which may be hovering about in that direction. Communication is open between Sultanpoor and Pertabgurh, though no civil officer has yet gone to the latter station. There is but little left to be done in settling the entire Fyzabad Division, which consists of the districts of Sultanpoor, Fyzabad, and Salone. Benee Mudho is said to be at Sunkerpoor with 10,000 men. This is the force which he brought to the assistance of the Sultanpoor rebels, and which he subsequently withdrew on his retreat. The Begum is said to have only 5,000 men with her at Banded, but has sent 1,800 and some guns across the Gogra, it is thought, with the intention of attacking Nawabgunj Barabunki. The 23rd Fusiliers, or rather, half the regiment with some artillery were sent to strengthen this station, and we may therefore anticipate no evil result from any attack. On the contrary it is more than likely that if the rebels approach too close, they will have to sustain an attack from our side. Some say it was the intention of Munnoo Khan to take the lead in the proposed attack on Nawabgunj. Sundeela, as I have before mentioned, has been threatened; but a police reinforcement has gone thither from Lucknow; and it is hoped that Captain Dawson will be able to repel any attack that may be made. People are of opinion that the late attack on Birwa would have been quite successful if Captain Dawson had not ordered the retreat. The enemy, it is said, had deserted the batteries, and our fellows had only to push on to take possession of the fort. It is a pity that Captain Dawson should have supposed that he would have lost more men than the few that had already fallen, and that this should have caused him to withdraw his men. The enemy have, of course, re-occupied the fortress, and have since had a reinforcement of seven hundred men, under one Namdar Khan. As Birwa is only eight miles from Sundeela, it is surprising that this reinforcement was allowed to come into the fort without any opposition from our side. Mr. Kavanagh has been succeeded by Capt. Alex. Orr, and it is hoped that this officer will display as much energy as his predecessor. Mr. Kavanagh, I am glad to say, is fast recovering from his wound; and it is supposed he will accompany Major Barrow, who is to be Commissioner of the Baraitch division, when the troops cross the Gogra. This is the only division where we have not yet established our authority, which is more or less felt in every other part of the Province. Khan Ali Khan of Bareilly is said to be at Sunkerpoor near Mahomdee, with 10,000 men; but has shown no signs of life for a long time. He will no doubt aid the Begum when we begin our cold weather campaign. Every preparation is being made to carry out this campaign with effect. Information from the civil officers is being collected in respect to the forts, roads, serais, encamping grounds, bazaars, &c.; the Commissariat have received instructions to have 3,000 carts in readiness beyond the resources already at command; and every active measure is being taken to complete the preliminary arrangements, so that we may reasonably hope to see matters carried on without any mistakes and inconveniences, which so frequently mar the glories of a campaign.

FREIGHTS.

To London, 15s. to £2. 10s. To Liverpool, £2 to £1. 17s. 6d.
Exports (Calcutta, September 22).—With reference to commercial intelligence, excepting Rau Silk and Sugar, the position of the market at home is much about the same as before. With the rise of the rivers, which commences generally in the middle of June, a superabundant supply of produce from all countries gets into our market, which not only supplies our immediate wants, but provides for the requirements of the next three or four months, and keeps on a steady stock. It is this stock that we have not at present in the market; still the arrivals from the districts and present stocks are by no means scanty. According to the present state of the market, our demands do not exceed the supplies, and hence a steady and safe exportation with firmness, and in some instances an advance on rates. The large shipments of Linsed, Rape Seed, Jute and Hides, which we observe in the Custom House daily returns are of previous purchases, when arrivals were rather more free.

IMPORTS. (Calcutta, Sept. 22).—Mule Twist.—Immediately after the departure of the last mail on the 8th instant there was great activity in our market, and prices of all counts had advanced, specially Nos. 40s. and 60s. Stocks in first hands have reduced to about bales 250, and in second hands 950 to 1,000. Some shipments which had lately been made to the Coromandel Coast by the Marwarrees, have been recalled by them, owing to the very encouraging state of our market, and about bales 100 of No. 40 have been returned and sold at Rs. 8-12 to 3-14 per bundle of 6lb. they have immediately been retailed in the bazaar at a further profit to the retailers of 5 to 10 per cent. Since last week the market has been rather slack, owing to the absence of buyers consequent on the approaching native general holidays. Coloured Yarns.—The demand for both German and Red dye has not been very great, and notwithstanding light stocks in both first and second hands, buyers can scarcely be found at our last quotations. Orange and Green.—Stocks in first hands are very light; but they are both saleable at our quotations. A sale of bales 9 Green Nos. 40 and 50 is reported at 14 ans. per lb. Chintz and Prints.—Fast colours and fancy styles are only saleable at former prices. Common lencies, red and yellow, are dull, and at reduced prices 2 to 4 ans. per piece. Turkey Red and other Coloured Cottons.—Turkey Red of heavier make are in limited demand, but Cambric is rather neglected, and no transactions reported. Turkey Red Muslins are in local inquiry only, and sales of pieces 1,000 are reported at Rs. 5-2. Other colours are taken to a very limited extent at about former prices. Velvet has been in good demand at improved price. Shirtings.—Grey 39 and 40 inches. After the departure of the last mail, the heavier cloths had gone down in price temporarily, but they have again recovered to our former quotations. The market has shown less animation for all qualities, owing to large stocks having accumulated in second hands who are also obliged to clear their recent purchases previous to the approaching holidays. Madapolams.—Grey 32 inches continue in good request, and stocks being light, maintain former prices. Reported sales are pieces 9,600 at Co.'s Rs. 2-3 to 2-5 per piece. Jacquets.—Grey 38 to 40 inches, low and medium qualities continue saleable at full former prices. Reported sales are pieces 10,550 at Rs. 2 to 2-14, and pieces 3,150 of 45 inches at Rs. 2-14 to 3-0-6 per piece. White low and medium qualities are in good demand for the approaching holidays at rather better prices.

THE NEILGHERRY HILL TRIBES.

To those curious concerning the supposed aborigines of the Neilgherry Hills, an event of some interest has occurred within the past week; living in seclusion amid their native mountains, comparatively little is known of them, or of their mode of life. These tribes consist of Todas, Burghers, Kotars, and Koorumbers, and are seldom met with in any number together. But for some time past the Tahsildar of Ootacamund has been collecting them in as large bodies as possible, in order that they might be presented to Lord Harris, at his residence in Ootacamund; as the preparations were completed on Wednesday, the 28th July, about forty Toda men, with a host of their women and children, together with a large number of Burghers, Kotars, and Koorumbers, assembled at Fern Hill, to pay their respects to his Lordship, who, however, owing to indisposition, was unable to receive them; they were in consequence met by the staff and some ladies of the house, who put several questions to them, particularly to the Todas, regarding their probable number, and inquiring as to their welfare, pursuits, and other points which suggested themselves at the time.

Several of the Toda women then danced and sang for the entertainment of those assembled, and afforded considerable amusement from the novelty of their proceedings.

After some further interrogation, the whole body were dismissed, with a present of Rs. 100 to be distributed amongst them, and this sent them home far more delighted with the rupees than disappointed at not having seen the Governor. The Tahsildar also was rewarded for the part he performed, in getting so many of these singular people to meet at an appointed time, probably a difficult task, as they are so unaccustomed to anything like intercourse with Europeans.

We have endeavoured to secure fuller details of this event, but have not been so successful as we could have desired. It is not easy to glean reliable information upon matters so little understood, and regarding tribes so little known as these apparently are. It may not therefore be uninteresting to our readers if we quote some details relating to the Todas, from a little book entitled "The Tribes of the Neilgherries," which is now before us; but our space will not permit us to notice the other tribes: "the most numerous are the Badagas, numbering about 1,500 souls, and occupying 300 villages and hamlets. The name signifies 'people of the North,' from the greater part of them having come to the hills from the Mysore country. They are called by the Todas 'May (father-in-law) a kind of honorary title, not intended to imply any relationship."

"There are five different races, all of whom have from time out of mind, and perhaps for centuries past, inhabited the table land and slopes of these hills. They are Todas, Kurumbers, Kotars, Badagas, and Irulas. Those last named, however, cannot, very strictly speaking, be called a hill-tribe, partly because they reside so low down, and partly also because their language differs from that of the rest; being a dialect of Tamill, while the rest speak each a dialect of Canarese. They are, however, likewise quite distinct from the people of the plains.

"The most remarkable and interesting of the hill-tribes, from their peculiar personal appearance, isolated customs, and primitive form of religion, are the Todas, whose progenitors, as some of them say, were created on the hills. This, and the circumstance of their claiming to be lords of the soil, may have given ground for the conclusion arrived at by some that they are the aborigines of the Neilgherries.

"The Todas have very justly, attracted large share of attention from European travellers and men of scientific pursuits; but inability to hold converse with them, and an imperfect knowledge of their habits, have led to the formation of widely antagonistic opinions as to their origin. Some, ascribing hypothetically the Cairns and Kromlecks which stud the hills in all directions to the Todas, as the work of their early ancestors, have put them down as descended from the old Scythians. Others, in view of their personal features, but especially their high aquiline nose, have supposed their forefathers to have been a colony of Roman settlers. There are those, again, who have thought them to be Jews, merely on the supposition that idol worship is not practised amongst them. But when calmly considered, it will be found that neither their language nor their religion justifies any of these conclusions. * * * * * At what period the Todas first came to and settled upon the Neilgherries, we have no means of ascertaining; for they have no literature, nor any inscriptions, and such of their traditions as I have hitherto heard them mention afford no clue whatever by which this mystery can be unravelled. From their legends, and a particular word contained in their language, I am led to think that prior to migrating to these Hills they must perhaps for centuries have inhabited a range lying to the north-east in the direction of Hassanoor, beyond the Gazelhutty pass. Part of the tribe appears to have settled in a northerly direction, near Collegal, for I am frequently pressed to go and visit them and bring back intelligence respecting their condition in life; prosperity with the Todas, as in patriarchal times, consisting in the number and extent of their herds.

"The Todas are divided into five distinct classes, known by the names, Peiky, Pekhan, Kuttan, Kenna, and Tody, of which the first is regarded as the most aristocratic. These classes do not even intermarry with each other, and can therefore never lose their distinctive characteristics. This circumstance, taken in connection with the degenerating custom of polyandry which prevails amongst them, may account for the small number of children founded into families.

"It is rarely that there are more than two or three children, and it is not at all an uncommon thing to find only a single child, while many families have none at all. This must eventually lead to the extinction of the tribe altogether, and probably the time is not far distant, when the Todas, whose members for years past have been gradually declining, will have passed away; and the mysterious interest which now so generally attaches to them be felt only by the octogenarian and the antiquarian. One thing alone can ward off this result, and that is, a hearty reception of the Gospel, with all its purifying and elevating effects upon the life and habits of those who embrace it in its fulness, and carry its precepts into daily practice.

"The custom of polyandry, or that of a woman marrying a plurality of husbands, which we have said prevails among this tribe, is somewhat peculiar. A Toda woman becomes the wife of all the brothers of the family to which she unites herself; and any children she may have are apportioned to her husbands according to seniority, the eldest of the brothers being considered the father of the first child, and so on. The necessary consequence of this state of things is that there is little or no real sympathy between father and child.

"The Todas are considered by the other hill tribes to be the lords of the soil, and are accordingly paid a tribute in kind by them in acknowledgment of this right. At the present time, however, there is a great disposition on the part of the Badagas to disallow their claims, and were it not for the hold which the Todas have upon them by the pretended use of witchcraft, they would doubtless refuse payment of these accustomed tributes.

"The primitive habits of the Todas and open countenance of their women have led Europeans to believe that, in social life, they are as chaste as they are simple. A learned German author, taking his views from English works respecting this tribe, has gone so far as to say that missionary interference is much to be deprecated, as tending to induce the Todas to cast off their patriarchal habits, and to corrupt their innocence! my own intercourse with them has obliged me to form a very different opinion of their moral character. Partly owing to the looseness of the marriage tie, as before described, but chiefly from want of a pure standard of religion and morals to guide them, immorality prevails amongst the Todas to a lamentable extent. Adultery is common, and is only punished when the female happens to be the wife or daughter of an influential man. I was once allowed to be present at a tribunal composed of fifty Todas, formed for the trial of two culprits of this kind, the woman being the daughter of a head-man. Her offence was viewed as a very trivial one, and the man was discharged with a fine of three buffaloes. The women are very bold and indelicate in their demeanour towards strangers and very unfaithful to their husbands.

"The language of the Todas is a dialect of Canarese, and may be learnt without much difficulty by any person well acquainted with that tongue. What has led Europeans to suppose that they speak a language peculiar to themselves, is their deep posetoral pronunciation—a pronunciation apparently resulting from ceaseless association with their buffaloes, by which they are surrounded day and night. In their songs the most unmelodious sounds occur,—better fitted to scare away a wild beast than to lull a person to slumber, for which purpose they are generally sung. Unlike those of the hill tribes they are unusually devoid of any signification, or if they have any meaning at all, they refer merely to events of recent occurrence. I have collected about five or six thousand words, and find that nearly three-fourths of them also exist in the dialects of the other races, but so much altered in pronunciation as to appear to belong to quite a different tongue; that their language is very uncultivated, is manifest from the fact that, in most of their verbs, they have only the present tense, the past and future tenses being expressed by the aid of adverbs.

"The Todas divide the Neilgherries into four districts; namely, Malor (mountainous district), extending from the Orange Valley to the Mukurty Peak; Purgoor, which may mean the district of Feringhoes or Europeans, for they have a tradition that ages ago a small colony of Roman Catholics resided near the Avalanche; Karor (district of calves), reaching from Kaity to the Koondee River to the east of the avalanche, and included within the limits of the Malabar Collectorate. For the tract between the avalanche and Sispara, they have no general name.

"According to a tradition which the Todas have preserved, they once had a king and queen reigning over them, but all that they now know about them is, that they were subdued and deprived of their authority by one of the Rajahs of the house of Oomatoor, who was driven to the hills by his rival, an ancestor of the present Rajah of Mysore, and took possession of the tract lying between the Orange Valley and Ootacamund, called by the Balagas 'Tudanand.' The usurper built a fort named Malkote, near Kalhatty, the ruins of which still exist, and prove that it must have been a comparatively strong place. I do not think the present Toda population, including those who have settled in the Nellamboor country, can exceed a thousand souls. * * * * * If it be now asked who are the Todas? and whence did they originally come to these hills? I am obliged to answer 'I cannot tell.' I am satisfied that they are not the aborigines of the Neilgherries, though it is probable that for eight centuries they have resided

On the 13th, news came from Candahar to the effect that Sooltan Ahmed Jan had secretly sent a vakeel to Futteh Mahomed Khan and Jelaloodeen Khan, to tell them not to give up Candahar to any one; adding, that if they were attacked, he would send help from Herat.

Jelalooddeen Khan had agreed to the proposal of Sooltan Ahmed Jan; but his brother had, when the letter left, not given any reply.

On the 16th, again intelligence was brought from Candahar. Jelalooddeen Khan had left Candahar for Ghirishk, on the road to Herat, taking with him 25,000 rupees, many tents, his bride, arms, &c. Futteh Mahomed Khan had endeavoured to dissuade him, but to no purpose.

The rest of the letter is devoid of any intelligence of general interest.—Lahore Chronicle.

HERAT.—We hear that the Suddoozies and Baruckzies have been at it again in Herat;—that everlasting bone of contention! It seems a Shahzada, named Mohammed Kezza, has been trying to get hold of the place by stratagem, much in the same way that his brother Yusuf did three years ago; but has failed. Lettres de cachet, by last advices, were being freely served amongst the legitimist party. Some Russian gentleman is also said to have appeared there suddenly, on a "purely scientific" excursion. We are sorry to hear it, because in the end, he will be sure to be obliged to blow his own brains out, like poor Vickovitch, who (if we remember rightly) came to Cabul for "commercial" purposes.—Delhi Gazette.

CEYLON.

BRICKMAKING.—The Ceylon Observer contains an account of some brickmaking works recently visited by Sir Henry Ward. The works, which turn out about 20,000 bricks a day, are only six miles from Colombo. The clay for brickmaking is prepared by elephants. The wild and tame work together, and both attempt to shirk their work by endeavouring to put their feet in old footprints, instead of in the soft, tenacious, untrodden mud.

THE CHOLERA is raging at Matura, in Ceylon. It broke out about the 28th August, when the Malabar pilgrims began to make their appearance on their way back from Katragam. At Jaffna there have been some cases; and forty-seven persons from the Chavagachery district who were returning from a pilgrimage to Cadergamer, on the coast, died on the road, from cholera, on their way back to their villages.—Colombo Observer.

THE REVENUE REPORT of Ceylon for 1857 has been published, and exhibits a remarkable state of prosperity. The revenue for 1857 amounted to £578,000, showing an increase of £83,565 in the year 1856, and of nearly 50 per cent. since Sir H. Ward assumed the Government. The item of revenue which exhibited the greatest increase was the pearl fishery, the increase being £20,300. The increase on the sale of Government property, weights and measures, salt, &c., was £13,800, and the increase derived from extending licenses to arrack sellers was £12,000. These returns are very remarkable, when we remember the comparatively small extent of Ceylon.

Depart. on the 29th inst.:

R. J. H. BIRCH, Colonel, with the Govr.-Genl.

No. 617.

From the Adj.-Gen. of the Army, to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Depart., with the Gov.-Gen.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction of H. E. the C.-in-C., to forward for the information of the Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. a report from Maj.-Gen. Sir H. Rose, K.C.B., late comdg. the Central India force, of the successful operations of his force, dated the 14th May last, but which only reached Army Hd. Qrs. on the 4th inst.

W. MATHEW, Lieut.-Col.,
Adj.-Gen. of the Army.

Hd. Qrs., Allahabad, 29th July, 1858,

From Maj.-Gen. Sir Hugh Rose, K.C.B., comdg. Central India field force, to Maj.-Gen. Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Camp Goolowlee, 24th May, 1858.

SIR,—I have the honour to report to you, for the information of H.E. the C.-in-C., that the approach of Brigdr. Smith's Brig. from Rajpootanah to Goonah having secured Jhansi from attack by Kotah and Bundelcund rebels, I recalled Lieut.-Col. Lowth, comdg. H.M.'s 86th Regt., whom I had detached with a column to watch the road from Jhansi to Goonah, and I marched with the 1st brig. of my force from Jhansi on the 25th ult. on Calpee.

I was still without the wing of the 3rd B.I.C., which I had sent to Goonah to reinforce the right wing of H.M.'s 71st Highland L.I., on their march to join me; as, encumbered with a very large convoy of treasure and all sorts of stores, they had to cross the Sind river at a very difficult ghat, and I was not certain that they might not be exposed to a treacherous attack from the late Chandairee Garrison and other Bundelas, who, as already reported, had made an incursion on the Jhansi and Goonah road, acting, it was clear, in concert with the Kotah rebels to the north of the Indore and Goonah road.

I left at Jhansi for its garrison the force forming part of the 2nd Brig. detailed in the margin.* I left also Brig. Steuart, with the remainder of his brig., with orders to bring up to me the 71st Regt. and two troops of the 3rd By. L. C.

I joined Maj. Gall's force at Pooch, sixteen miles from Koonch, on the 1st May. I had the honour to report on the 17th inst. the movements of this officer's moveable column, as well as those of Maj. Orr's field force.

I received information from Sir Robert Hamilton and Maj. Gall, whom I had detached along the road from Jhansi to Calpee with a flying column to watch the enemy, and obtain information of their movements, that the Sepoy garrison of Calpee, of all arms, reinforced by five hundred Velaities, under the Ranees of Jhansi, cavalry from Kotah, and guns, and troops from disaffected Rajahs, the whole under the command of Tantea Topee, had occupied Koonch, and thrown up entrenchments which they had armed to defend the roads to the town from Jhansi, and that they were determined to make a vigorous opposition at Koonch to my advance against Calpee. All the accounts agreed that the rebels were strong in cavalry, mutineers of Bengal Reg. and Irreg. Cav.

Koonch is an open town; but it is difficult to attack, because it is surrounded by woods, gardens, and temples, with high walls round them, every one of which is a defence.

I had directed Maj. Orr to do his utmost to prevent the Rajahs of Banpore and Shagur and any body of rebels crossing the Betwa and doubling back southwards. The two Rajahs, for the purpose of carrying out this very manœuvre, separated from the rebels at Koonch, and drove the troops of the Rajah of Goorserai, who held Kotra, commanding a ford across the Betwa, to the south bank of the river.

Maj. Orr crossed the Betwa, engaged the Rajahs, drove them from their position at Kotra, and took one of their guns; but he states that it was impossible to cut off the Rajahs, who, whilst Maj. Orr was attacking one part of their force, retired precipitately with the remainder some distance down the river, where they crossed at a ford and took the road southwards, carriages and supplies being furnished them by the treacherous Rajah of Jignee. Maj. Orr, by my direction, marched to Koonch.

As nothing puts the rebels out so much as turning their flank or defences, and as the excessive heat of the day rendered it advisable that I should not undertake a long operation against Koonch, much less a siege, I made a flank march with my whole force to the north-west; my left, the 1st Brig., resting its left flank on the village of Nagupoor; my centre, the 2nd Brig., under Brigd. Steuart, was in the village of Chomair; my right, Maj. Orr's force, in front of the village of Oomree.

This position threatened seriously the enemy's line of retreat from Koonch to Calpee; and it exposed the north-west of the town, which was not protected by entrenchments, to attack.

I gave the order that, as soon as the cols. had taken up the positions which I have mentioned, they were to advance against the town, and each effect a lodgment in it.

When we came within sight of Koonch, we perceived videttes and strong picquets of the enemy's cav. outside the wood. They conformed to our flank movement, and posted themselves nearly opposite to Nagupoor.

A few rounds of shrapnel from Capt. Lightfoot's guns emptied some of their saddles, and they disappeared into the wood. The rebel inf. now showed in force behind a long wall to our front, and in the wood to the left of it.

I had marched the 1st Brig. a distance of fourteen miles from Loharee that morning, for the purpose of surprising the enemy by the flank movement, and not giving them time to alter their plan of defence. To rest and refresh the men I ordered their dinners to be cooked for them, and in the meantime battered the wall with the two 12-prs. and the 8-inch howitz.

The half-troop of H.A. advancing diagonally to their left, shelled the inf. to the left of the wall; the enemy in return shelled the troop and the siege guns from a battery to our right. Two of our guns were turned on the battery, and soon silenced it.

Lieut.-Col. Gall, H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., galloped gallantly into the wood to reconnoitre; the enemy, although he was in easy musket range of them, did not fire at him, because the shelling from the H.A. had caused confusion in their ranks. He ascertained that the inf. to the left had retreated further into the wood, having in their rear a large body of cav.; that the siege guns had driven the enemy from the cover of the wall, but that some way in rear of it was posted a large body of inf., with elephants.

I determined to drive the enemy out of the wood, gardens, and temples, which surround Koonch, and then to storm the town, including a dilapidated mud fort on a rising ground, a strong position, which was opposite to the right of the 1st Brig.

Once in possession of this position in the town, the enemy on our left and in our front would be cut off from the rest of their force in the entrenchments on our right, which would be forced to retreat to the plain on the other side of the town, pressed by the 2nd Brig. and Maj. Orr's Force, the 1st Brig. passing through the town, and pressing the enemy with whom they had been engaged.

I effected this operation by throwing the left wing of H.M.'s 86th Regt., under Maj. Stuart, and the whole of the 25th B.N.I., under Lieut.-Col. Robertson, into skirmishing order, the 86th on the left, the 25th on the right, their flanks supported by the half troop H.A., and a troop of H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., and Capt. Ommaney's batt., and two troops of H.M.'s 14th Dragns. I left Capt. Woolcombe's battery, one troop 14th Lt. Dragns., and the right wing 86th Regt., in a second line in reserve, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Lowth. The rapidity and precision with which this formation was simultaneously made must have surprised the Sepoys. The 25th skirmishers charged into the wood, temples, and walled gardens, and occupied them, under a fire of musketry and artillery from the batt. on our right, which re-opened its fire, and, after the guns of the R.A., under Capt. Field, had effectually cannonaded the houses in the streets of Koonch in their front, took them also.

I expressed to Lieut.-Col. Robertson and the 25th on the ground my approbation of the gallantry with which they had gained this important position.

The 86th Regt., covered by the three H. A. guns, under Capt. Lightfoot, who throughout the day made the most of their arm, and the troop 14th Lt. Dragns., made a circuit to their left, took all the obstacles to their front, and then bringing their left shoulders forward, advanced, despite of artillery and musketry fire, through the whole north part of the town, and took the fort. The manner in which the 86th, ably led by Maj. Stuart, performed this movement, which completed the cutting of the enemy's line in two, adds another claim to the obligations I owe this regt. for their very distinguished conduct on all occasions in the field.

Just as the 86th and myself, with the 25th, were about to enter the town, Brigdr. Stuart, comdg. the 1st Brig., observing that a large number of rebel inf., strongly posted in cultivated ground, threatened the right of the line of attack of his brig., he moved up Capt. Field's Batt., with Capt. Thompson and Gordon's troops of H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., and a troop of the 3rd Regt. Hyderabad Cav. to dislodge them. The enemy held the position obstinately, and it was not until a portion of the inf. of the 2nd Brig. moved down on them from another direction that they retreated, when Capt. Gordon, whom I beg to recommend to H.E. for his conduct on this occasion, with his troop and the cav. above mentioned, charged and broke the mass, cutting up several of them; tops of trees favoured the escape of the remainder.

The 2nd Brig., under Brigdr. Stuart, owing to some misconception on his part, did not effect a lodgment in the town, but, moving round the south of it, their art. and cav. joined in the pursuit.

* Hd. Qrs. Wing 3rd Europ. Regt.; 8 Cos. 24th By. N.I.; 100 Hyderabad Cav.; 3 guns late Bhopal Art.; 4 Co. By. Sappers and Miners.

I have the honour to enclose a copy of Maj. Orr's report, which shows that he did his utmost to carry out my orders.

The enemy's line of defence being now cut in two, and their right completely turned, they retired in masses from Koonch to the extensive plains intersected by heavy ploughed land stretching towards Orni and Calpee, forming an irregular and very long line, five or six deep in some places, covered by skirmishers at close distances, who, at intervals, were in groups of small masses, a mode of skirmishing peculiar to Indians: these groups act as a sort of bastions to the line of skirmishers.

The 1st Brig. made their way through the town as quickly as its narrow and winding streets would allow them, and searched the plains in pursuit of the enemy.

But the inf. had already suffered so much during the morning's sun, twelve men of the weak wing of H.M. 71st having died from sunstroke, that it would have been a heartless and imprudent sacrifice of invaluable inf. to pursue with that arm. They were, therefore, halted, as well as the inf. of the 2nd Brig., and Maj. Orr's force, which had advanced through the wood, round the town to the plains.

The cav. of both brig. and of Maj. Orr's force (except a party which I had left to watch the Jaloun road and my rear), one troop of H. A., Capt. Field's guns, and the four guns of No. 18 Lt. Field Batt., went in pursuit.

If on the one hand the enemy had retired from Koonch with too great precipitation, on the other it is fair to say that they commenced their retreat across the plain with resolution and intelligence. The line of skirmishers fought well to protect the retreat of the main body, observing the rules of Lt. Inf. drill. When charged, they threw aside their muskets and fought desperately with their swords.

The pursuit was commenced by Capt. McMahon's squad, and Blyth's troop of H. M.'s Lt. Dragns., charging, the first the right, and the latter the left of the enemy's skirmishers.

A piece of very heavy plough caused a check in the pace, under a heavy fire, of Capt. McMahon's squad; but the heavy ground was not broad, the squad got through it, Capt. McMahon leading the way, and cut to pieces the enemy, who fought fiercely to the last. I beg to recommend him for his gallant conduct and his unvarying zeal and attention to his duties.

On the centre, the H. A. opened a hot fire on, and the cav. charged the skirmishers. The enemy now threw back the extreme right to their skirmishers, so as to enfilade our line of pursuit. I directed Capt. Prettyjohn to form line in the left charge, and cut off the enfilading skirmishers, which he did effectually. This officer, on the horses of his own troop being knocked up, placed himself with well-timed zeal at the head of a troop with fresh horses which was without an officer, and continued the pursuit with them to the end. I beg to submit his name to the favourable consideration of H. E., as well as the names of Capt. Blyth, H. M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., and Capt. Abbott, Comdg. 3rd Regt. Hyderabad Cav., who each very gallantly charged and captured a gun from the retreating enemy, under a heavy fire.

In the course of the pursuit more guns and ammunition were captured by the cav.

Capt. Field, with the four 9-pr. guns of Capt. Ommaney's Batt. of R.A., notwithstanding the heavy plough he had frequently to go over, and the weight of his guns, continued to turn them to good account, and kept up well with them to the close of the pursuit.

The greater part of the enemy's line of skirmishers being killed, the remainder driven in, and the rebel artillery captured, the main body—the first line got into confusion—lost their nerve, and crowded into the road to Calpee, a long and helpless column of runaways. The H. A. and cav. were now so beat by sun and fatigue that they were reduced to a walk; the guns were only able to rake the column in its depth with round shot and shell, but could not approach sufficiently close to give it grape. The cav., on their part, had only strength to reach the numerous stragglers who could not keep up with the enemy's main body. On reaching some wood and broken ground about a village, seven or eight miles from Koonch, profiting by this cover, they sought safety from attack by breaking into scattered night across the country.

The scorching rays of the sun, and the pace at which they retreated, told even on the Sepoys; several fell dead on the road, struck by apoplexy; many, exhausted, threw away their arms; and whilst others, to quench their thirst, rushed to the wells, regardless of our cav. that were upon them.

But the sun, fatigue, and scarcity of water told still more on my art. and cav., a great part of whom were Europeans, and had been marching or engaged for sixteen hours. The comdg. officers of art. and cav. having on our arrival at the village reported to me that they were not longer able to pursue, I halted, and having watered the horses as well as I could, marched them back at sunset to Koonch.

The enemy must have lost about five or six hundred men in the action and pursuit; and, according to their own account, the 52nd Regt. B.N.I., or "Henry ki Pultun," which covered the retreat, was nearly destroyed. Nine guns, and quantities of good English ammunition and stores, furnished to the late Gwalior Contingent, were taken.

The defeat at Koonch gave rise to animosities and mistrust in the rebel army. The Inf. Sepoys accused their brother mutineers of the cav. with having pusillanimously abandoned them; and all three arms brought the same charge against their general, Tantie Topee, who had disappeared at Koonch as rapidly as he had done at the Betwa, leaving to its fate, at the most critical moment, the force which he had called into existence under the pompous title of the "Army of the Peishwa."

The Vilaities also were charged with not having exhibited at Koonch the stern courage on which they pride themselves. They were accused of having left the field too soon; and their excuse, that they had felt it their duty to escort the Rince of Jhansi to a place of safety, was not held to be a military one. It was said that the destruction of Vilaities at Jhansi had made their countrymen less anxious than usual to try the fate of war.

These various causes created confusion in the councils of the Calpee mutineers. My immediate advance towards that fortress made matters worse; panic seized the Sepoys in Calpee, as well as those retreating towards it; they commenced to take different lines of retreat, and I was assured, and on good authority, that at one time there were only eleven Sepoys in the town and fort.

The unexpected arrival of the Nawab of Banda, with a large force of good Sepoy cav. mutineers, some guns and infantry, and his energetic exertions, backed up by those of the Rance of Jhansi, produced one of those sudden changes from despair to confidence which mark the Indian character.

Their leaders again exhorted the Sepoys, as I learnt from an intercepted letter, "to hold to the last Calpee, their only arsenal, and to win their right to Paradise by exterminating the infidel English." The rebels returned to Calpee and its environs, reoccupying the strong positions in the labyrinth of ravines which surround it, and the entrenchments which they had thrown up and armed to arrest my advance, a few miles in front of the Chowran (eighty-four) temples, which are two or three miles from Calpee. They had already cut deep trenches across the road, near the entrenchments, and in several other places, which were serious obstacles, because the ravines on each side of the road rendered it very difficult to turn them. When driven out of the entrenchments, the rebels could fall back on the eighty-four temples, built, as well as the walls round them, of most solid masonry; the outwork of ravines afforded them a third; the town of Calpee a fourth; another chain of ravines between the town and the fort a fifth; and finally, the fort, a sixth and last line of defence.

The fort of Calpee is wretched as a fortification, but as a position it is unusually strong, being protected on all sides by ravines, to its front by five lines of defence, and to its rear by the Jumna, from which rises the precipitous rock on which it stands.

Besides the officers previously mentioned in this despatch, I beg leave to bring to your E.'s favourable notice two officers who have lately joined my force, Col. Wetherall, Chief of the Staff, and Capt. Cockburn, of H.M.'s 43rd Regt., my acting A.-de-C., Col. Wetherall, at Koonch, and since he joined my force, has given me all the assistance which was to be expected from his coolness, valuable experience, and excellent judgment.

Sickness had deprived me of the services of some of my staff, amongst others those of Capt. Macdonald, Assist. Qr. Mr. Gen., who, although unable to stand from illness, would, with the never-failing devotion which characterises him, have taken part in the combat, if I had not ordered him back to his bed; but Capt. H. H. A. Wood, Assist. Adj. Gen., and Capt. Cockburn, made up amply for the deficiency by their intelligence and unwearied zeal under fire.

A LONG TIME [AGO].—Though the historian may shake his head, though the physiologist may doubt, and the poet scorn the idea, all must yield before the facts furnished by language. There was a time when the ancestors of the Celts, the Germans, the Slavonians, the Greeks and Italians, the Persians and Hindus, were living together beneath the same roof, separate from the ancestors of the Semitic and Turanian races.—Bunsen.

RELIGIOUS SENTIMENT OF THE HINDU.—The only sphere in which the Indian mind finds itself at liberty to act, to create, and to worship, is the sphere of religion and philosophy, and nowhere have religious and metaphysical ideas struck root so deep in the mind of a nation as in India. The shape which these ideas took amongst the different classes of society, and at different periods of civilization, naturally varies from coarse superstition to sublime spiritualism. But, taken as a whole, history supplies no instance where the inward life of the soul has so completely absorbed all the other faculties of a people.—Bunsen.

GROWTH OF FLAX IN INDIA.—The Dundee Advertiser states that a memorial from the Dundee Chamber of Commerce to the new Council for the Government of India, with a view to the promotion of the cultivation of flax in India, has been confided to Sir John Ogilvy, Bart., M.P., for presentation. Sir John has transmitted it direct to Lord Stanley, the President of the Indian Council, and written his Lordship specially on the subject, pointing out its vast importance to the linen trade of this country.

THE NEW DRESS FOR THE TROOPS IN INDIA.—The new clothing consists of a drab-colour twilled jean blouse, with shoulder-straps made of the same material, which bears the number of the regiment; the trousers are of the same manufacture, and of the pattern worn by the Zouaves of the French army. The dress altogether is light, and has a very good appearance, and every way adapted for the climate. It is understood that there is to be a new head-dress for the Indian troops, the covering to be in the form of a helmet, and of the same colour as the dress, and is to be made of felt.—United Service Gazette.

To Correspondents.

"A SOLDIER'S MOTHER" will find Sir E. Lugard's despatches of the 10th and 14th May in our issue of the 3rd September, and one of the 25th April in our last number. Others will appear very shortly.

We shall be glad at all times to hear from our Madras Correspondent, but we must suggest the propriety of exhibiting less animus. Mr. Raikes is undeniably an excellent and most intelligent officer, and deserves to be spoken of with all respect, notwithstanding his glorification of his own caste at the expense of every other.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, Oct. 30, 1858.

THE INDIAN MAILS.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times lately called public attention to the ill-advised arrangement of the Indian Mails, by which a fortnight's delay is caused, very unnecessarily, to the great inconvenience of all parties interested in Indian correspondence. The homeward mail from Bombay, for instance, usually arrives two or three days after the despatch of the outgoing one, so that no answers can be returned for at least ten days; and so likewise with the Calcutta mails. There is also another defect, which may easily be remedied, and that is the very unequal intervals between the arrival of the different mails. There cannot, surely, be any valid objection to so regulating the departures from Calcutta and Bombay as to obtain an equal division of the month. It would certainly be far more convenient for both political and commercial purposes, and it is strange that the present irregular distribution of the homeward mails should have been permitted so long to continue.

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS.

LORD STANLEY has again done himself much honour by the judgment and impartiality displayed in the latest appointments connected with the home administration of Indian affairs. His lordship is evidently resolved to allow no personal or party considerations to have any weight in the selection of the fittest men to fill the various posts belonging to his department of the State, and the country has much reason to congratulate itself that the new experiment with regard to the government of its great Eastern dependency has been entrusted to such an able, conscientious, and indefatigable statesman. Colonel Baker, C.B., of the Bengal Engineers, who has been appointed Military Secretary at the India-house, enjoys a high reputation, not merely as a soldier, but also for the zealous and intelligent manner in which he has discharged the very laborious duties of Secretary to the Government in the Public Works Department. Not less discrimination has been shown in the selection of Colonel Willoughby, C.B., of the Bombay Artillery, for the office of Assistant-Storekeeper-General, in which his intimate acquaintance with the Commissariat Department of the Indian Army is certain to stand him in good stead. Colonel Willoughby, it will be remembered, previous to his departure from Bombay, held the post of Inspector-General of Ordnance, and so acquitted himself as to earn the best title to the flattering preference by which his merits have been recognised.

THE NORTH WESTERN BANK OF INDIA.

WE have been requested to invite the attention of the shareholders of this unfortunate concern to the propriety of winding-up the affairs of the bank, if they would save themselves from further loss and annoyance. The recorded value of shares has fallen from Rs. 500 to Rs. 300; but in the market it is probable that not more than Rs. 150 could actually be realised. It is believed, however, that, if the concern were at once closed, the assets would yield very nearly the value at present represented by a share, that is, Rs. 300. Everything has been tried in vain to achieve success. The heavy losses early sustained have proved irreparable, and the only alternative that remains is entire ruin by persistence, or partial recovery of the property invested by stopping before it is too late. The chief opposition to the latter course is made by parties interested in maintaining the bank, even at a pecuniary loss. There are certain mercantile shareholders in Calcutta possessing a very small stake, but deriving from their position "as residents at the bank's head-quarters an influence and power quite disproportionate to the shares which they own." Objections have also been urged by a few English shareholders, who are desirous, for reasons of their own, to transfer the head-quarters of the bank to London. It has been further said a loss would accrue "from a sudden withdrawal of the bank's connection with the indigo factories, on the security of which loans have been made." Unfortunately this obstacle has been summarily and unpleasantly removed by the failure of the house to whom the advances had been made. The Government paper held by the bank might, it is suggested, at once be divided among the shareholders, without any necessity for disposing of it at the present low rates. For more than twelve months no dividend has been paid, while an expensive establishment is kept up, as if to increase the already large amount of loss. The bank deed, as it now stands, makes no provision, it appears, for a wind-up of the concern; but under clause 74 it may be altered "by a majority of two-thirds of the shareholders present." The following six shareholders, Messrs. Martin Gubbins, G. Cowan, W. Geddes, T. K. Duncan, George Johnston, and Samuel Scott, have therefore resolved, under clause 66, to require the directors to call an extraordinary general meeting at Calcutta, to be held early next year, "for the special purpose of taking into consideration a proposal that the bank's deed be altered by adding to and inserting therein a clause authorising a majority of two-thirds of the votes of the shareholders present at any extraordinary or special meeting, to be duly convened for such purpose, to dissolve at any time this banking company, and to have its affairs wound-up, and to make such provisions as may be necessary for carrying the same into effect." Should this proposal be passed in the affirmative, a second extraordinary general meeting must be convened for its final ratification, and be held within one calendar month from the first meeting. On both these occasions votes can be given by proxy—it being indispensable, however, that such proxy shall himself be a shareholder. For the benefit, therefore, of such as may not be acquainted with a shareholder resident in Calcutta, the name of Mr. John Boyle Barry is suggested as that of a gentleman duly qualified and willing to act as a proxy. No fewer than three extraordinary general meetings must be held before the desired clause can be added; and then a fourth and fifth will be necessary before a resolution to wind-up can be carried into execution. In the spirit of the homely adage that "half a loaf is better than no bread," it certainly does seem that shareholders will act wisely in giving in their adhesion to the above-named requisitionists,—and the sooner they do so the better will it be for them.

THE SAHIB-LOG AND THE NIGGER.

MR. W. H. RUSSELL, the Times' Special Correspondent in scenes of war and turmoil, appears to consider it his mission to asperse the character of his countrymen, and to hold them up to the contempt and ridicule of the civilised world. In the Crimea he lost no opportunity of vilifying the military authorities, and of representing Englishmen in general as formal prigs or helpless noodles. In India he has so far modified his tactics that he reserves his abuse for the junior members of the Service, and for persons in no high position or possessed of much influence. For some time past, the audacity of his mis-statements has excited a feeling of mingled pity and astonishment at such unblushing effrontery and presumption; but he so far overshot the mark that even his personal friends and admirers smiled incredulously at his wondrous narratives. Now, however, he has exceeded the limits of the least fastidious journalistic licence, and has condescended to personalities as unjust and offensive to individuals as they are injurious to the public interests. We will not say, indeed, that Mr. Russell's allegations are altogether unfounded, because he professes to speak from personal knowledge, and the word of a gentleman may not be suspected. But that is no reason why we should accept his charges against Europeans in India as generally applicable. He may be quite correct, so far as the instances he quotes are concerned, but it is singularly unfair to bring such a sweeping accusation against a large body of men upon the strength of two or three isolated and exceptional cases. And even these cases are not fully authenticated. He meets a Native with his head bleeding, who asserts that a Sahib struck him with his riding-whip without the slightest provocation. We have here only the word of a Native, unsupported by any sort of evidence. The only thing certain is the wound, which, for anything that appears to the contrary, might have been either wholly accidental, or inflicted by one of his own countrymen. But Mr. Russell has heard of a European flogging a Native who had sued him in the Courts. He also darkly alludes to a Syce being tied to a pole and exposed to the fierce heat of the sun because of a saddle misplaced; and to another being tethered like a quadruped, and supplied, in mockery, with grain for food. Admitting all this to be strictly true, and, if so, highly reprehensible, we would ask Mr. Russell if he means seriously to assert that this is the ordinary, or even frequent, mode of treating Native menials? If he pretend, which we cannot for a moment suppose, that these monstrous acts are of common occurrence, we have no hesitation in giving a flat contradiction to such libellous exaggerations. But if they are not in accordance with the general rule of conduct, then has he travelled out of his record and gone out of his way to misrepresent his own fellow-countrymen in the eyes of Europe. Let him elect for himself whichever horn of this dilemma he prefers, but assuredly he will not enhance his reputation by adulation of men placed in authority, while he reserves his contumely for those at the lower end of the social ladder. It is just possible that two or three young men, from among many hundreds, have been guilty of what is not only foolish but wicked and cowardly; but we maintain that, as a rule, the tendency of Englishmen is rather to indulge the Natives, and to treat them as spoilt children. Even the indigo-planters, who gave evidence before the Colonisation Committee, and who certainly were not predisposed to make out a good case for the authorities, complained that young magistrates were prone to decide rather in favour of the Natives than of their own people. English gentlemen do not easily cast aside their national characteristics or forget their early habits and training, and we have yet to learn that cruelty and a tyrannical deportment are either natural to their temperament or likely to result from their education. We therefore reject Mr. Russell's hideous caricatures, and utterly refuse to accept them as true delineations of Englishmen in India. Had they been in any way typical, we should still deplore the cynicism of the man who could so ruthlessly expose his compatriots to the indignation and scorn of all civilised peoples.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

THE immense difference between a really able man and a merely clever one was never more clearly exemplified than in the official correspondence between Sir John Lawrence and Colonel Edwardes, on the subject of what the latter believes to be "the unchristian elements in our policy and administration." The one is like an adventurous yachtsman making for the goal with every stitch of canvas strained to the utmost, but with little or no ballast in the hold—a brave show, indeed, with a fair breeze and over a smiling sea, but terribly perilous under adverse winds and over stormy billows. The other is the steady experienced navigator, prepared alike for all weathers, and guiding his vessel calmly and securely through all dangers to the desired haven. In short, between the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab and the Commissioner of Peshawur there exists all the difference between a thorough statesman and a smart administrator, a professional politician and an amateur, a great master of the science of government and a dilettante subordinate.

According to Colonel Edwardes the "un-christian elements" may be arranged under ten heads:—"The exclusion of the Bible and of Christian teaching from the Government schools and colleges; the endowment of idolatry and Mahomedanism by Government; the recognition of caste; the observance of native holidays in the various departments of State; the administration by the British of Hindoo and Mahomedan laws, both criminal and civil; the publicity of heathen and Mahomedan processions; the public frequenting of streets by native prostitutes; the restrictions on the marriage of European soldiers in India and the insufficient accommodation for married families in barracks; the connection of the British Government with the opium trade; and the Indian Excise Laws." As the Chief Commissioner observes, these heads are "certainly comprehensive," but their treatment indicates a somewhat narrow and sectarian order of mind. However, we prefer to epitomise the sound practical remarks of Sir John Lawrence, to offering any comments of our own. First, then, with respect to the public teaching of the Christian religion, the Chief Commissioner is of opinion that not only ought the Bible to be found in all college and school libraries, but that it should also be taught in class whenever suitable teachers are obtainable—the attendance of the pupils, however, being altogether voluntary. For some time to come this innovation could be introduced only very partially, and the utmost care must be taken to avoid even the suspicion of undue influence being exercised to induce parents to send their children to these classes. As to Colonel Edwardes's proposition for the immediate resumption of "all grants or alienations from the public revenue for native religions," Sir John expresses himself to the effect that a more impolitic, unjust, and impracticable measure could hardly be imagined. These grants are, in many instances, exceedingly ancient—in all they have been guaranteed by the State. No new grants have been made by the British Government, and some overgrown ones have been reduced, though with much tenderness. They are in no way encouraged: on the contrary, their political honour and prestige have been considerably diminished—but their resumption would be a breach of faith, and equivalent to a confiscation of property. "To do so on the ground that the institutions are heathen, would be nothing short of persecution of heathenism." Thirdly, respecting the recognition of caste,—it is not true that the Government has given any direct encouragement to the prejudices of caste, except in the case of the Bengal army. There is no doubt that Rajpoots and Brahmins were at first enlisted in preference to all others, because they were the finest men obtainable. By degrees a certain degree of exclusiveness crept in, owing to the objections entertained by these to the admixture of inferior castes. A great error was committed in yielding to these prejudices, and one that has been too dearly expiated ever to occur again. It is still impossible, however, to force the Brahmins and Rajpoots to mingle with Sudras and Sweepers, nor is there any occasion so to do. It is both easier and more desirable to raise distinct corps of native Christians, Sweepers, and others. Sepoys ought to have every facility for consulting Christian teachers; but any attempt to preach to them in a body, or to flood a regiment with tracts, is open to grave objections. Individual Sepoys, legitimately converted, deserve to be specially protected. It is better, indeed, that they should remain with their own regiments, if they can do so without loss of social position; but, if subjected to persecution, they ought at once to be removed to another corps. In the judicial department opportunities frequently present themselves for the employment of native Christians, but care must be taken that the offer of such appointments be not made ostentatiously, lest "they should operate as an inducement to conversion from worldly motives." Strangely enough, Colonel Edwardes, while he deprecates the recognition of caste elsewhere, is anxious to preserve untainted that of prisoners in gaol. On this the Chief Commissioner briefly remarks that they are not required to break their caste by the messing system, as the cook is always a Brahmin; and that were it otherwise, as caste can always be recovered at a certain expense, the temporary loss of it "might be properly thought to form a part of the punishment." We now arrive at Colonel Edwardes' objection to native holidays, which likewise is overruled by Sir John Lawrence. The refusal to permit Hindoo or Mahomedan employés to attend the ordinances of their respective religions would be tantamount to a declaration that no native would be employed unless he abandoned his faith. It is sufficient that on our own holy days all public offices are closed and public works suspended. Colonel Edwardes next finds fault with the maintenance of the old Hindoo and Mahomedan laws, and indulges in the certainly novel remark that any conquerors but ourselves would, long ere this, have introduced their own code. The Chief Commissioner here convicts his subordinate of two grave errors: the one as to fact, the other as to inference. It is not the case that the old criminal and civil laws have been strictly preserved. Whatever was inconsistent with morality and civilization has been gradually and completely eliminated, though the time may now have arrived for the institution of a new penal code. Then, with regard to the peculiar views connected with the philosophy of history enunciated by the Commissioner of Peshawur, Sir John correctly observes, that "in purely civil affairs, not affecting imperial policy, and operative only as between man and man, conquerors have in all ages and countries permitted to the conquered the use of their local laws." On two points, however, some special legislation may hereafter be necessary. Polygamy and the betrothal of young children, though not positively immoral, are socially inconvenient, and may, perhaps, call for some repressive enactments, whenever the temper of the native mind shall be prepared for the change. The suppression of Hindoo and Mahomedan processions ought to be prohibited, says Sir John, as a police measure, and not on religious grounds. Affrays and bloodshed not unfrequently result from the public parade of ceremonial observances, and stir up animosity between different sects of fellow subjects. For this reason they ought to be put down, which might be effected "with a reasonable exercise of firmness and discretion." In the interest of public morals, the exhibition of all obscene idols ought likewise to be prevented, and proper measures should be taken to discourage generally all impure and immoral vocations. The restrictions in the way of the marriage of European soldiers are acknowledged to be very objectionable, and the Chief Commissioner denies that men are better soldiers for being unmarried.

The only consideration is one of expense, which ought not to be allowed to weigh against the welfare of our European soldiery in India. The barrack accommodation, however,—at least in the Punjab—leaves nothing to be desired, and the families of married soldiers are provided with strictly private rooms. The only hardship of which European soldiers can fairly complain is the scanty allowance made to their widows, while in the native army “a pension is granted to the widow, or to the son or daughter, or to the father or mother of a native soldier who is killed in action, or who dies from disease contracted on service in the field.” This brings us down to Colonel Edwardes’ ninth objection, which is directed against the connection of the British Government with the production and sale of opium. Here the Chief Commissioner agrees with his subordinate, so far as the abstract principle is concerned, but candidly admits that the loss of revenue would be too great to allow the immediate severance of the State from this profitable monopoly. It is quite right to raise revenue from the drug, but it would have a more moral appearance if the production of opium were left open to competition, and a heavy export duty levied by Government. At the same time precautions would have to be taken not to afford the natives any increased facility for indulgence in this pernicious drug. Lastly, Sir John altogether disagrees with Colonel Edwardes in reprobating the Excise Laws. There is now far less consumption of drugs and spirits than in the olden times. The evil is confined within certain known limits, and the chief consumers are not the actual population of towns, but the swarms of camp-followers who hang about and infest all military cantonments.

In conclusion, the Chief Commissioner deprecates the adoption of Utopian and impracticable measures. Those “which are really and truly Christian can be carried out in India not only without danger to British rule, but, on the contrary, with every advantage to its stability. Christian things done in a Christian way will never alienate the heathen. About such things there are qualities which do not provoke nor excite distrust, nor harden to resistance. It is when unchristian things are done in the name of Christianity, or when Christian things are done in an unchristian way, that mischief and danger are occasioned.” These are maxims of profound wisdom, and worthy to be perused by the visionary doctrinaires who are in such haste to regenerate our Indian empire.

THE ANCIENT HINDUS.—We may divide the whole Arian family into two branches, the northern and the southern. The northern nations, Celts, Greeks, Romans, Germans, and Slavonians, have each one act allotted to them on the stage of history. They have each a national character to support. Not so the southern tribes. They are absorbed in the struggles of thought, their past is the problem of creation, their future the problem of existence, and the present, which ought to be the solution of both, seems never to have attracted their attention, or called forth their energies. There never was a nation believing so firmly in another world, and so little concerned about this. Their condition on earth is to them a problem; their real and external life a simple fact. Though this is said chiefly with reference to them before they were brought in contact with foreign conquerors, traces of this character are still visible in the Hindus, as described by the companions of Alexander; nay, even in the Hindus of the present day.—Bunsen.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE AGRA HEROES.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Madras, 14th September, 1858.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of the 2nd ultimo, which came in by the last mail, I see your review of Mr. Raikes's “Notes on the Indian Mutiny.” I have not had the pleasure of seeing this work yet, but from the extracts in the Indian Mail, and Mr. Raikes's known powers as a “penman,” I doubt not but that he must have spent all his eloquence in getting these Notes up. As, however, I have already said, not having seen the work, I am unable to bear testimony to its veracity or plausibility; but having by your own remark found that, in detailing the miseries we suffered at Agra, the services rendered by the civilians, &c., he confines himself, and takes the credit thereof, exclusively to the covenanted portion. Now, how Mr. Raikes could be guilty of such selfishness I cannot say, but it is a blessing England has heard of the deeds of daring performed by the uncovenanted long before Mr. Raikes had sounded his own trumpet.

In order, therefore, to give you an exact detail of the part Mr. Raikes took in this mutiny is the object of the present address, and it only grieves me that the dealing of this subject has not been taken up or committed to abler hands than myself. But not to lose time, and thus allow Mr. Raikes to crow his own glory as a “game cock,” I have taken the liberty of this address, and from my having been a fellow-sufferer with Mr. Raikes, having watched his proceedings from the 11th of May, 1857, to the day we parted on the shores of Madras, on the 28th March, 1858, I think I am in a position to be able to give you a true account of his doings since he, or rather we, in Agra heard of the ements at Meerut, which is as follows:—

Long before the outbreak at Meerut, we had heard of the disaffection of the Sepoys, on account of the greased cartridges, and in three or four instances we even heard that there were two or three regiments that actually showed a spirit of revolt, but never expected this grand convulsion which threatened for a time to overwhelm India by its mighty surge. However, when the news reached us, on the 15th of May, of the outbreak at Meerut and the fall of Delhi, its close proximity to our snug nest (Agra) made us apprehensive of our own hearths. Again, as the tide of the rebellion was each day rolling on closer, and threatening to sweep away our tranquil shores, Mr. Colvin, the late lamented Lieutenant-Governor, took measures to meet the shock. Orders were issued to the late Col. H. Fraser, C.B., Chief Engineer, to take measures and put the fort in a state of defence. Capt. J. E. T. Nicolls was, therefore, sent as Garrison Engineer, and the rapidity with which he executed his task is patent to all the world. Every embrasure of our fort was bristling with a cannon, and in one day he put in stores for six months. Again, there was not a creek in the fort but was put in good repair for habitation. Thus, in one month he stored in provision for seven years, and prepared accommodation for seven thousand persons. So much for our refuge in case of an attack. In the mean time Mr. Colvin, with the anxiety of a father for his children, was exerting every nerve to collect intelligence, and by daily memorandum used to inform the public of the state of the daily progress of the rebellion. On the other hand, what did the civilians do? I assure you, nothing. They were paralysed; and every day you could see them, with their frightened faces, among the uncovenanted servants, consulting what could be done in case of an attack. On our side, however, we (the uncovenanted) applied to the magistrate for arms, who on an indent got them from the magazine. These arms were stored with Mr. E. J. Boldero, the Civil Auditor, and we got a musket and a gross of cartridges for use. About a fortnight after the magistrate recalled the arms, and armed his native police. At this we formed patrolling parties of our own, and mustered about six hundred strong. A batch of two hundred at a time for one night would patrol. When the authorities saw this vigilance on our part, and their confidence in the native police was slackening, on account of desertion, disobedience of orders, and many other insubordinate acts of theirs, then, and then only, was it that they were brought to look upon us for protection. At this juncture we heard of the outbreak of Allypore troops, and the consequent flight of the inhabitants. At the same time we heard of a few families of indigo planters having been in danger at a factory in Moorsan. At this about twenty East Indians of the uncovenanted service volunteered to go to their relief. We were commanded by the late Mr. W. C. Watson, magistrate of Allypore. We arrived and rescued them. They were Messrs. Saunders, Tandy, McCutchan,

Col. Cecil, of the Invalids, Necterville, and a few others. After their rescue we went to Allypore and kept the communication open. Whilst there with the body I came back into Agra on sick leave, just in time to incorporate myself with the volunteers whom Mr. Raikes was raising. It is well to tell you that the person principally instrumental in the creation of this body was Mr. H. Harrington, nephew to H. B. Harrington, Esq., of the Sudder Court, now member of the Supreme Council. This body of the cavalry, which afterwards distinguished itself under the name of the Militia Cavalry, was tauntingly called Raikes' body-guard, and so on, and Mr. R. Drummond even went so far as to say one day that “he would lick us with a dozen of his mounted police.” The object of this corps was to intimidate the townspeople, and this alone. We were pretty well accoutred, with black jacket, white trowsers, long boots, red sash round the waist, one pistol (private), Government sword, and Sola hats, after the Napier fashion, or helmets, and a red pugree or turban. Our appearance had really a good moral effect upon the inhabitants of the town, and the late Lieut.-Governor was highly pleased at our “martial bearing,” as he was pleased to call it.

Well, in the day, or rather morning, this was our duty after drill. (By-the-bye, it is as well to inform you that we were drilled by Mr. Freese, of the Chief Engineer's office, who was lately in the 6th Madras Light Cavalry, and Mr. G. B. Collier, belonging to the Government Secretariat, but late of the 3rd Dragoon.) Well, when the civilians saw that we were determined upon cutting a figure, and that danger was daily approaching us with rapid strides, they appointed rendezvous, or places of resort for the families of the covenanted and uncovenanted, in case of an alarm. Even in this their selfishness was paramount, for the best places they would reserve for themselves, whilst to the uncovenanted they gave tents. Nevertheless we were thankful to God that we even got this shelter. Of the rendezvous appointed (which were the Metcalfe Testimonial, in the Cantonments, the Motussilite Press, the most central point of the station, Khandaree Bagh (the house occupied by Mr. R. B. Morgan, judge of Sudder Dewanny and Nisamat Adawlut), and Mr. C. Grant's bungalow, best styled a palace), the Khandaree Bagh was the best and safest. It was under command of Colonel H. Fraser, Engineers, and Major J. A. Weller, Superintending Engineer of the First Circle. They also had at this place a 12-pounder siege-gun. This gun was formerly at the Chief Engineer's office, and used to fire at noon every day in the civil lines, and was manned by the duffadar and two peons of the Chief Engineer's office. The bungalow was surrounded by high compound walls, about two and a-half feet in thickness, and was consequently the safest. The rendezvous were regulated thus:—Every night the families of such of the uncovenanted who kept, or rather mounted, guard at them were to sleep there, and at break of day they would return to their several homes. Thus we continued till the formation of the militia, which was divided into infantry and cavalry on the 24th June. With this ceased Mr. Raikes' connection with the cavalry, and we were under command of Major G. M. Prendergast, of the 30th N.I. I beg to assure you, sir, after this Mr. Raikes did nothing at all, save that he made every possible arrangement to save his property, by making it over to the Nazir and mookhtears of the court over which he presided. By-the-bye, I forgot to mention that, about the 5th of June, intimation was received at Agra of the arrival at Futeabad, a place twenty-one miles from Agra towards Etawah, of five ladies and four children; they were the families of Messrs. Phillips, magistrate of Etawah, Lieut. Corfield, of the 10th N.I., and Mrs. Catania. On receipt of this news the uncovenanted cavalry volunteered to fetch them in, the roads being dangerous, on account of the rise of goojurs and villagers, and Mr. Raikes volunteered to command us. This was the only active service rendered by Mr. Raikes in Agra.

I beg to state for your information that on the 4th of July, when we had the first brush in Agra with the Kotah Contingent, and snatched their guns, ammunition, camp, baggage, &c., there was only one Civil Servant, Mr. H. Vansittart, Accountant of the N.W. Provinces. Again, on the 5th of July, when we were engaged with the Neemuch Brigade, (second only to the Gwalior Contingent in bravery and perseverance among the mutineer regiments), there were only two Civil Servants present, viz.—Mr. A. L. M. Phillips, the magistrate, and R. C. Oldfield, the assistant-secretary to Government, who was severely wounded by a musket shot in the right breast. Can Mr. Raikes say that he was present in these, or in any other engagement? No, I defy him. On the contrary, he was snug in the fort, and from the flagstaff was, by a telescope, a distant spectator of the fight. What did the uncovenanted do then?—let the brigadier commanding (Col. Polwhele) say. Were it not for the militia cavalry what would have become of the guns and the handful of Europeans against the dreadful host of enemies? How did the uncovenanted fight? Heart and hand they went into it, who never before saw a cannon ball fired. Did they flinch when the grape and round shot, shells, and musket balls were pouring, not only like hail, but with deadly precision amongst them? Did they get faint of heart or courage when they saw their comrades falling alongside of them, struck by round shot or shrapnell ball? No, they did not. I am not boasting, sir, but I tell you long side of me was a young man by name Carleton, who was struck by a round shot, a six or nine pound ball, and he fell dead on the spot. Discipline required me to fill his place; I did it, with a palpitating heart, making sure of the same fate from the same gun, but Providence guarded me. From that very gun was sent, another ball, which perhaps would snap the slender thread of my existence but for the unfortunate coming in of one Lieut. Williams, who was struck in the left leg near his ankle as he was riding at full speed across, about one hundred yards a-head of us.

You will perhaps be tired with my long and tedious letter. I am sorry for the length to which I have unintentionally run, but considering the "difficulties and hardships of which Mr. Raikes complains, as having been endured by the covenanted portion of the refugees in the fort, I must certainly say with Mr. Raikes that they were severe, for on Monday, the 6th July, I had occasion to wait upon Mr. Raikes, and what do you think I saw? Mrs. R. cooking her own coffee, and making some breakfast for herself and family. I must here beg pardon for bringing this lady's name in question so publicly; but it is unavoidable, for I have to bring forward our sufferings also to give you a just idea of our relative positions. The covenanted portion of the refugees had one advantage over us, they were allowed to bring in whatever they chose for their comfort, all the necessities of life included, wines, &c., as much as they liked, and servants besides. Whereas, on the other hand, we poor devils were only allowed one box of clothes, one chair, and one bedstead, with bedding for one family. Now, was this fair? Again, all our servants deserted us—I mean the Ayahs—whereas those of the covenanted had theirs retained by force. On application for the same interference for the keeping back of our servants we were refused or not listened to: thus we had not only to cook our own grub and draw water for ourselves, but also to do the work of sweeps, &c. What, then, does Mr. Raikes complain about? and if he does, why not include in his representation ours also, which is by far more severe than his or theirs?

In conclusion, I beg to say that I have written this much to the credit of Mr. Raikes alone. I have a budget full for many others; and should I only meet encouragement in this my first attempt, I shall give you something more connected with Agra and its doings.—In the meantime, I remain, sir, yours obediently, ONLY A HOMO.

"I have to bring to notice the conduct of Private Same Shaw, of the 3rd batt., Rifle brig., who is recommended by his commanding officer for the Victoria Cross.

"I trust his excellency will allow me to recommend this man for the Victoria Cross, and that he will approve of my having issued a division order stating that I have done so."

EAST INDIA COAL COMPANY (LIMITED).

The works of this enterprising Company are advancing most satisfactorily, and their prospect of a brilliant success may be regarded as a certainty. During the month of August 14,500 maunds of excellent coal were raised, being an excess of 4,000 maunds over the monthly average for the last year; and there is every reason to expect that the increase in September will be found to have been fully equal to 10,000 maunds. There is no difficulty in obtaining labour at a cheap rate, and the mineral occurs at a very slight depth below the surface. The following extract from a letter received by the Directors from the local manager, Mr. Fortescue Harrison, may serve to illustrate the vigour, intelligence, and enterprise with which the operations of this Company are conducted :—

"Calcutta, Sept. 8, 1858.

"The Government called upon me to send six thousand maunds of coal into the river 'Gogra.' The service was one of great danger, inasmuch as the boats were under fire all the time; but without it the authorities could send no steamers up that river. I am glad to say we laid it down safely at four several stations, and steamers for the first time are now plying there. I charged three rupees per maund—a magnificent profit, and it was readily paid."

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that the latest accounts of the progress of the works are, with few exceptions, the most encouraging that have been received since the first outbreak of the mutiny. The first 23 miles from the junction at Burdwan to the river Adjai would be opened about the 1st of the present month, and from Mr. Turnbull's report it appeared there was a fair prospect of opening the line up to Cynthea, about 22 miles further, by the end of 1859. On the North Beerbhoom district, 33½ miles, a marked improvement had taken place in the progress of the works since they fell into the company's hands; and it appeared that if permanent way materials and the iron girders required for bridge works could be delivered on the works in time, there was a fair prospect of this district being finished in July, 1860. On the South, Middle, and North Rajmahal divisions, 74 miles, the works had been going on prosperously, although some difficulty had been experienced in obtaining labour. The Colgong division, 33 miles, was in a very satisfactory condition; and, contingent upon an early supply of coal, permanent way materials, and iron girders, it was anticipated that the works on the

Baugulpore division, 23 miles, might be completed by about the middle of 1860. On the Jehangheerah district, 20 miles, 22 per cent. of the earthwork was finished, and good progress had been made in brick-making. On the Monghyr division, 31½ miles, 50 per cent. of the earthwork was finished, and 11 per cent. of the brickwork, with about 7,000,000 of bricks on hand for the ensuing season. In this division occurred the Monghyr tunnel, 900 feet long, in quartz rock; 2½ per cent. of the whole rock-cutting had been executed, and some of the brick arching completed. On the Keul division, 7½ miles, 67½ miles per cent. of the earthwork was executed, and the remainder might be finished next season. On the Huliohur division, 17 miles, the progress had not been so satisfactory. The progress on the Barrh division, 31½ miles was satisfactory; about 60 per cent. of the earthwork and 20 per cent. of the brickwork were done. On the Patna division, 31½ miles, good progress had also been made; 66 per cent. of the earthwork and 12 per cent. of the brickwork were completed. On the Soane district, 78½ miles, which had suffered more severely from the mutiny than perhaps any other, the works, after being constantly stopped by the insurrection, were in full operation at the beginning of March. Although renewed disturbances were imminent before the end of that month, the engineers and contractors remained at their posts until the 21st of April, when Kooer Singh, with some thousands of his followers, crossed the Ganges, spread themselves over the country, burning and plundering all that came in their way, and the works were necessarily again stopped. The works at the Soane bridge were likewise stopped, and many of the preparations made for their resumption a second time destroyed; but nothing on the whole of this district was wanting but a pacification of the country to allow of rapid progress being made. The board of directors acknowledge the exertions that have been made by their staff to push the works forward, and state how much the company were indebted both to the proceedings of Mr. J. Hamilton (one of their most promising officers, since dead) and to Mr. Nelson, the contractor, in their successful effort, to save a costly dam at the Kurumnassa bridge, which had been the means of saving a whole year in the completion of the work. The line between Allahabad and Cawnpore having been completed was to have been opened for public traffic between the 1st and 15th of the present month. The board considered that there was every prospect of the traffic proving of a highly remunerative character. A considerable length of this section had been for many months past used for Government purposes, but as the accounts with the Government were not yet settled, they did not form any part of those submitted. The board had not received any report of the state of the works on the remaining districts on this division for the last half-year, but as, with the exception of the large bridges over the Soane and the Jumna, they were easy of construction, they consider their completion to depend almost entirely upon the state of the country and the time in which the permanent way materials could be delivered from Calcutta. Instructions had been forwarded to proceed with the surveys of the Jubbulpore division with all practicable speed. The board could not refrain from expressing their satisfaction with the results which had been accomplished. Since 1851, when the company first obtained possession of any land, there had been opened, and in profitable work for nearly three years, 12½ miles of railway; the opening of an additional length of 149 miles was now announced; much work on other parts of the line was well advanced; and the whole of the permanent way materials, with a considerable amount of rolling stock, provided. The board were of opinion that, notwithstanding the serious interruptions which had been caused, first by the Santial insurrection, and since by the more recent mutiny, the rate of progress had been such as would bear a very favourable comparison with that of similar works elsewhere. Mr. Rendel, after inspecting the works along the entire line to Cawnpore, beyond which it was not safe to proceed, had returned to England. The board had every reason to be satisfied with the result of his journey, and could not doubt that, by largely introducing iron girders in the construction of bridges, as agreed upon between Mr. Rendel and Mr. Turnbull, a very considerable saving in time would be effected, and one of the greatest obstacles to the early completion of the line thus disposed of. The great difficulty the directors had now to contend with was the transport of materials, stores, and rolling stock up country, a difficulty very much enhanced by the demand for transport on the part of the Government. Mr. Rendel had the opportunity while in India of maturely considering this subject in communication with Mr. Palmer, Mr. Turnbull, and Mr. Purser, and, after conferring with the Government, it had been decided to build a number of light draught steamers and flats for the exclusive service of the company. These would be completed with all possible despatch. The permanent way and works on the opened line were in a most satisfactory state. The cost of maintenance for the half year ending June 30 had been 6½d. per train mile. The number of passengers carried during the half year was 581,274, of which 548,202 were third class, 25,335 second class, and 7,737 first class. The total number conveyed showed an increase of 32,727 as compared with the corresponding half of 1857. The tonnage in goods and minerals for the half year was 90,660 tons, showing an increase of 36,910 tons over the corresponding period. The gross traffic receipts for the half year ending June 30, were £82,573, showing an increase of £19,114 over those of the corresponding half of 1857. The total gross receipts for the year ending June 30, 1858, amounted to £150,232, against £113,285 for the year ended June 30, 1857. The amount of engine mileage run during that time was 581,601 miles, against 371,941 miles in the preceding year. The net traffic receipts since the opening of the line have been £10,631 for the half year ending the 30th of June, 1855, £20,621 ending the 31st of December, 1855, £27,791 ending the 30th of June, 1856, £29,269 ending the 31st of December, 1856, £40,215 ending the 30th of June, 1857, £42,555, ending the 31st of December, 1857, and £45,170 for the half year ending the 30th of June, 1858. The accounts of the damage sustained by the company from the mutiny were not yet completed. In accordance with a resolution of the proprietary, dated the 29th of October, 1857, the board of directors lost no time in applying to the Court of Directors of the East India Company for their authority to advance to Sir M. Stephenson, annually, either out of the capital or the receipts of the opened line, one third of the annuity granted to him by deed dated the 13th of September, 1853, but they regret to report that they were met with objections and proposals which they could scarcely have expected to receive. They express their extreme disappointment at the manner in which the question had been thus far disposed of by the Court. The board of directors have obtained the sanction of the authorities to the completion of the remainder of the capital—namely, £2,000,000, at 5 per cent. interest—required for the line, as originally designed, to the North-Western Provinces. The balance remaining to be called up on the E shares was about £300,000, payable within the next six months; and there was cash in hand, exclusive of the capital raised for the Jubbulpore line, to the extent of about £120,000, while the expenditure was proceeding at the rate of upwards of £100,000 per month.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA.

The report of the directors of this company states that they have undertaken to construct 1,235½ miles of railway in Western India. There are 130½ miles open for public traffic, 732½ miles under contract for construction, and 372½ miles unlet. The portions of the railway under contract extend in a south-east direction on the Bhoze Ghat 13½ miles, and from Poonah to Sholapore 163 miles; and in a north-east direction from Wassind to Jubbulpore, a distance of 556 miles. The Bhoze Ghat incline (13½ miles) is to be completed in February, 1861; the contract from Poonah to Sholapore (163 miles) in September, 1859; Wassind to Rotundah Nullah (25 miles) in November, 1859; the Thull Ghat incline (9 miles) by December, 1861; Egutpoora to Bhoasul (190 miles) in June, 1860; and from the latter place to Jubbulpore (332 miles) by March, 1862. Mr. J. J. Berkeley, the chief resident engineer, continues to express his satisfaction with the quality of the work executed. On the 14th of June the line from Khandallah to Poonah (42 miles) was opened for traffic; but from Poonah to the Bheema the railway is still incomplete. The chief resident engineer, however, anticipates that the contractor will complete it by December next. The permanent electric telegraph has been completed upon the open portion of the railway between Bombay and Byculah, and between Callian and Poonah. Its use will tend to the safe and economical working of the line, and under the licence granted by the Government of India for the erection of the telegraph the company may permit the public to avail themselves of it to such places as the Government telegraph does not communicate with. By the last advices from Bombay a sale of charges to the public was under consideration. On the line open the permanent way and works have been thoroughly maintained. In his last periodical report the chief resident engineer observes:—"I am glad to be able to report that the deterioration of permanent way materials has, up to this period, been inconsiderable; and this fact is particularly satisfactory as regards the sleepers, both wooden and iron. Of the former, the renewals during the year under review (1st of July, 1857, to the 30th of June, 1858) have been 433, or one-fifth per cent. of the total number that has been laid in the open line and sidings, and of the iron sleepers only 18, or one-tenth per cent., of those in use have been fractured by ordinary wear and tear." Considering that a large portion of the materials in question has now borne the public traffic for more than five years, this information is, in the opinion of the Board, suggestive of much encouragement. The 130½ miles of railway open for public traffic on the 30th June consisted of 88½ miles in the Concan, and of 42 miles from Khandallah to Poonah on the Deccan. These two portions do not form a continuous line, but are separated by the six miles of turnpike-road over the Bhoze Ghat. The gross receipts for the six months amounted to £42,166, and the expenses to £17,076, or 40·49 per cent. of the receipts, leaving a net profit of £25,091. Included, however, in the gross receipts of the last half-year are the receipts during the seventeen days the line on the Deccan was open, amounting to £808, which, deducted from the gross amount, leaves as due to the Concan line £41,358, or £467 per mile against £330 per mile in the corresponding half-year, the receipts for that part of the line being £24,610. This, compared with the corresponding half of the previous year, shows an increase of £7,748 on the gross receipts, an increase of £5,695 on the net profits, and a decrease of 3·21 per cent. on the working expenses. The number of passengers conveyed during the half-year ending the 30th of June last was 436,730, of which 412,060 were third class passengers, 18,490 second class, and 6,179 first class. 64,941 tons of goods were conveyed, of which 21,121 tons consisted of railway materials. The increase in the number of passengers conveyed was 83,515, and in tons of goods 13,127, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The Board congratulate the shareholders upon these results. The capital of the company now consists of £1,000,000, represented by 400,000 shares of £20 each, bearing guaranteed interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and of £333,300 debentures, at 4½ per cent. per annum interest, issued for a determinate period of five years, which expires in January, 1860. To meet the increased liabilities of the company arising from the extension of operations, the Board have made a call on the £2 shares, payable on the 25th of November next, which will place all the unpaid shares upon the level of £4 per share paid. The Board are restricted from making a call of greater amount than £2 per share, or oftener than every three months. The present call being paid, the amount which a call upon all the unpaid shares would realise is £510,508, and it has been suggested to the Board that such sum could be most conveniently obtained by allowing to the shareholders the privilege of paying the amount of their shares in full in advance. Having maturely considered the proposition, the Board are disposed to believe that the company's financial requirements may be sufficiently met in that way, and they therefore intend, should the state of the money-market from time to time permit of it, instead of making future calls, to allow shareholders to pay in advance in full, under certain restrictions. Since the Board last met the shareholders, the Government of India has been directly vested in her Majesty, and from the 1st of September last the control over this company has been exercised by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council. The legal rights of the company, under their contract with the East India Company, have been in no way affected by the change.

The capital account to the 30th of June last showed that £3,820,804 had been received, and £3,040,281 expended, leaving a balance of £780,523. The revenue account shows that the total amount of net profits derived from working the line was £98,693 to the 30th of June. The interest account does not show the total amount of interest paid to the shareholders from the commencement. The interest paid to shareholders and debenture holders for the half-year ending 31st of December, 1857, amounted to £80,862

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

As the most efficient and fragrant aromatic purifier of the Breath, Teeth, and Gums ever known, ROWLANDS' ODONTO has, for a long series of years, occupied a distinguished place at the Toilets of the Sovereigns and the Nobility throughout Europe; while the general demand for it at once announces the favour in which it is universally held.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAGNESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the PROFESSION, for removing BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

ALLEN'S
MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH. New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison. The Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Skin diseases are prevalent everywhere, and everywhere it is known that Holloway's matchless Ointment is a speedy remedy. The demand for it is extraordinary. When the Ointment is applied to the diseased part the effect is wonderful. It is more like that of magic than of medicine; but the relieved patient need not let his astonishment and delight be dashed with fear or doubt as to the ultimate result of so sudden an action on the system, for this famous Ointment is as innocent and benign as it is powerful. It does not throw the disease inwards, but insinuates itself through the pores of the skin to the original cause of the evil, and effects a perfect cure.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 24th of each month. When any of these dates fall on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday; in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 19th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay papers of the 9th October allude to an unpleasant, but fortunately unauthenticated, rumour, circulating in the Calcutta-bazaar, to the effect that "our illustrious ally," Sir Jung Bahadoor, G.C.B., was in full march upon Darjeeling, at the head of 18,000 Ghoorkas. The report may be accounted for by the fact that Calcutta had been free from a panic for at least a fortnight, and it was therefore quite time to get up another.

The Commander-in-Chief has at length made a move, and is reported en route for Lucknow. Active operations may be expected to have commenced about the middle of October, and as a splendid army, well equipped and practised in war, is at his Excellency's disposal, the termination of the rebellion can hardly be very distant. In the meantime several brilliant exploits have been achieved on a small scale, by officers in command of divisions and detachments. As mentioned in our last Summary, a body of the rebels, numbering 5,000 men with four guns, under Ram Sing, had posted themselves in a small island in the Gogra, not far from Durriabad. Here they were attacked by a column of mixed troops, not more than 800 strong, and totally defeated, with a loss of 1,000. This occurred on the 18th September, and five days later an equally successful action was fought at Selimpore. A small force from Lucknow, under Major Bulwur, consisting of 200 European Infantry, 400 Police Cavalry, and two 9-pounders, at an early hour of the 23rd stormed an entrenchment, captured four guns, and killed between six and seven hundred of the enemy. On both these occasions the loss on the part of the British was altogether insignificant; in the former affair, Lieut. MacGregor, H.M.'s 78th, received a sword wound, and in the latter, Lieut. Moore sustained a slight contusion.

A third party of rebels had been cut up near Turrowlee, in the Muttra division, when 200 were "accounted for." In the Shahabad district also some few skirmishes are stated to have taken place with the usual result, except that the insurgents fled from the field before any signal chastisement could be inflicted. Brigadier Macduff, however, had been more fortunate in the neighbourhood of Jalaon. With a column detached from the Saugor Field Force, and consisting chiefly of Sikh Horse and the Jhansi Horse and Foot Police, he drove the insurgents from a strong position, and killed 200 of them. General Michel, C.B., achieved a yet more complete success on the 15th Oct., not far from Rajghur, scattering Tantia Topee's followers in all directions. The pacification of Central India may now be looked for at no remote date.

In the Bombay Presidency some trifling disturbances had been caused by the Bheels and Kolies, but not of a more serious character than often times previous to the mutinies. Lord Elphinstone had returned to the Presidency for a few days—possibly to welcome our late celestial visitor, the comet, which was first seen at Bombay on the 29th September.

The health of the European troops at the great stations of Allahabad, Lucknow, and Gwalior, had suffered severely from attacks of fever. At the last mentioned station H.M.'s 86th regiment had 100 men in hospital—one-fifth of its entire strength. Sickness, however, was not confined to these places. We regret to learn that Sir John Lawrence, Brigadier Chamberlain and Colonel Edwardes, will all be compelled to return to Europe before the next hot season, in consequence of failing health. It is likewise rumoured that Sir William Colville, Chief Justice in Bengal, is about to resign the post he has long held so much to his credit and the advantage of the public. On the other hand, Lord Harris is stated to have recovered sufficiently to enable him to resume the conduct of affairs.

In our Home intelligence will be seen the Vice-Chancellor's decision in the important case of "Boldero, versus the East India Company," which will hardly be agreeable to those interested in the plaintiff's success. We may also refer readers of a speculative turn of mind to our advertisement columns, for the prospectus of the Berar and Eastern Coast of India Railway Company (Limited).

THE REAL VATES.

We have all heard a great deal on the subject of the late Sir Charles Napier's prophecies regarding the possible mutiny of the Bengal army, and we all know that Sir Charles, however sharp-sighted in most matters, saw the mutiny of 1857 through not the clearest of glasses. But the publication of the late Sir William Sleeman's letters to Sir James Hogg, in 1853, exhibit, at least, one experienced Indian official of the time as awake to the coming evil, and predicting its nature. But the case of this officer only adds one more forcible instance to the truth of the remark that a prophet has no honour in his own country. The opinions of the late Resident of Oude had never been concealed. He had been in 1853 a man of mark for many long years, and his counsels had a fair claim to consideration and respect. But, however long the ears were to which he preached, he did so in vain. They would not listen to his advice, though, strange to say, the advice offered was not only reasonable in itself, but was actually in some respects agreeable to the views entertained by the late head of the Government. We have said above that Sir William Sleeman predicted the coming evil and its nature, but we do not mean that he was foretelling in 1853 a mutiny of the Bengal army in 1857. He saw, however, that the policy of the day was placing the Empire at the mercy of its large and unscrupulous army, for a mercenary force must be unscrupulous. He saw that the annexation system, if carried to its fullest extent, would leave us the government of an immense empire, but deprive us of the sympathy and aid of the governed in carrying out the task committed to our charge. He regarded the native states as breakwaters. Their existence was our preservation. We had enough to manage as it was if we were to administer efficiently what we had already obtained. Should anything go wrong with us, the existence of well-disposed Native Governments would hold in hand the unruly spirits which have ever vexed this rich and excitable continent.

"The native states," writes Sir William, "I consider to be breakwaters, and when they are all swept away, we shall be left to the mercy of our Native army, which may not be sufficiently under our control." The late general was of opinion that the frequent confiscations and annexations which have formed the policy of these latter times would injure our permanent interests in the country. He conceived that these annexations would be regarded by the people with feelings of anger and detestation. They were opposed to their prejudices, and threatened not only these but their religion. But it would seem that the general not only regarded the annexations and confiscations as dangerous to our rule, but he considered that the doctrine itself, by its influence on the rising generation of public officers, would alienate from them the respect and affection extended in former times to the British name. Without entering into the question just now as to the feelings of the people of India on the subject of annexation as a principle, there can be no doubt that the resumption of rent-free lands, the breaking up of talookdaries, and other confiscations during the last twenty years, have had a very large share in alienating the affections of the people of these provinces from our Government, if, indeed, they ever had any affection to bestow. The agricultural population of the North West Provinces has no affection as such, or any ruler who has not only the audacity but the power to demand tribute from them. The time is yet to come for them to understand that they owe anything to any government. But say that if affection was wanting, there might still be confidence between the ruled and ruler. That confidence may have been freely given fifty years ago. We are not prepared to say whether it was or was not. But one thing is certain, that from first to last, from the commencement of our hold on these provinces, our revenue management of the country has been a series of blunders, consummated, in our belief, by the thirty years' settlement, heralded by resumption and confiscation, and illustrated for the benefit of any one disposed to read the moral, by incessant and unceasing transfer of the rights in the soil it was intended to secure and perpetuate. It may be that much of the spirit raised against us now is owing to the spoliation of government exercised towards the larger landowners of these provinces and the Punjab before the unhappy annexation of Oude. Certainly after that event the landowners of turbulent provinces met with little tenderness in their treatment from the new government, which promised the redress of evils and a reign of general happiness and peace.

It was well for the stability of British rule that some native states were in existence in Rajpootana; and whatever may have been, and still are, Lord Ellenborough's faults and shortcomings, the native government at Gwalior, preserved by him, has been a breakwater for us. We are glad to find that the feeling in England is against further annexation. True enough, there is little left to annex; but we believe that the assurance that we do not mean to play any more fresh tricks, as we did when we suddenly marched into Oude, will be of service in restoring to some extent the confidence in our honesty which, it must be confessed, has waned considerably of late years.

We are not one of those persons who advocate the restoration of provinces. We are sorry that such a small principality as Dhar should be given back. Still less for a moment could we listen to those who would recommit to the miserable family of Oude the government of that kingdom. If annexation has been wrong, and if the confiscation of Oude has been an especial wrong, we deserved punishment for it, and punishment and humiliation there have surely been. But we do not think that restoration of the kingdom to the dispossessed family, now that it has been already once won, and will be shortly re-won, either due to them or safe to us. Of the three courses recommended in 1853 by Sir William Sleeman, the last was followed. That officer suggested, 1st, a regency for the benefit of the heir apparent; 2nd, the management of the country by European agency, during the regency or in perpetuity, leaving the surplus revenue to the royal family; 3rd, the confiscation and annexation of the country, and the arrangement of pensions to the royal family. It is useless to discuss either of the two first propositions now, but we believe that it will be wise to continue the pensions on a handsome scale to the royal family after the province has been reduced to order, and our rule completely re-established. It is said that the Begum and many others of note in the province are willing to surrender on the promise of consideration. It is absurd to offer these people absolute poverty for the rest of their lives. We confess to seeing a reasonable difference between the outbreak in Oude and the rebellion in our old provinces. Both the Home Government and the imbecile (?) regency out here appear to recognise this difference. If so, they should act upon it. We do not propose the issue of any more proclamations. We have had enough of them, and so we should imagine has Lord Canning. But when we have restored order, let it be known that we shall not doom those who have fought for their country to a life of suffering or strait. When it is possible, let their estates be restored to them; where this cannot be done, and where there has been no murder of Europeans, or treachery, let those who surrender be guaranteed life and the means of existing. We of course refer to leaders of note in Oude. The rabble will disperse of themselves before the end of next October. Above all, in dealing with the landowners of Oude for the future, let the Government freely promise to all to whom their estates are continued, a reconsideration of their claims to those lands of which they may have been deprived, and a certain guarantee from future inquiry into the nature of the claims under which they now hold. In point of fact, let bygones be bygones as far as is practicable, and let us start afresh and keep out of sight for the future those ogres, resumption of rent-free tenures, confiscation of all old rights and privileges, and settlements with the people to the prejudice of the landowner found in possession of a fief.—Mofussilite.

THE MAGOORAH JAIL—A HISTORICAL.

Five years and a half ago the Military Board were requested to construct a jail, or rather lock-up house, in Magoorah. The orders were given, and in the short period of eleven months a detailed estimate for a building to cost Rs. 3,736 was submitted to Government. The work, however, had commenced three months before—in December, 1853—and in October, 1854, the lock-up was inspected by the Chief Engineer. He found that the walls, made of brick cemented with mud, had bulged, that Rs. 2,000 had been expended, and that the building was totally useless. He found also that the weekly returns of work sent in by the Native contractor exceeded the sum total of the work to be executed. He sent the contractor away, and a new estimate was prepared, exchanging mud for mortar, at a cost of Rs. 5,834. On the 17th October, 1856, this also was sanctioned by the authorities; another year more passed on, however, and in the second quarter of 1857 the Commissioner of Nuddea visited the jail. He found the building half complete, the walls bad, the floor spoiled, the roofing useless as a protection against the sun. No drains had been dug, no necessities had been built, and the entire structure, in fact, resembled nothing so much as the popular idea of the house of an Irish squire. There is no prospect moreover of improvement, as no one will consent to carry on the contract, and if it is completed by Government servants, it will be utterly useless as a place of confinement. The Public Works Department, therefore, have spent Rs. 7,000 on a jail estimated to cost Rs. 3,600, have been five years trying to complete it, and have erected a place which might be useful as a pigsty, but for the certainty of its falling in upon the pigs.

That little story is not, be it remembered, ours. Its details do not rest on the authority of any "newspaper writer," or any letter from a half-informed correspondent. It is told, almost in the words we have given, by the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, in a letter to the Government of India, bearing date 10th April, 1858, and published in the Indian Empire. Mr. Halliday evidently considers it a pretty fair specimen of the work accomplished by the department, and compares the result of their labours with that of a committee of residents in Magoorah, who have recently finished a hospital in six months at half the price.

That is not exactly the lesson the story is calculated to afford. That private enterprise should excel official effort is natural, and when the fact has been conceded, nothing is gained. Government, whether successful or unsuccessful, must build. It cannot buy jails ready made. It cannot do without jails. The compromise system of building through a contractor succeeds as we see. A fourth plan, that of ordering a building and paying for it only when delivered over in good order, does not excite sufficient confidence to induce Natives to contract, and is impeded by the wretched custom of "advances" which bind the payer, satisfied or discontented, to accept the work.

There remains but one alternative, simple, but we believe certainly efficacious. It is to assimilate the Bengal to the Queen's Engineers, by raising the men whom the officers are, by a pleasing but expensive fiction, supposed to command. With ten navvies under him, costing say double the pay of common soldiers, but bound by military discipline, the Engineer would be relieved from the possibility of such a blunder as that at Magoorah. A single trained European would have at all events carried out his orders. He might have made his own profit on the work. Conductors and overseers, though, of course, always pure as angels, or as sepoy in a proclamation, are occasionally accused of growing rich. Bricks might be washed away in the rain, timber might be destroyed by white ants, in a style intelligible only to official entomologists. But the work would be done, and done well under penalty of punishment, and the pillage, even if it occurred, would not exceed the ordinary profit of a contractor. At present the department pays for the work, pays the contractor's profit, and obtains in return nothing, except the conviction that it has been most egregiously swindled. The Magoorah Jail, superintended by two such men, would have been finished in six months, and have cost Rs. 3,000 less than the simulacrum of a jail which it has taken us five years to obtain. The wages of two men for six months might have been Rs. 600. By adhering therefore to the skeleton corps for the sake of economy, we pay an extra 33 per cent., and expend ten times the time we need in obtaining work which, when finished, waits only to be condemned.

Bengal requires, we contend, a corps of Engineers.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FRIENDSHIP OVER-TESTED.—Delhi letters inform us, that a party of disarmed Pandies may be seen daily proceeding down the Chandney Chowk, in charge of an armed guard, en route to their "homes." They are said to wear a dejected appearance, and the Mahomedans, who were doubtless their best friends a year ago, now merely point them out as "Purbean log!" So much for the Bengal army!

A HOUSE DIVIDED.—A correspondent of the Punjabee states that a Court of Enquiry has been established at Mooltan, of which Major Hodge, of the Bombay Fusiliers, is the President. The Civil and Military Authorities are said to be on excessively bad terms. The former assert, that the Military were fully warned by them that the Sepoys at Mooltan were shaky, but without any due precautions having been adopted in consequence.

JULPIGOREE.—A comet was seen at this station by some of our Sepoys at 4 P.M. yesterday, the 19th September, described by them as being very red and fiery, and travelling from north to south.

THE MOOLTAN OUTBREAK.—Statement showing the strength of the disarmed regiments at Mooltan on the morning of the 31st August, 1858, with the number killed, and otherwise disposed of, up to the 20th September.

Balance not accounted for .. .. . 157
Of this balance, stragglers are daily being brought in, and the estimate of those drowned and killed is below the mark, so that we can safely assert that all the Mooltan mutineers are accounted for.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—We are glad to learn that Government has benevolently allowed succour money to be granted to the poorer classes of their servants. Hitherto none of those who receive salaries under ten rupees a month have obtained any help in consideration of losses sustained during the outbreak: but now assistance may be obtained to the extent of five months' pay, or in the ratio allowed to some of the superior classes.

AN UGLY RUMOUR.—A letter of the 18th September, from Darjeeling, states that Jung Bahadur was marching down on that place with 12,000 or 18,000 men. The report, says our correspondent, receives confirmation from the fact of stores having been sent on to the depot; and moreover the women and children, as is reported, about 400 in number, are to be sent off to Dinapore. The sailors from this place, from Purneah and from Julpigoree, are already on their way to Darjeeling. In addition to this, rumour has it that the magazines, &c., of the Nepaul army have come within twenty or thirty miles of Purneh. The news is startling, certainly, and appears to gain credence from the unhappy circumstance of the coldness supposed to prevail in our relations with Jung Bahadur. Still we trust the statement is greatly exaggerated.

LUCKNOW. 29th Sept.—Nothing of very great importance has occurred since the last affair at Suleempore; the rebels have there had a lesson which will keep them from being too bold, or from approaching too close to Lucknow. Some troops (I believe half a regiment of police cavalry) have gone to the assistance of the Sundeela folks; and it is hoped that with this reinforcement Captain Dawson will be able to maintain his ground in case he is attacked by Harpurshad and Nirput Singh. Mr. Kavanagh has been sent as civil officer to Gooshaengunj, which is about sixteen miles east of Lucknow on the Sultanpore road, and only six miles from Suleempore, where the last fight took place. The military force which has been sent out to Gooshaengunj consists of a wing of H.M.'s 23rd and police infantry and horse, about 500. The treasuries of Fyzabad and Sultanpore have been re-established, and these districts are settling down. Beni Madho and his followers are still at Purnaydaypore, close to Pertabgurdh—we have possession of the latter place, and communication from thence to Allahabad and in to Sultanpore has been established. The Public Works offices, and Conservancy Committee at Lucknow, are doing their utmost to clear off all the ruinous buildings in Lucknow, and to render the roads of the city and station fit to be seen by the Governor-General. Some of the new lines of road which have been laid down will, when completed, render this a very fine city. The great objection to it formerly was the paucity and narrowness of its streets; now there is a new road in every direction, and of very proper dimensions. The Chief Commissioner himself takes a great deal of interest in beautifying the city; and he has an able coadjutor in the person of Colonel Abbott, the Commissioner. We have now a magnificent new road running from Huzrut Gunj direct to Chur Bagh, and this avoids the necessity of taking the long and roundabout road which led to these gardens formerly. Another very excellent road leads from the old 32nd barracks, straight through Secunder Bagh, to the river side, and then over a bridge of boats on to the Fyzabad road. This latter road is a great convenience to the military police officers, who all live across the river. I hear the new military cantonments are to be laid down on the land lying between Dikhosha and Alum Bagh, and that the old cantonment of Mundeean is to be deserted. I don't exactly see the reason for this change. It certainly cannot arise from any want of salubrity in Mundeean, as this position has always been regarded as a very excellent one for troops. Perhaps it is the wish of the Commander-in-Chief to keep the European troops on this side the river, and to make Mundeean the Military Police Cantonment. There has been a great deal of rain for the last two or three days; and even now it is pouring down famously. I fancy this will end the present rainy season, and we will then have our cold weather setting in. From the large quantity of rain which has fallen this season, we may hope to have a very cold winter, and the month of October will no doubt be cool enough to begin the campaign. No fresh troops have yet arrived at Lucknow, but some are shortly expected.—Delhi Gazette.

HOMEWARD BOUND.—There is no doubt that the three most influential and useful men of the Punjab, Sir John Lawrence, Colonel H. B. Edwards, and Brigadier General Chamberlain, all go home in the approaching cold weather. How is such a loss to be made good? It is a great subject for regret that ill health should be the cause.

DEHRA ISMAEL KHAN.—We hear from Dehra Ismael Khan that Brigadier General Chamberlain is still continuing the investigation of the plot; but that the inquiry is as far from a conclusion as ever. The Jemadar, who absconded, is known to be living with some Khuttees, in the Wuzere Hills, beyond our borders, but the chance of obtaining possession of him appears slight.

BRIGADIER MACDUFF'S VICTORY.—Brigadier Macduff, who commands the 2nd Infantry Brigade, having heard that the rebels who, under different leaders, had been scouring and plundering the district, were, to the number of 500 Sepoys and 3000 matchlockmen, strongly posted in a village called "Sahao," four miles north of Jalaon, determined, if possible, to try conclusions with them. Accordingly, on the morning of the 5th September, he started, with four guns and about 1000 men, two-thirds of whom belonged to the Sikh Horse and the Jhansi mounted and foot Police, the rest being H.M.'s 43rd L.I., the Royal Artillery, and Irregular Cavalry. Notwithstanding this array, which was formidable, although scarcely exceeding in numbers one-fourth of the enemy, the latter exhibited a disposition to fight, and continued to sound the "Assembly" as our troops approached. Their right was protected by houses and walled gardens, their left by the village of Sahao itself. From the centre of their position they opened their guns at a distance of 500 yards, and appeared determined to dispute fiercely the ground they held. Brigadier Macduff's force was immediately formed up, the guns in the centre under Captain Ommamey, Royal Artillery; Her Majesty's 43rd Light Infantry on the right of the guns, under Lieutenant-Colonel Primrose; a party of Metges' Sikh Horse, under Lieutenant Dick, took ground well to the right, to act as opportunity offered; the remainder of Metges' Sikh Horse, under Major Davis, took ground to the extreme left, with orders to sweep round the right of the enemy, and cut off their retreat; while a party of the 8th Irregular Cavalry, under Bissaladar Min Hoossein Ali, remained in support of the guns. The enemy's fire from their centre was immediately answered by our four guns, the fire from which was excellent, and soon made the enemy abandon, with the loss of a gun, the strong ground he had so well chosen. The rebel Sepoys of the right wing retired with remarkable steadiness, and in close order; but the left wing retired in great disorder, and in that state were charged in flank by Lieutenant Dick, who cut up a great number; here this excellent young officer was severely wounded by a sabre cut, but notwithstanding he again charged the mutineers repeatedly, sustaining two more severe wounds. Brigadier Macduff speaks in the warmest terms of the dashing soldier-like conduct of this officer, whom he has recommended to the favourable notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. The whole line then advanced, the cavalry charging the rebels repeatedly on both flanks, the guns being well to the front, supported by Her Majesty's 43rd. The rebels, now closely pressed, took up a second position on a ridge, but upon our guns again opening with great precision, they again retreated, taking advantage of any cover the ground offered, and defending themselves stoutly in buildings, gardens, &c., on the outskirts of the different villages. Major Davis continued the pursuit for about six miles. The Major also speaks in enthusiastic language of the prowess of young Lieutenant Dick, who seems to have covered himself with glory. Major Davis says:—"I was well supported by Metges' Sikhs, who suffered severely in the hand-to-hand encounter which ensued. Of Lieutenant Dick's operations on the right it is unnecessary for me to speak, the Brigadier having personally witnessed his doughty and glorious charge into a body of some 300 or 400 Sepoys. I have only to regret his being severely wounded in four places by sword cuts, not, however, before he had cut down some five men with his own hand." It is thought that about 200 of the enemy were killed on this occasion, and 21 have been captured. Major Davis, with an undigested relish for his work, says:—"On the advance of the cavalry, Lieutenant Stewyers and Lieutenant McInroy accompanied me in the pursuit, which was carried far beyond 'Gohun,' and throughout we cut up the rebels in the most satisfactory manner. The old Sepoys were easily distinguished by their keeping well and doggedly together, and of course were marked out accordingly. Our pursuit was brought to a close by our horses being fairly fagged out, and the rebels getting into entrenched gardens and topes, whence cavalry could not have dislodged them."—Bombay Gazette.

GWALIOR IRREGULARS.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has directed the organization of two battalions of Infantry in the Gwalior division, under the orders of Brigadier General Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., with establishments and scale of pay similar to the infantry regiments of the Punjab irregular force.—Captain H. C. Macpherson, of H. M.'s 78th Highlanders, who received the Victoria Cross for his gallantry at Lucknow, has been appointed Commandant of the 1st Regiment of Gwalior Infantry.

THE LATE MAJOR HODSON.—Lord William Hay, General Napier, and Brigadier Seaton have formed themselves into a committee for the purpose of raising a testimonial to the memory of the late Major Hodson. It will be unnecessary for us to do more than mention the existence of the committee. There can be but one opinion as to the brilliant services of the late courageous and spirited commander of Hodson's Horse. The public have long been anxious that they should be suitably commemorated. The delay in the collection of a testimonial fund has been due, not to any want of subscribers, but to the want of a committee to whom subscriptions could be sent.

THE BEGUM.—Rather an odd plan was recently adopted by the Begum to induce her military officers to take active measures against us. It is said she took a pair of bangles to the houses of the warrior chiefs, and told them that they should either wear them, and thus consider themselves women, or reject them, and act as men by collecting their forces and expelling the English from Lucknow. This reminds me of the present of pyjamas which she made to the sepoy, while Lucknow was being attacked by our forces in March last. The native officers neither accepted of the Begum's proffered gift, or answered her earnest entreaties to show more life and spirit than they have hitherto done. The Begum's intention is to fly to the Nepal hills when Boonree is attacked.

LIEUT. D. M. MURRAY, of H. M.'s 64th Regiment, has been appointed station staff of the Landour Convalescent Depot, vice Captain H. T. Macpherson, of the 78th Highlanders, who has received another appointment.

CONFISCATION.—Orders have been issued by the Government of India that all the Jagheers of the ex-King of Delhi are to be annexed to the British dominions, and new settlements are to be made.

BRIGADIER SMITH'S BRIGADE, consisting of a squadron of H. M.'s 8th Hussars, a wing of the 1st Bombay Lancers, six companies of H. M.'s 95th Regiment, and two divisions, or four gunsight field pieces, of the 3rd troop of Bombay Horse Artillery, left Sissay on the morning of 16th instant for Seronge and Bhopal, in which direction Tantia Topce and his followers fled from Jhalra Putan.

BRIGADIER T. J. FISCHER, commanding the Madras troops in the Bengal Presidency, has been directed to proceed to Fyzabad, and to assume command of the troops at that station, in addition to his present command. The Brigade-Major of Madras troops is to accompany Brigadier Fischer to Fyzabad, and perform the staff duties at that place, in addition to his other duties.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has conferred the Victoria Cross on the following officers and men of H. M.'s army serving in Bengal:—Edward Robinson, A.B., John Harrison, and Lieutenant A. Salmon, Naval Brigade; Cornet W. G. H. Bankes, 7th Hussars; Lance Corporal W. Goat, Private R. Newell, Troop Sergeant Major Spencer and Troop Sergeant Major Bushe, 9th Lancers; Lieutenant A. R. French, Sergeant Major C. Pye, Privates J. Kenny and C. Irwin, 53rd regiment; Private V. Bombrick, 1st Battalion 60th rifles; Captain Hon. H. A. Anson, Lance Corporal Sinnott, and Private P. Mylott, 84th foot; Major J. C. Guise, Serjt. S. Hill, and Private P. Graham, 90th foot; Capt. W. G. D. Stewart, Lieut. and Adjutant W. McBean, Serjt. J. Paton, Lance Corporal J. Dunley, Privates D. Mackay and P. Grant, 93rd Highlanders; and Capt. H. Wilmot, Corporal W. Nash, Private David Hawkes, 2nd batt. Rifle Brigade; Private J. Smith, 1st Madras Fusiliers; Lieut. H. E. Harrington, Rough Rider E. Jennings, Gunners J. Park, T. Laughnan, and H. McInnes, Bengal Art.; Lieut. H. H. Gough, 1st Bengal European light cav.; and Lieut. F. S. Roberts, Bengal Art., for acts of bravery performed by them during the operations at Lucknow.

GWALIOR.—We subjoin the following order, issued by Lieutenant Colonel Robertson, of the 28th Bombay N.I., to the troops under his command, on the occasion of the recent victory at Bejapore:—"Camp Bejapore, 5th September, 1858.—Lieutenant Colonel Robertson begs most warmly to congratulate the column, on the brilliant victory achieved by a fraction of it this morning. After many days of incessant and long marching among dense forests, over rocky mountain passes, and through strong-bottomed rivers, a glorious result has been obtained. A large body of miscreant mutineers, numbering from 400 or 450, have this day paid the penalty of their crimes. Lieutenant Colonel Robertson offers his best thanks to every officer and man he has the honour to command, and hopes that an opportunity may again occur of giving the enemy a good drubbing."

A NOTIFICATION in a recent Calcutta Gazette intimates that the cash balance in the Government treasuries throughout India, on the 30th April last, the expiration of the fourth quarter of the official year 1857-58, amounted to Co.'s Rs. 13,55,88,567.

CHANDERNAGORE.—The Hurkaru understands that the documents connected with the transfer of Chandernagore from the French to the English Government, are now before Lord Canning, and that the transfer will be effected immediately.

COLONEL F. SKELLY, of H. M.'s 37th Regiment of Foot, serving in Bengal, has applied for permission to retire from the service by the sale of his commission. The Commander-in-Chief in India has accepted the same, subject to Her Majesty's approval.

MYSTARIOUS.—We (Lahore Chronicle) regret much to learn that a charge has been made of a serious nature, affecting the reputation and liberty of a gentleman for several years connected with one of the Mofussil Banks. We refrain from indicating the party, thinking, as we do, that he will be able to clear his character triumphantly of the stain cast on it. We may, however, without impropriety, state that the crime charged is "a felonious breach of trust."

THE PERSIAN WAR.—The following General Order relative to the East India Company's regiments which served in the Persian Expedition, appears in the Calcutta Gazette:—"The Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council, with the concurrence of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India, is pleased to permit the several regiments in the service of the East India Company, which were employed with the recent expedition to Persia, to wear on their colours, standards, and appointments, the word 'Persia.' Those regiments which were present at the actions of 'Reshire' and 'Khoosab' will bear those names in addition to the word 'Persia.'"

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 27.—I may mention by way of intelligence, that orders are to be immediately issued, to the accountants, civil auditors, and Sudder boards offices to prepare to come to Allahabad as speedily as may be practicable. Where the unfortunates are to dwell is to me an unanswerable question. Lord Canning and his secretary and adviser care only to provide accommodation for the dutur. The clerks who compose the establishments may live where they can, and die if they cannot live for aught that Government care. Indeed there seems to be little or no hope of their case attracting attention, or exciting the commiseration of those in power, unless they embrace the creed of "the Prophet," which appears to be decidedly in the ascendant in these parts. Brahminism might do; but Islamism is THE THING just now. Happily the poor clerks have a foolish objection to this course, on the score of a reckoning which will hereafter be demanded by an authority higher than the Governor-General or any of his secretaries. In this Court they fear Islamism may be looked on with disfavour.—Delhi Gazette.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NUISANCES.—One of the greatest nuisances about Madras is the native driver—from the coachman in a glazed hat, cockade, frock coat, and top-boots, down to the diminutive naked Ramsammy who squats across the poll of a crazy pony hackery. A native never thinks of getting out of the way. That job he leaves to the European driver; and the fewness of accidents in comparison to the carelessness displayed is quite remarkable. It is indeed surprising that natives are not run over by the hundred. It is not sufficient to clear them with your horse; after that is done, a native with his eyes staring open will, unless shouted to (and often then), walk deliberately under your wheel. They seem, all classes of them, to have a dull, stupid, brutal, indifference to danger until they are pinched; but when that occurs, no race in the world will howl out more despicably or pitifully. It is not uncommon to see a child of ten or twelve months old set down by its mother in front of a horse going at full trot. This occurred before a gentleman's buggy the other day. The horse was suddenly and violently pulled up, but not before it had stepped over the child, whose preservation was a miracle. Then, and not till then, did the egregiously stupid and careless mother wake out of her apathy, to scream and blubber as if the little black monkey had been trampled to death. Much of this might be remedied by an attentive police—not the lazy, lounging, gossiping, sleepy, idlers that are called police in Madras, but a police such as the same men would be if they were well kept up to the mark.—Athenaeum.

GOOD PICKINGS.—The Madras Athenaeum gives the following as the amount of money ordinarily received by a Madras Civilian in thirty-five years of service:—

|--------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| 1st year—Student at Presidency ..                            | £390   |
| 2nd to 6th " Assistant, at £72 (average) per mensem          | 4,200  |
| 7th " 10th " Head Assistant, at £81 (lowest figure) per mns. | 3,880  |
| 11th " 13th " Furlough, at £500 per annum                    | 1,500  |
| 14th " 20th " Sub-Judge, or Sub-Collector, at £140 per mns.  | 1,1760 |
| 21st " 25th " Judge or Collector, at £230 per mns.           | 13,800 |
| 26th " 30th " Ditto ditto ditto                              | 13,800 |
| 31st " 35th " High functionary, at £375 per mns.             | 22,500 |

That is less than the pay in Bengal, a Civilian from his fourteenth to his twentieth year drawing usually £2,000 a year, or £14,000.

BANGALORE.—We are glad to state that the head quarters of the electric telegraph department of the Madras Presidency has been again removed to Bangalore, and we have much pleasure in hailing the arrival of Mr. John Hudleston Nowill, that indefatigable public servant who has most deservedly attained the rank of officiating deputy Superintendent.

BISHOP DEALTRY.—The right reverend the Lord Bishop of the diocese will leave the Hills shortly and complete his visitation along the western coast, returning by Mercara and Bangalore to the Presidency in time to hold a confirmation in November next, when also he will consecrate the new church of the Gospel Society, just completed at Vepery. The sacred edifice is a very handsome structure, reflecting the highest credit on the architect, Mr. John Law.—Madras Spectator.

BOMBAY v. MADRAS LITIGATION.—The gentlemen of the long robe in Bombay evidently reap a much more abundant harvest than their brethren at Madras. The third term for the trial of civil suits should have commenced, according to the rules of Court in Bombay, on the 25th August, and we learn from a correspondent of the Gazette that on that day thirty-seven cases were entered on the Prothonotary's Board. On the last day of term, the 13th instant, they still remained there, the Court having been engaged during the whole of term in bringing up arrears of former terms. There was a prospect, therefore, of the proper business of the term commencing after the Criminal Sessions, which opens on Saturday next, and being continued until it joined in with the business of the fourth term, which commences on the 3rd of November. In Madras the third term commenced on the 11th instant, when there were only four equity cases for hearing, of no importance whatsoever, and, we fear, of little pecuniary profit to the profession.—Madras Spectator.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—Lady Rawlinson and family left this for Madras yesterday by Burghall and Co's horse transit, having been preceded some days ago by Sir Christopher, who we hear will not pay us any more of his annual visits to this station in consequence of being about to retire from India. Should this prove the case, the presidency will lose a judge who, for talent, probity and justice, has never been excelled in this country.—Bangalore Herald, Sep. 28.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—We understand that the Commander-in-Chief is about to proceed on a tour to Trichinopoly, the western coast, Jaulnah, the eastern coast, &c. It is said that his excellency will leave his staff at Ootacamund and be accompanied only by his aide-de-camp.

RAILWAY SCHEMES.—If the railway projects now in course of execution and under consideration for this Presidency are fully carried out, we shall soon have no fewer than 2,051 miles of iron way open for use in Southern India. The officiating Consulting Engineer lately submitted a return to Government showing the distances of the several lines. The South West line from Madras to Calicut under construction is 400 miles long, and its two branches from Vaniembady to Bangalore and Coimbatore to the foot of the Neilgherries 90 and 25 miles respectively. North West line from Arcunum (42½ miles from Madras) via Trittany, Cuddayah and Bellary to the Toodgabudra, under construction, 286 miles. Great Southern of India, sanctioned, from Nagore via Tanjore and Trichinopoly to Salem 177 miles, and from Taticorin via Madura to Trichinopoly 173 miles. The Great Southern Mahratta Railway (proposed) from Poona via Sattara, Kolapore, Belgaum and Hurrhur to Bellary about 500 miles, and from the navigable head of the Sedahgur river via Hoobly to Hyderabad 400 miles.—Spectator Sept. 24.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BARODA RAILWAY.—It has been at length resolved, says the Bombay Standard, that the Surat section of the Baroda Railway shall start direct from the presidency, and not from Callian, as was at one time intended. It will proceed along the Flats, in a line nearly parallel with the Main Drain, and reaching Mahim Wood, about 100 yards or so to the eastward of the present railway station, will cross the estuary obliquely, to near the northern end of the Jamsetjee Bund. It will then be continued along through Salsette towards the Bassein crossing, a very formidable work, the difficulty of which is now to be braved.

GAS LIGHTS.—Mr. D. Evans, Chairman of the Bombay Gas Company (formed in London), forwarded a communication to the Municipal Commissioners on the 9th September, requesting to be informed whether the bench of justices have sanctioned the proposal made to them by the late Board of Conservancy, to take from the Company 500 lights at a price not exceeding that paid to the Oriental Gas Company at Calcutta; and he wished to be informed also of the further proceedings of the municipality in reference to this matter. In reply the Commissioners have furnished Mr. Evans with the same answer as lately made to Mr. Perkes, namely, that they cannot enter into any arrangement for the lighting of any of the public lamps with gas at present.

MOVEMENTS OF REBELS.—We are informed (says the Poona Observer) that Captain Keatinge has reported the gathering, near Nimar, in Central India, of 1,000 insurgent Bheels, who threaten to interrupt our communications with the Provinces. The Guardian says, "We understand that official information has been received of the rebels having crossed the Nerbudda into the Decan. Only a portion of them, about 1,000 have succeeded in so doing. Reinforcements of cavalry are on their way to Mhow, viz. the 1st regiment of Beaton's Horse, from Jaulna, and Lieutenant Kerr, with 500 Mahratta Horse."

THE BHEELS.—We have been favoured with the perusal of a letter from Seerpoor, from which we learn that the Bheels are becoming more and more audacious. They have stopped the dawk from Mhow, and stolen the cattle belonging to the Government Bullock Train, as also the tappaul horses between Seindwah and Mhow. The telegraph wire has been cut between Seerpoor and Poona, and three villages were looted and burned. The 23rd Bombay N.L.I. were in pursuit of the rascals, and expected to get away from Seerpoor on the 4th Oct.; but they were greatly inconvenienced by the want of carriage, as the villagers were afraid of being ill-treated by the Bheels if they gave us any assistance.—Poona Observer.

DEATH OF LIEUT. LUCAS.—We regret to observe that Lieut. James C. De N. Lucas, of the Bombay Artillery, died at Barrackpore on or about the 14th September last. Lieut. Lucas served during the campaign in Central India, with Capt. Woolcombe's battery, which he left after the capture of Calpee, and proceeded to Calcutta on sick leave.—Bombay Times.

GENERAL JOHN JACOB has earned a fresh claim to public esteem by breaking up a gang of slave-dealers, who, in an evil hour for themselves, ventured into the vicinity of Jacobabad. We have been for some time apprised of the extensive traffic in human flesh, accompanied by most villainous excesses carried on by Arab masters of vessels and gipsy auxiliaries like those on whom General Jacob has just brought down the scourge of justice.

LIEUTENANT KERR.—We (Bombay Times) are rejoiced to learn that that gallant young officer Lieut. W. A. Kerr, 24th Bombay N. I., second in command of the Southern Mahratta Horse, who has recently received the much-coveted decoration of the Victoria Cross for his bravery and self devotion in the suppression of a dangerous mutiny last year at Kolapore, has, on the recommendation of Sir Hugh Rose, been appointed to the special command of a body of five hundred Southern Mahratta and Aden Horse now assembling at Tooljapoor for service in Central India. The force is being got together at General Michel's urgent requisition. Though it will be for general service against the rebels, its chief object is, if possible, to run down the Nana's Commander-in-Chief, Tattia Topee, whose forces are, since their severe defeat by General Michel at Beora, near Indore, in Malwa, on the 15th September, disorganised and scattered throughout the country. Tattia, who has a reward of £5,000 on his head, is said to be accompanied by a fanatical guard of Wulaitees, who have a large quantity of treasure and valuables with them.

THE SECRETARIATE.—We regret to hear that another severe attack of dysentery has compelled Mr. Secretary Hart, who has of late been absent on sick leave in Poona, to apply for three months' leave of absence, as a total cessation from office work has been recommended by his medical advisers. Mr. Hart, we understand, purposes taking a sea voyage to Singapore for the recovery of his health, and it is to be hoped he will return with a recruited frame, to resume his duties in the Secretariate. It is currently rumoured that during Mr. Hart's absence, Mr. H. Young, Chief Secretary, will have charge of the General, Mr. H. L. Anderson of the Ecclesiastical, and Colonel Melvill of the Public Works Departments.

DOCKS.—We find frequent complaints made by the mercantile and shipping community of Bombay, with regard to the inconvenience and delay caused by the insufficient accommodation existing for repairing ships. The difficulty will be easily understood, when it is known that we cannot boast of any more docks than two, and those two only available to the public at a great sacrifice of time and expense. We have the Honourable Company's Docks, and those of the P. and O. Company at Mazagon, and all the merchant ships have recourse to these for repairs; but they are incapable of reaching the wants of the large shipping in the harbour. With a view to avoid this difficulty, the Bombay Steam Navigation Company, in 1845, ordered from England a patent slip, which, on arrival here, cost them a sum of Rs. 68,000, but the object was frustrated by Government refusing to provide them with a piece of ground. The slip has been running to waste for the last ten or eleven years, and much of the timber work has become rotten; however, the Company have felt the necessity of re-erecting the project, and they have now again applied to Government for a piece of ground in Mazagon for the patent slip. The Engineer of Public Works and the Municipal Commissioners have reported to Government, through the Collector of Land Revenue, that they see no objection to grant the application, as they will not require the ground in question for any public purpose. The Garrison Engineer, however, has intimated that though it may not be required now for public use, it might be ultimately wanted for that purpose. So the matter at present rests with Government.—Bombay Gazette.

LIEUTENANT R. G. HOPE JOHNSTONE, of the 13th Regiment Bombay N.I., Deputy Assistant Adjutant General to the Chief of the Staff in India—and one of the leading heroes of Lucknow—has been permitted by the Supreme Government to proceed to Europe, on leave of absence, on sick certificate for fifteen months, under the new furlough regulations—Brevet Major H. Hope Crealock, of H. M.'s 90th Foot, has been appointed to act as Deputy Assistant Adjutant General to the Chief of the Staff, from the date, viz. 23rd August, on which Lieutenant Johnstone left headquarters, and until that officer's return from England.

LOWRY V. SCHOKMAN.—Dr. Jas. Lindsay Lowry has laid an information against John William Schokman, before W. Crawford, Esq., for perjury. The grounds upon which the charge is based are that on the 28th June last defendant charged plaintiff, Mr. Edward Jordan, and Mrs. Rebecca Schokman with having concerted and concocted a scheme for subjecting defendant to a false accusation, for the purpose of procuring from defendant a portion, or the whole, of his wealth; and that for the aforesaid purpose, he, the plaintiff, by certain drugs and patches, produced upon the body of Mrs. Rebecca Schokman the appearance of bruises; and that Dr. Reynolds was deceived by the said bruises, and gave evidence to that effect. Further, that defendant swore that the plaintiff, in 1835, in pursuance of his scheme, disseminated a false report that defendant had brutally maltreated the said Rebecca Schokman. Further, that defendant falsely swore that plaintiff, and the said Mr. Edward Jordan, and Rebecca Schokman conspired to subject defendant to a false accusation, to procure his conviction of a crime. Dr. Lowry then describes the state in which he found Mrs. Rebecca Schokman when called upon to visit her professionally on the first occasion after her marriage. The plaintiff having denied the allegations brought against him in the information and deposition of John William Schokman, averring them false, charged the said John William Schokman with perjury, and prayed that he may be dealt with according to law. Mr. John William Schokman has been summoned to attend the police office to answer the charge.

COL. AINSLIE.—It affords us very great pleasure to be enabled to give the most positive contradiction to the report that has gained such a wide circulation of the death of Colonel Ainslie, of H. M.'s 14th Light Dragoons. His Excellency Sir Henry Somerset telegraphed for information regarding the report of this officer's death, and has ascertained that it was entirely without foundation. When last heard of Colonel Ainslie was alive and well, and was very shortly expected to arrive at Jhansi, the Head Quarters of the Brigade he was appointed to command.

THE GOVERNOR'S PERSONAL STAFF.—Colonel H. Bates, who has long filled the office of Military Secretary to the Right Honourable the Governor, has been appointed His Lordship's Private Secretary, in the place of Mr. W. P. Adam.

MAJOR ERSKINE, the Commissioner of the Jubulpore division, goes home immediately on sick leave, and is expected to be succeeded by Mr. Patten, of the Bengal Civil Service.

FREIGHTS.

To London, 15s. to £1. 15s.; Liverpool, 15s. to £1. 6s. per ton.

Imports (Bombay, Oct. 9).—Metals.—All kinds of metals continue dull, except Copper Tiles, which have an active inquiry. Cotton Manufactures.—A large amount of business has been done during the period under notice. An improved inquiry at enhanced prices has existed for those goods which are scarce, such as Jaconets and Shirtings. In Grey Goods, Shirtings both of 40 in. and 45 in. are in demand, at or slightly above the last quotations. An increased inquiry has existed for Long Cloths, at steady prices. T. Cloth has slightly improved in inquiry and value. Twill or Drill is very dull. For Domestic the inquiry has revived a little. Madapolams remain as last, also Printers. Jaconets are in better inquiry at higher prices. Mull is steady. In Bleached and Glasgow Goods we do not notice any material change. In Turkey Red Goods there is no change for the better. Yarns.—An increased demand prevails for both Wale and Water Twist, at higher rates, and there has been a fair business done in them. Red and Orange Yarn remain firm. Green is dull. Sewing Thread has slightly advanced in inquiry and value. Woollens.—Very little doing. Cochiseal has declined, Rs. 1-8 to Rs. 2 per lb. Saffron.—In fair request. Beer continues dull. Wines and Spirits.—The e are also dull.

Exports (Bombay, October 9).—Cotton.—This staple has now commenced to arrive freely, fair supplies having been received during the last fortnight from Broach, Surat, Dholera, Compta, and Vingoria. Oomrawatee is scarce. The market was quiet up to the arrival of the last Overland Mail, when the receipt of home intelligence imparted a stimulus to the market, and raised the demand. However, the prices at present are about Rs. 5 less per candy than those last quoted. A moderate business has been done for the European market, but there has not been much done for China, from whence unfavorable advices have been received. Oil Seeds.—The market is steady, at firm rates. Linseed is scarce and in demand, and large transactions at former rates have been entered into for ready and future delivery. Rape Seed is also limited in supply, and inquired for. For Seed the prices are well maintained, and an increased inquiry prevails. Wool.—This commodity is almost out of inquiry, and the stock is but limited. Hemp.—Rather dull. Coffee.—Malabar is scarce, and Mocha, which has arrived in but small quantity, has been sold at Rs. 11 to Rs. 11-8 p. pound. Pepper.—A limited stock of both Malabar and Buticoll, the former selling at Rs. 95 per candy, and the latter at Rs. 103. Saltpetre.—Mooltan was bought at Rs. 14, and Sind at Rs. 9 per bag of 1 1/2 cwt.

Bombay Gazette, Oct. 9.

THE PINJRAPOLE.—It is said that the municipal commissioners have it in contemplation to devote the attention to the abominations which have lately been so fully exposed in the public press, in connection with the asylum for old and diseased animals, maintained by the Banians and others at an enormous expense under this title.

THE GOVERNOR.—Lord Elphinstone returned from Depoorie to Bombay on the 8th of October, accompanied by his personal staff, and his numerous retainers. His lordship will reside at Malabar Point, but is likely to proceed to Matheran at an early date, as Bombay is by no means an agreeable residence during the month of October.

CEYLON.

COOLIES.—Eighty-four thousand coolies have arrived in Ceylon from India during the first eight months of this year, and thirty-eight thousand have left the island in the same period. There remain, therefore, forty-six thousand coolies more than there were on the 1st of January last, less any deaths that may have occurred during that interval. Though not in such large proportions, this continued balance of arrivals over departures has been going on for many years; and in many industrial operations the immigrant labourer has supplanted the native. As domestic servants the Malabars are now largely employed; as horsekeepers and coachmen entirely. In the trade of common carrier the foreign man and bullock are fast driving their Singhalese competitors off the road. In all estate work the Malabar is master of the position. Our roads are made by them; and even much of the money collected under the Road Ordinance finds its way into their hands. A few years ago, while then as now they did the work of the estates, it was a rare occurrence to see them employed as bandy drivers; while then, as now, they were our horsekeepers, but few comparatively were employed as domestic servants. In passing along any road in the immediate neighbourhood of Colombo a very large portion of foot passengers will be recognised as Malabars. And so in Kandy, and all along the road. That they find employment suited to them in Ceylon, and do not object to settle, is therefore clear; and our object in drawing attention to these facts is to inquire whether some means might not be adopted to locate them in certain situations, where, while their labour in crop time would be available for estates, their families might "increase and multiply." In the return of arrivals we notice a large excess of males over females—a fact much to be deplored. But we believe that if land on easy terms could be secured to them whole villages might be induced to settle in Ceylon. Our great want is population. We have not more (if even so many) than two millions of people; the land could well bear three times as many. In the movement now being made in the restoration of our tanks an opportunity occurs of locating some of those people. Could not the experiment be tried?—Examiner.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

To J. C. Melville, Esq., India House.
From Mr. H. L. Anderson, Secy. to Govt.,
Bombay.

CENTRAL INDIA.

The advanced force under Capt. Mayne, consisting of 420 sabres of the Malwa field force, reached Seronge on the 30th September, but found that the enemy under Tantia Topee had broken up his camp, and retreated towards Esaughur. This place the rebels attacked and captured on the 2nd October.

Brig. Smith, with his force from Goonah, reached Esaughur on the morning of the 5th October. The enemy, with his guns and elephants, had the same morning, at sunrise, left the place for Chundaree. Brig. Smith's cavalry, however, succeeded in capturing four guns.

Eight hundred Sowars had been despatched by the rebel leaders to plunder Runnode.

A combined movement is proposed for hemming the enemy in at Chundaree by the Mhow field force,—the force under Brig. Smith and the troops at Goonah, Saugor, and Oojein.

Maj.-Gen. Michell has been placed in command of the troops serving in Rajpootana and Central India.

With the exception of a slight Bheel disturbance in Khandeish, the Bombay Presidency is quiet.

Her Majesty's 46th Regiment and the left wing of her Majesty's 91st have arrived in Bombay from Suez. The former has gone to Scinde.

The Koonch Despatches.

(In Continuation from No. 367.)

Lieut. Baigree, Actg. Deputy. Assist. Qr. Mr. Gen., and Lieut. Lyster, 72nd (late) B.N.I., my interpreter, deserve also to be specially mentioned. The former was severely wounded by a sword cut, which all but severed two fingers from his hand; notwithstanding, he gallantly continued during the action to discharge his duties with as much efficiency as before. I had sent Lieut. Lyster with an order to the cavalry to charge. On his way he came across a group of some thirty Sepoys, skirmishers; single-handed, he charged in view of the pursuing force, cut his way through, and broke them; his horse was severely wounded. This is the second time I have had the honour to mention this officer for gallant conduct in the field.

The exertions of Dr. Arnott, super. surg., to take care of the sick and wounded, and to supply the field and other hospitals with medical comfort and requisites, are as unwearied as they are successful.

I ought before now to have mentioned the conduct of Dr. Vaughan, staff surgn., at the Pass of Mudderpore, where, on account of the paucity of officers, he gallantly led a party of the Hyderabad contingent inf., who cleared a difficult position of the enemy.

The great heat of the sun, and the numerous casualties, caused, unfortunately, by it, called into play all the zeal and devotion of the Medical Depart. of my force, showing how eagerly the numbers of it go into danger when duty calls them there.

Dr. Stack, of H. M.'s 86th R-gt., was killed in the streets of Jhansi, in giving his first cares to a wounded man in the conflict.

Brigdr. Stuart, C.B., Comdg. 1st Brig., reports that his best thanks are due to the officers of his staff, Capt. Fenwick, Field Engr.; Capt. Coley, Maj. of Brig.; Capt. Bacon, Deputy. Assist. Qr. Mr. Gen.; Lieut. Henry, Deputy. Assist. Comsry. Gen.; and Staff Surgn. Mackenzie; also to Capt. Lightfoot, Comdg. 1st T.H.A.; Maj. Gall, Comd. left H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns.; Capt. Abbott, Comdg. 3rd Rgt., Hyderabad Cav.; Capt. Field, Comdg. No. 6 Field Batt., R.A.; Lieut. Strutt, Comdg. No. 4 Lt. Field Batt., B.A.; Lieut. Edwards, Assist. Field Engrn.; and Lieut. Gosset, Comdg. 21st Co. R.E.; Lieut.-Col. Lowth, Comdg. 86th R-gt.; and Maj. Robertson, Comdg. 25th Rgt. B.N.I. Brig. Stuart, C.B., Comdg. 2nd Brig., mentions that his staff, Capt. Todd, Maj. of Brig., and Capt. Leckie, Deputy. Assist. Qr. Mr. Gen., afforded him every assistance. I beg also to bring to his Exc.'s notice the officers mentioned in Maj. Orr's despatch.

HUGH ROSE, Maj.-Genl.

From Maj. W. A. Orr, Comdg. Field Force Hyderabad Contingent, serving in Central India, to Col. Wetherall, C.B., Chief of the Staff, C.I.F.F.
Camp Bhowra, 14th May, 1858.

SIR,—I have the honour to forward the subjoined report for submission to the Maj.-Gen. comdg., of the part taken by the Field Force Hyderabad Contingent, under my command, as per margin,* in the action at Koonch, fought with the rebel forces under Tantia Topee, on the 7th inst.

2. I received during the night of the 6th the instructions transmitted to me by you, directing me to move from my encampment at Aite towards my left flank, and proceeding by Bassoop and Sinnow, align my force by its left, with the right of the 2nd Brig., which I should find resting on the village of Oomree. I marched during the night, and early the next morning (the 7th) opened a communication with Brigdr. Stuart, comdg. 2nd Brig. From Sinnow I advanced to Purraya, took possession of the small village of Daree, about a quarter of a mile in my front, and occupied it with a strong picquet of cav. and inf.

3. About eight o'clock the enemy appeared in force on my right flank, a large body of cav. supported by inf. moving steadily down towards Daree, apparently advancing with much determination, and having opened a fire from a batt. mounting two or three guns, one of them of considerable calibre, I moved forward my line, and a few rounds from the guns forced the enemy back to their original position.

4. Having received the Maj.-Gen.'s orders to take ground to the left, I moved in that direction to the front of the village of Oomree, from which I advanced direct upon Koonch. In my immediate front were some gardens and walled enclosures, held in force by the enemy, and from which a heavy fire was directed upon our line. The art., under Capt. Douglas, advanced, and its fire having silenced that of the rebels, I ordered the gardens and enclosures to be seized by the inf. This was very gallantly effected by a detach. of the 5th Inf., consisting of two cos. under command of Lieut. Partridge, 23rd B.N.I., doing duty 5th Inf. H.C., a very promising young officer, and the enemy were very quickly driven out. At the same time directed the whole of the cav., under command of Capt. Murray and Lieut. Dowker, to move to the right and charge the enemy's horsemen, who had all this time been threatening our flank. This service was promptly and effectually performed, the horsemen being driven quite off the field at this point, and forced back within the line of their supports of inf., occupying several deep ravines and broken ground, and from the shelter of which a heavy fire was directed. The enemy's guns at the same time opened with round shot and shrapnell. The cav. were subsequently joined by one squad of H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., and two H. A. guns, the whole commanded by Maj. Scudamore, and they retained possession of the ground they had gained until the general advance, when they also followed the enemy in pursuit.

5. The Art. had meanwhile advanced so far as to bring it completely within range of the enemy's guns from two butts, and they were thus enabled to open upon it a double fire of round shot, shell, and shrapnell, from the effects of which several casualties occurred. The rebel inf. also being strongly reinforced, again suddenly came forward with a rush in great numbers, and forced back the detach. holding the garden. I was about to advance once more at this point, when I learnt that the Maj.-Gen., with the 1st Brig., had forced the enemy's positions, and was in possession of the fort and town. The whole force now advanced, the enemy was driven from the enclosures he held, and joining in the retreat of his main body proceeded in the direction of the Orai road. I moved forward with the Cav. portion of the force under my command, and joined with H.M.'s 14th Dragns. the H. A. and H. Field Batt. in the pursuit, which continued for about eight miles, cutting up a great many of the fugitive rebels, consisting almost entirely of Sepoys of the mutineer corps of the Gwalior Contingent and Bengal army. The great start obtained by the enemy before the fact of their retreating became known, the extraordinary great heat of the day, and the utter want of water, and the exhaustion of both men and horses from these two causes, all combined to make the loss to the enemy heavy, though it was less so than it would otherwise have proved. The force returned to camp at 8 P.M., having been since 2 A.M. under arms, and in the saddle.

6. My best thanks are due to the undermentioned officers for the gallant, zealous, and efficient aid they afforded me throughout the day and at all other times, and I beg to bring their names to the favourable notice of the Maj. Gen.:—Capt. Douglas, B.A., comdg. arty. field force, H.C. Capt. G. Hare, comdg. 5th Inf. H.C. Capt. W. Murray, comdg. 4th Cav. H.C. Lieut. H. C. Dowker, comdg. 1st Cav. H.C. Lieut. R. K. Macquoid, Adj. 5th Inf. H.C., comdg. left wing 3rd Inf. H.C. Lieut. E. W. Din, 2nd in command 4th Cav. H.C. Lieut. H. Fraser, Adj. 4th Cav. H.C., and Staff Officer field force, H.C. Lieut. Westmacott, 23rd B.N.I., doing duty 4th Cav. H.C. Lieut. Johnson, Adj. 1st Cav. H.C. Lieut. Partridge, 23rd B.N.I., doing duty 5th Inf. H.C. Surgn. J. H. Orr, 4th Cav. H.C., and Sen. Surgn. field force, Assist.-Surgn. Sanderson, 1st Cav. H.C. Assist.-Surg. Burn, 5th Inf. H.C.

The native officers, non-commissioned officers, and men now serving with them, are to have the option at once of extending their period of service indefinitely, on the understanding that they will be entitled to all the privileges of the regular native army, their service in the Belooch regiments counting towards pension.

All men so volunteering will be required to serve wherever they may be ordered by government, in the same manner as the native regiments of this army.

The head quarters of each corps will be permanently established at Shikarpoor and Hyderabad respectively, and on the completion of any service on which they may be ordered, they will return to those stations, the recruits for the battalion being drawn from the neighbourhood of its permanent head quarters.

The practice of wearing the hair and beards as now obtaining in the Belooch regiments will not be interfered with.

Such men as may be unwilling to volunteer on the above terms will be discharged on the expiry of the period for which they originally enlisted. If at the termination of such period any may then be desirous to extend their service indefinitely on the new organisation, the question of their being permitted to reckon former service towards pension must be referred to army head-quarters for consideration, when commanding officers will report their opinion of the applicant's claim, character, &c.

Mr. CHARLES MILLS.—When the new Indian Council was formed, much clamour was raised at the appointment of Mr. Charles Mills, chiefly because his wealth rendered the salary a mere superfluity to him, and because it was not his intention to retire from the banking house of Glyn and Co., of which he is a member. Mr. Mills has deprived these objections of whatever weight they might be supposed to possess, by declining to accept more than the £500 per annum which he has received for twenty years as an East India director, transferring the balance of £700 a year to the credit of the Indian revenue. This voluntary sacrifice is highly honourable to Mr. Mills, and affords proof, if any were wanted, of his zeal in the public service. But the act, honourable as it is, can never be drawn into a precedent. It would be as preposterous to expect rich men to serve the State gratuitously as it would be injurious to the interests of the country, and absolutely impracticable under our system of Government to exclude men of ability and experience from high offices because they happened to be rich.—Home News.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, Nov. 6, 1858.

TEA-PLANTING IN THE HIMALAYAS.

PUBLIC attention has been so frequently directed of late to the cultivation of the tea-plant in our Indian territories, that Dr. Jameson's recent Report on the capabilities of the Himalayas for that purpose has been published at a most opportune moment. He tells us, for example, that the tea-plant will thrive throughout the wide-spreading district between Hazareh, in the far north-west, to the River Kalee, the eastern boundary of Kumaon, or over 50 degrees of latitude and 80 of longitude. He has ascertained, moreover, that the mountainous districts bordering the northern frontiers of the British Empire are capable of producing eighty-eight and a half million pounds, "without greatly interfering with the cultivation of other crops, were each village community to appropriate a certain portion of land for the purpose, a system which obtains in the tea districts of China." The average yield per annum on the older plantations is nearly 200 lbs. an acre; but, estimating the produce at only 100 lbs., the above result will be obtained in the following proportions:—

| Kumaon .. ..       | 350,000 acres | .. 35,000,000 lbs. |
| Eastern Ghurwal .. | 180,000       | .. 18,000,000      |
| Western Ghurwal .. | 180,000       | .. 18,000,000      |
| Deyrah Dhoon ..    | 100,000       | .. 10,000,000      |
| Jansar Parun ..    | 10,000        | .. 1,000,000       |
| Koolar .. ..       | 35,000        | .. 3,500,000       |
| Kangra Valleys ..  | 30,000        | .. 3,000,000       |
|                    |               | 88,500,000 lbs.    |

And this estimate does not include "large tracts of country admirably fitted for tea cultivation in Hazareh, Cashmere, Jummoo, and protected Hill States, which might afford an additional 200,000 acres, 20,000,000 lbs. of tea, and thus bring up the amount to 100,000,000 lbs. (a hundred millions of pounds), a quantity equal to the whole export of China, and with high cultivation the figures might be doubled, and thus not only give an immense quantity for the use of the Indian community, but at the same time afford a supply for a vast export to other countries."

There is, however, one great drawback to this smiling picture of India's future as a tea-producing country. It is the opinion of both Captain Ramsay and Dr. Jameson that the settler must be a capitalist to the extent of fully £5,000. And yet the amount estimated by the latter as the necessary expenditure for the cultivation of a thousand acres does not nearly approach that sum. The regular plantation establishment is set down at Rs. 6,360 per annum, to which must be added in the first year Rs. 2,492 for extraordinary expenses, such as implements, bullocks, buildings, &c., &c. This makes a total of Rs. 8,852 for the first year. The second is rather less, or Rs. 7,352;

but the third year rises to Rs. 10,384, through the necessity of erecting a factory, and engaging tea-makers, now that the leaf has become fit for gathering. The expenditure for the fourth year is still greater, being Rs. 10,400, because the land-tax or rent now becomes due, and packing cases have to be made. In the fifth year it is Rs. 11,960; in the sixth, Rs. 14,360; in the seventh, Rs. 19,660; and in the eighth, Rs. 24,060, the plantation being then in full vigour. This gives a total outlay over the eight years of Rs. 108,028. On the other hand, no returns may be expected until the third year, when the yield is put down at Rs. 8,000. By the fourth year the income will have risen to Rs. 18,000; in the fifth to Rs. 26,000; in the sixth to Rs. 50,000; in the seventh to Rs. 78,000; and in the eighth to Rs. 95,000. The total receipts in eight years thus amount to Rs. 275,000, leaving to the cultivator a profit of Rs. 167,972, equal in round numbers to about £17,000. It can hardly be said that this is a very brilliant prospect after eight years of toil and exile for any one possessed of £5,000 to begin with. Some few years ago Mr. Fortune calculated the necessary amount of capital for a fair start at £2,000, and we are disposed to think that with £3,000 a reasonable prospect of success might be entertained. It must be taken into account, however, that a certain portion of this sum will be positively sunk, without any return, by the necessity of maintaining oneself until the plants are fit for plucking, that is, for quite three years. The best plan, therefore, is to be contented with a smaller plantation, and to stock it with plants rather than with seed. A larger proportion of the capital will thus be absorbed, but earlier returns will be obtained, and, above all, pernicious habits of idleness avoided—to say nothing of harassing hopes and fears. But, in any case, the pacification of the country must precede the influx of British capital and enterprise.

THE DELHI BANK.

We tender our hearty congratulations to the shareholders of the Delhi Bank on their good fortune in being served by such zealous, energetic, and intelligent officers as Messrs. Hobson and Parry, and the other gentlemen who so creditably discharged their duty to the proprietary body in times of unexampled difficulty and danger. The position of the Bank has thereby been raised from the very verge of ruin to one of security, presenting the fairest prospect of future prosperity and success. A clear and honest statement of its affairs was submitted at a General Meeting held at Meerut on the 26th August, the chair being occupied by Captain A. F. Fuller. After briefly acknowledging the heavy losses incurred in consequence of the mutinies, the Manager's Report draws a faithful picture of the condition of the Bank's affairs on the 20th March last.

"The working capital stood at the low figure of Rs. 6,16,716-12-9, while it was about 28 lacs at the period of the outbreak:—the Government Paper was shown at Rs. 1,50,000, consisting of two items, one of Rs. 1,20,000, known to be in deposit in the Bank, and the other of Rs. 30,000, amount of half-notes found at Delhi; while the Loans appeared at Rs. 1,40,714-3-8. From this it will be evident that upon the present Managers have devolved the task of tracing out, recovering, or securing the recovery of the remainder of the Govt. Paper, since found to consist of one hundred and thirty-seven more notes, aggregating Rs. 2,28,600, inclusive of Paper deposited in the Bank for safe custody, and the remainder of the twenty lacs and upwards of the Bank's capital invested in Loans, and of tracing out and working up from such data as could be sought out or discovered, the many hundreds of individual accounts which made up the twenty lacs in question."

It must be borne in mind that the principal ledgers have never been recovered to the present hour, and that the greater part of the most important books and memoranda were likewise irretrievably lost. Under such circumstances the task of ascertaining the actual amount of the Bank's assets would have appeared to most people utterly hopeless, and, indeed, only so much labour in vain. But the Managers were aware that most of the Bank's transactions had been with gentlemen in the Civil or Military Service of the Company, and who were quite incapable of denying their liabilities, or attempting to take an unfair advantage of the misfortunes of their creditors. As was therefore expected, very few were the individuals who sought to repudiate their obligations. Some immediately took measures to pay their debts, while others furnished renewed bonds and afforded every facility for again rivetting the chains which had been broken by accident. In those rare cases wherein a capacious or litigious spirit has been exhibited, it is proposed to include the balance of such accounts in the schedule for Government Compensation, leaving the authorities to deal with the recusants as they may think proper.

From the figured statements subjoined, it will be observed that both the Capital Stock and the Reserve Fund are now brought on the books, the only doubtful assets being those entered under the head of Compensation Account, though there is little reason to doubt that the Government will admit the justice of these claims. The Suspense Account is explained to refer to the back interest due on loan accounts for 1857, but as some of these are unsecured, "the amount is allowed to stand over as a doubtful profit rather than a real one." Notwithstanding all the adverse circumstances encountered during the past year, there is an actual surplus of profits amounting to Rs. 72,327-4-7, or equal to a dividend exceeding 7 per cent. on the Capital Stock, but it has been wisely resolved that the declaration of a dividend shall be postponed for the present, and that 60,000 rupees shall be set aside for that purpose—10,000 carried to the Reserve Fund—and the balance credited to profit and loss. It was further resolved that "in testimony of the devotion of the late lamented Manager, Mr. Beresford, to the interests of the Bank, this Meeting authorises the disbursement of a sum not exceeding £140 per annum, for a period of four years, for the education of his orphan sons, if their expenses cannot be obtained from any other source." The invaluable services of Mr. Parry are recognised by a recommendation that 5 per cent. of the sum which may be recovered from Government as compensation be accorded to him by the shareholders; while the meritorious exertions of Lall Suddanund are acknowledged in the presentation of a silver watch bearing a suitable inscription. Finally, it has been determined, and with good reason, that the Head Office of the Bank shall continue for the present at Meerut, though future meetings may be held either at that station or at Delhi, according to the votes of the shareholders.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RETIRED MAJORS—ORDNANCE BRANCH, EAST INDIA ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Now that such favour has been shown to the Artillery and Engineer corps of the Indian army, may not the retired officers of those branches hope to come in for some share retrospectively of the benefits bestowed? They have not only made all the regimental majors lieutenant-colonels, but promoted them from their several dates of rank as majors in their regiments, altering also the previously promoted lieutenant-colonels' commissions in the same way. Will not this be carried out also as regards the retired majors (regimental) of the Ordnance branch, at present honorary "lieutenant-colonels" on the list; but who in fairness, may I not say, should now get another honorary step, that of "colonel," from the date of the "minutes" announcing the other alterations,—say 27 August, 1858, or more correctly, perhaps, from their present dates as honorary lieutenant-colonels, but below all the present "colonels" of the same dates? I find there are about 40, including only those who retired as regimental majors,—that is, in reality, "lieutenant-colonels."

Yours truly,
AN OLD BLUE.

ROLLS' COURT, CHANCERY-LANE, NOV. 3. (Before the MASTER of the ROLLS.)

BOLDERO V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

The Master of the Rolls gave judgment in this case to the following effect:—The object of the suit was to compel the East India Company to refund to the plaintiff the accumulated amount of a subscription paid by him, as one of the subscribers to the Bengal Civil Service Fund, in excess of half the value of the annuity payable to him out of the said fund, such half value being, according to the contention of the plaintiff, the amount of purchase money fixed upon by the directors of the company themselves. The facts of the case were briefly as follows:—The plaintiff, Mr. John Boldero, was one of the East India Company's civil servants in 1822, and in the month of May of that year a committee of such servants addressed a memorial to the directors, suggesting the creation of an annuity fund for the civil officers of the company, so as to give seven or eight annuities of about 7,000 rupees each to some of the older officers on their retirement from the service. This memorial, being backed by the recommendation of the Governor-General, was received favourably by the directors in London, and, in December, 1824, a document, known as "The Public Letter to Bengal," was addressed by the directors to their civil officers in India, in which the directors not only accepted the propositions made to them for the establishment of an annuity fund, but offered to contribute to make up the annuities to 10,000 rupees instead of 7,000. The terms of obtaining the annuities were also formally drawn up by the directors, upon the principle that each of the subscribers to the fund should pay a yearly subscription amounting to four per cent. upon their salaries, the company contributing to make up any deficiency there might be, subject to the proviso that each recipient of an annuity should, before receiving it, pay, or have paid, in subscriptions or fines, at least one-half of the calculated value of the annuity he claimed, and should have been in the company's civil service twenty-five years, twenty-two of which were to be residential in India. To accomplish this scheme regular tables were drawn out, under which it has resulted that, at the present time, some of the subscribers to the fund have paid considerably more than what would amount to one-half of the estimated value of their annuity. The plaintiff is one of these gentlemen, having paid, according to his own statement, which no one would be inclined to question, some 40,000 rupees in excess of such half-value. This excess the plaintiff claims the repayment of from the Company, on the grounds,—first, that under certain specified clauses in "The Public Letter to Bengal" of 1824, such repayment is not only implied but expressed; secondly, that the contract embodied in such clauses was a specific contract between the East India Company and every subscriber to the Civil Service Annuity Fund in his individual character; thirdly, that the principle of refunding the excess of payment over the half value of the annuities has been recognised by the directors in certain orders which they had issued in 1835 and 1841 respectively; and, fourthly, that in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies such repayment of the overplus has always been made.

His Honour, after carefully going through the evidence adduced on either side, held that no case had been made out to justify the plaintiff's claim; that the contract contained in the "Public Letter to Bengal" of 1824 was to be gathered not from the individual clauses that had been depended upon by the plaintiff as apart from other clauses, but upon the terms as embodied and explained by such document taken as a whole; that such contract was with the aggregate body of the subscribers and not minutely with its members as individuals, and as with one apart from the others; and lastly, that the orders and documents relied upon as issued by the directors in 1835 and 1841 were in no way destructive—as far as the plaintiff and similar claimants were concerned—of the integrity of the contract made in the year 1824 by the directors with the aggregate body of their civil servants, as subscribers to the Retiring Annuity Fund. The plaintiff's case failed, and the rule must be dismissed. Sir R. Bethell, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. R. Palmer, Mr. Follett, Mr. Butt, Mr. M'Naghten, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Freeling were of the counsel engaged in the case.

FROM NEW YORK TO DELHI by way of Rio de Janeiro, Australia, and China. By ROBERT B. MINTURN, JUN.

"We do not know any book from which persons who know nothing of India would learn so much, in so short a time and so agreeable a manner, as they might from this. Where, indeed, are they to look at all for what Mr. Minturn supplies in account within a moderate compass of the great features of Indian scenery, society, and government? There are political books on India, there are travellers' books, there are missionary books, but a book which did for a considerable portion of India what Mr. Laing did for Norway, and Mr. Stirling for the Slave States, was not, we believe, to be found until Mr. Minturn wrote it. We have in it a volume a compendium of all that it is most essential to know, put together not by a compiler, but by an acute and observant spectator and inquirer." Saturday Review.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the month exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are undeniably the finest Medicine for debilitated constitutions, disordered liver, bile, and indigestion. The wonderful efficacy of this salutary medicine, and the good effects produced on patients suffering from the above complaints would appear incredible, if it were not confirmed by daily proofs of the cures effected by them, and the permanent benefit derived from their use. The exhilarating properties of these invaluable Pills entirely banish all nervousness from the system, and strengthen the stomach, thereby promoting digestion; also persons suffering from dropsy should use these Pills, as they are the most safe and certain remedy ever known for that dreadful malady. When taken early their diuretic properties soon discharge the fluid and check the growing bulk.

PILLS. Price 1s. 1jd. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for, during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age.

These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

In the growth of the Beard, Whiskers, and Mustache, it is unsparing in its stimulative operation. For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR. Its invaluable properties have obtained the Patronage of Royalty, the Nobility, and the Aristocracy throughout Europe; while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the high esteem in which it is universally held, with numerous testimonials constantly received for its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

It would be a work of supererogation to point out at the present day the vast importance of railway communication in India. Fully to develop the rich and varied productive resources of that country railways are indispensable; and in a political point of view it would be difficult to estimate too highly the importance of such lines of communication.
 Recent events have too clearly shown the necessity of providing for the rapid concentration of troops on any point where their presence may be required.

Among the several undertakings of this nature, which British enterprise and capital have called forth, none offer a fairer prospect of success than that which is now submitted to the public.

The commercial advantages to be derived from opening out the valley of the Godavary, and the Berar and Hyderabad territories, were pointed out to the local authorities many years ago by the late Lord Metcalfe, when resident at Hy-erabad, and more recently by Colonel Cotton, of the Madras Engineers, in his valuable publication, "Public Works in India." In the "Appendix to Minutes of Evidence taken before Select Committee on the Government of Indian Territories," in 1853, at page 164 it is stated: "If, by means of railroads, the great cotton field of Berar, situated within the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad, were placed nearly on an equality, in point of facility of transport, with the maritime cotton districts, then a breadth of land, sufficient for the growth of a quantity equal to the full demand of Great Britain, might at once be made available. It is, however, only by means of a railway that the territory of Berar can be placed in a position to become a cotton-exporting country." Cotton, the great staple of Berar, would be brought down to a port of shipment at a very reduced rate of charge. That grown in the vicinity of Chanda is considered the best in India.

Wheat is another valuable product of Berar: its comparative cost in the interior and on the coast is as 81 to 66, or a difference of 113 per cent; while Rice and Salt, Sugar, &c., &c., which are the products of the coast, are respectively 175 and 200 per cent. dearer in the interior, owing to the expense of transit. (See COTTON, pp. 88, 100, 273, 274.)

Extensive forests of valuable timber would also become available, affording an ample supply of sleepers for the construction of the Railway. Teak, of the largest dimensions, might be brought to market at a much cheaper rate than that which is now imported into Coringa from the opposite coast of Burmah.

The Port of Coringa, situated at the mouth of the Goda-vary, on the eastern side of the Peninsula, and midway between Calcutta and Madras, is the only harbour on that coast. Ships of large burthen have been built there; and it has every facility for loading and discharging cargo, being free from the surf which renders the Coromandel Coast generally so inaccessible.

It is proposed to carry the projected Railway from the port of Coringa, via Chinour and Chanda, to Nagpore, with a branch line to the city of Hyderabad, and ultimately to connect the line with the Madras and Bombay Trunk Railways.
 The total length of the main line from Coringa to Nagpore is about 400 miles, and the cost of construction is estimated at about £3,000 per mile.

When the branch line above indicated, and the trunk lines of the Madras and Bombay Railways have been constructed, there will be a complete chain of communication from south to north, and from east to west, through the centre of India, opening up large, populous, and fertile districts, providing ready markets for their rich and varied products, and, as a natural consequence, augmenting the prosperity and advancing the civilization of the people. With the material prosperity of the population, their wants will increase, and new sources of demand for British manufactures will arise. With no such powerful incentives as the utilization and expansion of a port of the greatest commercial importance to the coasting and general trade of Madras, — with no mutiny, — with no conclusive Parliamentary evidence demonstrating the absolute necessity of railways on every ground, political, military, and commercial, the Government of India have hitherto recognised their importance, and have guaranteed almost every line proposed to them, subserving, even to a limited extent, the interests which this undertaking completely embraces. It is, therefore, confidently expected that the Government will freely extend to the present undertaking the same guarantee as has been granted to others, without which indispensable condition it will not be proceeded with;
 and the deposit of 2s. per share will be returned, after deduc-tion of the cost of survey and other necessary expenses.

Applications for shares must be made in the subjoined form, accompanied by the receipt of the Bankers of the Company for a sum equal to 2s. for every share so applied for.
 The deposit will be immediately returned on such shares applied for as may not be allotted. Scrip certificates will be issued to allottees, but no liability beyond the amount of the deposit will be incurred, until the guarantee above mentioned shall have been obtained. A portion of the shares will be reserved for India, Manchester, and other cotton-consuming interests in this country, in special recognition of the vast importance of this line to those interests, and as a nucleus to the formation of a Company having for its object that which private individual enterprise, unaided by British capital, has hitherto been unable to attempt, namely, the development of the vast cotton-growing resources of India in general, and this portion of it in particular, aided by such encouragement and assistance as the Government of India is already committed to, and may have it in its power further to confer, from the known interest taken by it in the subject.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extractions of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 8th October is the least interesting of any we have received since the commencement of the mutinies. At this we ought, no doubt, to rejoice, if the dullness of its chronicles indicates the happiness of a people. Our readers, however, might possibly prefer a continuance of the startling events which have so long held them in suspense. But though comparatively flat, there is still some news to tell of isolated exploits on a small scale. For instance, on the 27th Sept., Colonel Sawyer made a successful onslaught on a body of rebels encamped near Shah-janee. Previous to the attack he detached a small force, under Lieutenants Baker and Broughton, to intercept the enemy, in the event of his making for the Jugdispore jungle. One hundred rebels are reported to have been slain, while on the part of the British only one man was killed and fourteen wounded, including Lieutenant Chickens.

On the 23rd of the same month, Lieutenant Smith recaptured the thannah at Sassaendee, and, three days earlier, Captain French did good service by destroying a number of boats collected by the rebels in the river Soane. Some of the Gwalior fugitives appear to have attempted to rally at Sehore, a place about nine miles from the Chumbul, and, for a few days, telegraphic communication was cut off between Agra and Gwalior. But discretion was adjudged the better part of valour; and on the 27th the insurgents broke up from Sehore, and retreated in a south-westerly direction, under the leadership of Gunga Sing. The following general order by General Michell, after his defeat of Tantia Topee at Rajghur, will be read with interest by those whose friends are serving under that distinguished officer:—

"Camp Bioura, 15th Sept., 1858.

"The Major-General congratulates the troops on the brilliant result of this day's operation against the enemy in the plains east of Rajghur—a success achieved by their steady gallantry and endurance.

"The result has been the capture of thirty guns, and all their materials, with severe loss to the enemy, and their utter dispersion.

"(True extract.)

"(Signed) J. H. CAMPBELL, Capt.

"Adj.-Adj.-Gen."

We alluded in our last Summary to a ridiculous rumour adopted by the Turkaru to the effect that Jung Bahadur was in full march upon Darjeeling. The statement was so utterly absurd and unfounded, that we should have declined to notice it in any way, had we not felt apprehensive that our silence might have been misrepresented. The latest intelligence from Darjeeling fully disproves the report, Dr. Campbell having assured the Government that "all is quiet on the frontier, and there is no indication whatever of hostilities."

We congratulate the commercial community of Calcutta, and, indeed, the trading interests of Bengal in general, on the prospect of the early completion of the Mutlah Railway. The President of the Council of India has guaranteed five per cent. on a capital of a quarter of a million, for the construction of this important line, which, though only thirty miles in length, will provide great and much required accommodation for the shipping interests. As it passes, moreover, through a very populous district, it can hardly fail to derive a handsome income from the transport of passengers.

Lieutenant Lamb, of the Indian Navy, we are pleased to learn, has been appointed an assistant to the storekeeper general in the marine branch of his department.

From China the news is unimportant. Lord Elgin was still at Shanghai, but Mr. Reed, the American plenipotentiary, had proceeded to Japan. Count Putiatin, it is said, was about to return to Europe. The allied French and Spanish expedition against Cochin China have taken possession of the Turon forts, with little or no opposition, and the adjacent territory has been formally declared an integral portion of the French Empire.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

From Camp Subjane, 28th September, 10 p.m.
From Capt. Rattray, to Sec. to Governat. of Bengal and Commissioner.

Colonel Sawyer's column yesterday from Behn to Subjane. The 3rd Sikh Cavalry, and Bengal Police Ressalah, under Lieuts. Broughton and Baker, were sent round with a view of getting between the enemy and Peroo. At Subjane the enemy opposed in force, mustering some one thousand men. The cavalry drove them out into the open, and they turned and charged home, pursuing and cutting them up quite into the jungle, killing a rebel native officer, and eighty or one hundred men. Great praise is due to Lieut. Baker, who commanded. Loss—Bengal Police Cavalry, one sowar killed, 14 sowars wounded, 9 horses wounded. 3rd Sikh Cavalry, Lieut. Checken's Indian Navy, and a volunteer severely wounded.

Service Message from R. Simson, dated Allahabad, 26th September, 7.15 p.m.

It is reported from Agra on the 25th September that a large body of rebels are assembling across the Chumbul. On the old Bombay road at Sehore, about nine miles distant from the river, guards have been placed at the ferries in the Dholepore Territories. Telegraphic communication with Gwalior is still interrupted.

Service Message from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 28th September, 6 p.m.

The following intelligence, dated the 27th instant, has been received from Agra:—Major Macpherson reports from Gwalior that the body who were assembled on the old Bombay road are making their way to the South West under their leader Gunga Sing. This is confirmed by intelligence from Dholepore. The Gwalior road is clear, and the wire, after a temporary interruption, is working.

The following is from Lucknow, dated 27th instant:—The rebels who had established themselves at Sussaendee, after driving out the Thannadar, were attacked on the 23rd by Lieut. Smith from Baudes with five hundred police infantry, forty sowars, and a three-pounder gun. The rebels fled without resistance, losing three wounded and two taken prisoners. Our loss none; two men slightly wounded.

A HERO'S DEATH-BED.—On the morning of August the 29th, at five o'clock, he (Sir C. J. Napier) expired, like a soldier, on a naked camp-bedstead, the windows of the room open, and the fresh air of heaven blowing on his manly face. Surrounded by his family and some of his brothers, he died. All his grieving servants were present, and at his feet stood two veterans of his regiment, gazing with terrible emotion at a countenance then settling in death, which they had first seen beaming in the light of battle. As the last breath escaped, Montagu McMurdo snatched the old colours of the 22nd Regiment, the colours that had been borne at Meanee and Hyderabad, and waved them over the dying hero. Thus Charles Napier passed from this world. An intrepid soldier in his life, he died amidst trophies of battle, and his camp-bed was his bier; the colours of the 22nd gently waved over him, and between them the grand picture of Meanee leaned forward above his pale heroic countenance, as if to claim his corpse for that bloody field.—Life of Sir C. Napier.

OUR INDIAN COUSINS.—The Aryas and ourselves, it is hence obvious, are cousins in the human family. A body of the same people, travelling to the south came to India, by the mountainous passes leading to the Indus, probably following their sheep and goats, and acquired dominion over the Turanian peoples, the Dasys, that had got to the climes of the sun before them, and had become in consequence somewhat darkened in their skin. Another body of the same people wandered to the far west, and, after being domesticated and blessed there, have come to India, with their ships and with their goods, three thousand years later, and acquire dominion over the representatives of both Aryas and Dasys.—Dr. Wilson's "India 3,000 Years ago."

BENGAL

THE INDIAN FINANCES.

In reviewing the financial position of the country a few weeks ago, we thought it prudent to estimate the cash balances on the 30th April last, at £11,000,000 only. We now learn from the Calcutta Gazette, with equal surprise and gratification, that they amounted to Co.'s Rs. 13,55,88,567, equivalent, at the exchange of 1s. 10½d., the official rate of conversion, to £12,711,428. A comparison of this amount with the balances of the eight preceding years, will show how little the Indian treasury has suffered by these disturbances:—

Our estimate that the first year of the mutiny had added ten millions to the debt is thus unexpectedly reduced to a little over eight millions, the balance-sheet of the Company on the 1st May last now standing as follows:—

The fact is, that the financial results of this rebellion are of little comparative moment, and the increase of the debt by some twelve to fifteen millions sterling is the worst we have to anticipate on this score.—Bombay Times.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

No service in India has suffered from the mutinies so severely as the medical. Exposed to murder equally with the officers and the civilians, they have been wholly without the compensation both those services have received. The civilians have obtained promotion, the army 500 new staff appointments, and unlimited opportunities of distinction. In neither have the surgeons any adequate share. They can have no command of Police Corps, or pleasant appointments in the Commissariat, no authority to raise new levies, and no large share of prize money. As for distinction, the surgeon may work on the field till his constitution is utterly destroyed, be exposed to dangers such as beset the surgeons in the Cawnpore hospital, remain under fire for weeks, but his name will not be mentioned in a despatch. Napoleon made his successful surgeons peers. The British Government gives grudgingly to a man white-headed with toil, a civil K.C.B. For the young surgeon in Bengal there is literally no reward. He may have saved an army, but the highest rank he can hope for at forty is that of captain, the highest pay Rs. 1,000 a month, and the highest decoration the "mention of his name" in a despatch, which usually reads like a badly-arranged Army List. As for the quiet and security which once redeemed some of these drawbacks, they have disappeared. Dozens of surgeons have lost their stations. Dozens more are trotting about in charge of detachments, paid less than Calcutta clerks, and not half so much as Portuguese registrars. There is no acceleration of promotion. There is no hope of improved prospect, and the service overlooked, slighted, and ill-paid is thoroughly discontented. Already, as the Saturday Review remarks, at home the profession declines a competition under which Bengalees are preferred—for military service, be it remembered—to English gentlemen, and if they knew their real prospects, not even the few who now appear would present themselves for examination. The one advantage of the service, the pension after seventeen years' service has been postponed for eight years more, and educated Englishmen, always by the necessity of their profession men with families, after living for twenty-five years in a tropical climate, on a salary on which it is impossible to save, receive £300 a year for life. This, be it remembered, is in the majority of cases the history of a tolerably fortunate man. There are, from the constitution of the service, scarcely any prizes. If a man by dint of living on till his knowledge and keenness are half gone, rises above the surgeons, he is exceedingly well paid, but it is in middle age, not in decay, that Indians look for their reward.

Much of all this is irremediable, and so far as it springs from the catastrophe which has dislocated Indian society, the service patiently endures. But much is remediable, and more especially the ratio of promotion. For the first time the Bengal Medical Service have been brought into direct contact with the Queen's surgeons, and find themselves from the different constitution of the service everywhere superseded. The following lists will, perhaps, exhibit the difference more fully than any narrative.

Moreover, the staff surgeon draws the pay of Major, while the superintending surgeon is not a major till he has served thirty years, and when he is one does not draw his pay. In every grade, therefore, above assistant surgeon, the Bengal doctor finds his junior, in a service acknowledged by General Peel to offer too few inducements, far a-head of himself. This evil, at least, might be remedied by assimilation to the Queen's service. The reform has already been sanctioned for the artillery and for the engineers; why not for the remaining of the three scientific branches of the profession? The cost would be trifling, except so far as promotion was accelerated, while the benefit to the service and the country from the new energy would be immense. It is not, however, on that account that we advocate the reform, but as a measure of justice to a class of men as valuable as they are neglected.—Friend of India.

CAVALRY HORSES.

The Government of the Cape has just issued a Blue Book on the purchase of horses for India. The recent demand has revived the trade, and the colonists are convinced that they can supply all the imported horses needed for the Indian army. The book, which has been zealously circulated, is full of practical instruction as to the breed of horses required; the mode of securing strength, and the various systems of contract adopted by the Indian Government. The colonists, it appears, have for years made the mistake of crossing too frequently with Arab blood, to the detriment of their stock in bone and bottom. The mistake, however, may be remedied, and the true Cape horse is declared by judges like Col.

Apperley to be, next to the Yorkshire charger, the very best animal for cavalry and artillery. Of forty horses purchased by Col W. Have-lock for the 14th Light Dragoons, thirty-seven were, after eleven years' service, still doing duty with the regiment. Indeed, "soundness of constitution" is, in Col. Apperley's judgment, the grand recommendation of the Cape horse.

Of such horses the Colony it appears can supply 2,000 a year, at an average price of Rs. 650 when landed in Calcutta, not much, we believe, above the price stud horses really cost the Government. They can, however, be secured only in one way. Contracts of all kinds have been tried, and have failed, as have all schemes which require the intervention of breeders, stable keepers, or other horse-dealing individuals. The true plan is to depute a single competent officer to Cape Town, with power to offer a fair price for any horse he may pass. The breeders of the interior will then sell them to speculators, who bring them to Cape Town, and sell the rejected animals in and around the colony.

Under this arrangement there is no lack of supply, no possibility of blunder except through the incompetence of the remount agent. It is under this system that Major Goad and Col. Apperley have shipped 3,019 horses, 2,067 of them to Calcutta, within nine months. Of 1,362 of these, the record of whose voyage is given, only five per cent. died at sea. Indeed, the risk from this cause may apparently be reduced to nothing, for out of 243 horses shipped on the Himalaya only two were lost. If, therefore, Col. Apperley's statement as to the qualities of the horses is correct, the Cape Colony is still the best depot from which to supply the deficiencies of the studs.—Friend of India.

THE EUROPEAN SOLDIER.

The good time which is coming for all men seems near at hand for the European soldier. The Government, stirred partly by a sense of the pecuniary value of the soldier, partly, we believe, by English kindness, has really tried hard to secure the means of health. The immense addition to our strength, and the new and personal sense of the value of European aid, has quickened the inventiveness of the departments. Old rules have been set aside, and most of the great evils which in England have rendered the soldier's life less safe than that of the most dangerous trades are, in this country, about to be removed. The new barracks, run up rapidly, and called, we scarcely know why, temporary barracks, are on a scale never yet allowed. The barracks for instance at Barrackpore afford accommodation as excellent as regards health and comfort as the houses of private gentlemen. The blot in our arrangements, the inattention to the requirements of married soldiers, has been for the first time completely removed. Each of the hundred and twenty men allowed by the present regulations to marry will have a separate room, twenty-two feet by sixteen, or the size of an ordinary bedroom. A verandah very broad, and nearly five hundred feet long, affords the children space either for sleep or exercise, while the minor arrangements, so often and so fatally overlooked, have in this instance at least been properly provided. The punkahs in each room are pulled at the expense of the State, and allowing always from the noise inseparable from a barrack, there seems little to deter a respectable woman from the life of a soldier's wife. The difference which such barracks will make in the mortality of a regiment can scarcely be over-estimated.

Three other objects remain, however, to be accomplished before the life of the soldier becomes as good as that of the civilian. The clothing is still not absolutely suited to the climate. Few regiments now wear the stock, but it is not yet formally abolished. The unlucky private who at inspection cannot produce the stock he is never allowed to wear, is fined a shilling for a carelessness sanctioned by opinion and by habit. Any colonel who chooses can still compel its use, and there are officers still who believe it essential to a soldier's carriage. It should be prohibited at once, and not supplied again. The new uniform for the summer is excellent, for though we miss the red colour, the light gray stuff is perhaps the one of all others best calculated to resist the heat. But the winter clothing is still terribly heavy for such a climate. The coats just supplied to the men for the coming season is lined with strong serge, of itself as much as men left to themselves would be inclined to wear. The trousers are made of cloth so heavy and close, and in fact so good, that they almost stand alone. The boots are heavy, and the dress, we are told, with the belt, but without a filled knapsack or firelock, weighs fifty-one pounds. In this dress, if we are not mistaken, the men, after 15th November, are required to march. Imagine an English pedestrian, sportsman, or even yachtsman putting three stone nine pounds on him by way of a preliminary. Such a costume would be embarrassing in Canada, and in India, if it does not injure health, it at all events diminishes speed. We are aware that new soldiers, like all other men just arrived, are apt to think warm clothing unnecessary, yet nothing gives diarrhoea and dysentery so quickly as insufficient warmth. But a long flannel shirt would give all the heat required, and be twice as clean, without embarrassing the men's freedom of movement. The absurd weight of the boot should be diminished at once, and with reasonably strong shoes, a stout flannel shirt, and his summer uniform, the English soldier will be at least in a position to do all that it is in his physique to accomplish. To outmarch a native, however well he may be dressed, is for the European nearly an impossibility. The remaining object is to provide occupation. Supposing the soldier to sleep eight hours, and to be eight more engaged in parade, barrack duties, and eating, he has still eight hours to live through somehow or other. Soldiers' gardens—a great resource—are of necessity confined to special localities. Reading, another great resource, is available only to a portion of the men. There is just now too much inclination to rely on this exclusively, to forget that even among the educated it is not one in two who really cares for reading. To those who do not, books are merely a wearisome employment. A very large proportion of every regiment is therefore composed of men idle, not so much from a dislike to work as from a positive want of the means of occupation. Why not give them the means? Why should not all the work required by a regiment be done within the regiment, every man taking up some trade according to his training or his taste? We see no necessity for compulsion, and no object in employing it. Let every man be paid for his labour, of course at a very different rate from that demanded outside, and there will be no lack of volunteers. Boots, caps, tents, all the carpentry of a regiment, all its ironwork, and all its form printing might be done within the regiment itself. Two hours' work a day of a thousand men is worth thousands of rupees a week, and even two hours of steady employment takes away the irksome sense of idleness. It would, too, take away one of the most prolific sources of disease.—Friend of India.

THE QUEEN'S HALF-BATTA.

One of the first reforms which must follow the proclamation of the Queen is the abolition of the half-batta. This strange order, originally oppressive, and only persisted in because the army met it by remonstrances so strong and so united as to suggest the idea of mutiny, has recently become intolerable. The progress of events had made the grievance painful even before 1857. The stations within the circle of two hundred and fifty miles from Calcutta have become the most expensive in the Empire. Rent is thirty per cent., provisions fifty per cent. dearer than in any other part of India. Under the operation of this order, therefore, the officers compelled by duty to spend most received least.

The mutinies added another source of irritation. Queen's regiments for the first time in many years were brigaded with the Company's troops. Their arrival, which scarcely affects the cost of native provisions, drives all European eatables up to famine price. Beef and mutton, fowls and fish, all rise together, and Indian readers will appreciate the extent of the increase when we tell them that in Barrackpore the unlucky officers get but two fowls for the rupee. A little further in the interior twelve is not an uncommon number for the same amount. While thus raising all prices, the Europeans are totally unaffected by the half batta. They are on service, and no reduction is allowed. Since September, therefore, the case has stood thus. One Queen's regiment receives full batta, while another Queen's regiment in the same station, performing the same duties, receives only half batta, both being, we must remark, Europeans. So far is this distinction carried, that apothecaries and the rest of the "subordinate medical establishment" with the 4th Bengal Fusiliers are cut, while the very same class, belonging to the same service, but attached to H.M.'s 19th, are not. It is not possible that an arrangement so unjust should continue without exciting a feeling of exasperation.

As if to complete the grievance, the disarmed Sepoys, men who are actually as it were under surveillance, have been granted "compensation allowances," for the high price of food! Atta, their grand staple, has risen about sixteen seers for the rupee, and they are now actually receiving the difference in pay, while their officers, who are not disarmed, or watched, and who may fairly be presumed to be of some use to the State, are cut one-seventh of their pay.

The European soldiers are not taxed.

H.M.'s European officers are not taxed.

The disarmed Sepoys are receiving extra pay.

H.M.'s Indian officers are taxed fourteen per cent.—Friend of India.

AN INDIAN SQUADRON.

There is one branch of the Indian expenditure which ought, with the direct government of the Crown, to cease. We mean the Indian Navy, a service which, whatever its merits, is excessively expensive. That service contains at present:—

305 Total.

Expenses other than wages bring up the outlay to £650,000 a-year, and even this sum does not, we suspect, include all dockyard outgoings.

The Bombay Standard will correct us, but we have a fancy that the dockyard accounts are added to the military expenditure, as they were once under the Military Board. But however that may be, even £650,000 a-year is an expenditure unfairly thrown upon the empire.

The Indian Navy protects the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Arabian Sea, and the Gulf of Bengal. Why? No Australian ship watches our interests in the Pacific. No Canadian ship guards against a sudden invasion from the States. The West Indies do not pay their Admiral's salary, the Colonies of the Eastern Tropics contribute nothing even to Navy Commissariat. Why should India alone be called to perform a task which appertains not to her but to the empire? Or why should the Australias with a surplus be exempted from a charge thrown upon India with a deficit? Under the new Act, the fleet is not wanted. Indian troops are not to be employed in foreign conquest except on Parliamentary sanction, and on Parliamentary pay. Why should the Indian Navy be so employed? Why, in short, should not the Imperial fleet watch the Bay of Bengal as well as the China seas, the Persian Gulf as well as the Gulf of Mexico, the Red Sea as well as the Mediterranean? There is no special training required. The men who serve in China could serve as well in Bengal. Our Indian waters have no special danger, the Red Sea no difficulties insuperable to the Royal Navy. Why throw the expense on shoulders hardly equal to the burdens absolutely inevitable? India belongs to the Queen, and the Queen's navy should guard the Queen's possessions. A river flotilla we do want, and its officers should be supported by Articles of War. But flotilla service is no training for the sea, and the sea no training for flotilla work, while it is in the sea going navy that the expense is incurred.

Even if perchance this injustice should continue, the expense might be diminished. The Imperial Government has ships enough rotting in ordinary of all sizes, and in twenty harbours. Why not lend enough to the Indian Government? They would be none the worse, and something the better for the service, while they would be as much at the disposal of the Admiralty, as the Channel fleet. Such a loan would rid us at once of half our dockyard expenditure, of those triumphs of naval art, if local accounts may be trusted, which will neither sail nor steam, which cost ton for ton about twice as much as merchant vessels, and, when finished, are always wanting repairs.

There are no private interests in the way of the reform. The service is not very large, and may be taken over, ships, officers, and men, without the smallest difficulty. As they drop off, the new system will come in, without jealousy or heartburning, or interference with established interests.

Some idea of the kind appears to have occurred at home, for Commodore Watson at Singapore has been invested, we hear, with the full powers of an admiral between the Straits and Suez. From Ceylon, as its head quarters, a strong squadron, costing England but a slight diversion of her strength, could readily keep up the police of the two seas, and two great gulfs patrolled by the Indian Navy. There is no reason why the Queen's ships should be exempt from the reasonable authority of the Governor-General. At present he is compelled, as the mere servant of a mercantile company, to "ask the assistance" of any midshipman he may want. A few days hence, as her Majesty's representative, he ought to possess the authority invariably vested in colonial governors. With a royal squadron at Ceylon the Indian seas would be as safe as at present, England would have no increase to her burdens, and we should save some half a million sterling a year.—Friend of India.

MONUMENT TO BISHOP WILSON.

We are happy to learn that a tablet, in memory of our late revered Metropolitan—very handsomely executed, and appropriately designed—is in course of erection in St. Paul's Cathedral. The following simple inscription was directed by the late prelate himself:—

"In Memory of
The Right Reverend Daniel, Fifth Bishop of Calcutta, and Metropolitan in India.

Eight years Vicar of Islington, and twenty-five Bishop of this Diocese.

Born July 2, 1778.

Died, January 2, 1858.

'Ο Θεός ἐλασθήρι μοι τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ."

("O God, have mercy on me, a sinner.")

In the old church, a few weeks ago, a neat tablet, in remembrance of the good bishop, was placed in the east transept. The expense was defrayed by some of the members of the congregation. It bears the following inscription:—

"To the Memory of
Bishop of this See and Metropolitan,
For more than twenty-five years.

"Whose praise is in all the churches, as a faithful Minister of Christ, whose public virtues are universally acknowledged, and whose association with the congregation by habitual attendance on the week-day service in this church is gratefully remembered.

Died January 2, 1858,

In his 80th Year."

By the side of this monumental record is another to the memory of one who was, for more than eighty years an attendant at the old church. Few there are in Calcutta who did not know, or had not heard of Mrs. Ellerton, the mother in law of the late Bishop Corrie. Her deep and unobtrusive piety, and her "works of faith and labour of love," will long be remembered, and it is to be hoped that the eminent example set by this "Mother in Israel" will be copied by many of those who were favoured with her friendship. The last days of this aged saint were passed at the Bishop's Palace, and in less than a month after the decease of Dr. Wilson, she was laid in the grave.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOVERNMENT EDUCATION.—The Indian Field has an article on our educational system; advocating that the Government colleges in Calcutta should be dispensed with, as each student therein costs the State forty or fifty rupees a month; though another account avers that the amount expended on each scholar is but a little more than two rupees! The subject acquires additional interest from the circumstance of so able and experienced a gentleman as Mr. Duff enlisting himself on the abolition side of the question. However little good our Government institutions may have effected, we would point to one measure well calculated to promote the cause of education in this country. What prevents the Government from offering prizes of appointments in the Uncovenanted Civil Service to youths educated in some of our principal Indian schools? We think the measure might meet with success, and would certainly improve the tone of our educational institutions.—Delhi Gazette.

SIR ALBERT LARPERT, BART., lately carrying on business in Calcutta, in the firm of Larpert, Saunders and Co., has lately passed through the Insolvent-court unopposed. His debts in connection with the firm amounted to Rs. 3,22,327-13 10. and on account of his private estate to Rs. 13,01,623-2-11, while the assets were Rs. 7,93,400, exclusive of debts owing to him to the amount of Rs. 63,487-11-10.

NATIVE CHRISTIAN.—Replying, we learn from the Friend of India, to the circular of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, asking whether any prejudice existed against the employment of native Christians, have been published. They all, with one exception, deny that prejudice exists, but assert that the Christians of Bengal are few in number, and unqualified for the duties of office.

CAPTAIN SIMPSON.—We (Delhi Gazette) learn from Meerut, that Captain R. J. Simpson, A. O. G., left on the evening of the 30th Sept., for the Presidency, to the charge of which office he has been appointed. Captain Simpson has been five years in Meerut, the latter portion of his service having been passed in the perilous season of 1857, during which it is not saying too much to state, that his unceasing exertions and experience in the department aided to save our men both at Meerut and Delhi. Had the Rum Godown at the former place fallen into the hands of the mutineers, there is no saying what the consequences might have been to our brave army at Delhi, depending as they were upon Meerut for that necessary item of a soldier's rations. Captain Simpson was in the "Dum Dumma," cheering and encouraging all by his energy and example, while the work of his office was never for a single day suspended. Few men have left a station more regretted than Captain Simpson, and he carries with him the hearty good wishes of all who knew him.

THE LATE LIEUT.-COL. ROOKE.—It is seldom we have to record a tribute paid to departed worth by those who love and respect their superiors, and testify the same by a table or monument. One of these, we are glad to find, has been put up, in the shape of a very neat tablet, at the north-eastern wing of St. Peter's Church, Garrison, Fort William, by the officers of H.M.'s 19th regt., to the memory of their much lamented late commanding officer, Lieut. col. I. L. Rooke, C.B. The tablet is composed of the best white statuary marble, on black ground, and bears on it military trophies, with the insignias and medals gained, including those in the Crimea, as also the names of the battles of the allied armies in the Crimea—viz. Sebastopol, Alma, and Inkerman. The tablet has been executed with great taste, and very creditably. It bears the following inscription:—

Sacred to the memory

LIEUT.-COL. I. L. ROOKE, C.B.,

H.M.'s 19th Regiment, who died of cholera, at Fort William, on the 27th November, 1857.

This Tablet is erected by the Officers,
Non-commissioned Officers, and Privates of the 19th Regiment,

In token of their respect and affection.

—Indian Empire.

LIEUTENANT MOWBRAY THOMPSON, who, with the exception of Lieutenant Delafosse and three or four privates, was the sole survivor of the Cawnpore massacre (after swimming under hot pursuit for three days), is to get a C.B.-ship and a Brevet Majority. He commanded a very important point in the Cawnpore entrenchment, defended himself and his party most gallantly during their difficult flight, was subsequently at different times present in three engagements, and was wounded four times. He latterly obtained the command of the Cawnpore police.

THE DISBANDMENT of the 10th regiment N.I. Grenadiers progresses very favourably; forty-five men, with their families and dependants, leave Meera Meer daily. The men are very quiet and orderly.

VERY SEVERE.—The Delhi Gazette gives the following sarcastic outline of the forthcoming campaign:—"As regards the ensuing campaign no one seems to know anything about it, but a little bird told me the following. Lord Clyde will assemble a large force with siege train at Allahabad, and march into Oudh. He will take Pertabgarh, where he will halt for a month to organize his force. He will then, in conjunction with the Sultanpore force, sweep the country, taking forts and driving the rebels towards Lucknow. The rebels will burst across the Cawnpore road and interrupt our communications for a day or two. Thus by the end of the year the country between Allahabad and Lucknow (districts of Sultanpore and Selone) will most likely be settled. Lord Kuburdar, having by this time discovered, that the cold weather is injurious to the European constitution, will halt at Lucknow for a couple of months, keeping a large force with him. When the weather gets mild, he will clear the country to the west of Lucknow, and when the summer has set in, he will cross over into the beautiful and fragrant swamps of Baraitch. Some people talk of a force entering Oudh from the west, but Rohilkund cannot spare troops."

THE LATE CAPTAIN GARSTIN.—A tomb has been erected over the remains of the late Captain E. S. Garstin, at Simla, with the following inscription:—"Sacred to the memory of Captain E. S. Garstin, 5th regt. N.I., who died at Simla on the 16th June, 1858, aged thirty-four years. This monument is erected by the officers of the regiment in testimony of their regard for him as a friend, and admiration for his qualities as a soldier."

DELHI NEWS.—Delhi letters contain sundry speculations regarding the fate of the ex-King. Some say that he will be escorted by one of the European regiments stationed at Delhi, and that the march will commence early in the ensuing month. Nobody appears to know what will be the prisoner's destination, or whether he will go beyond Allahabad. The old fort of Selimgurh is being fortified on the river side, and up towards the Calcutta gate. The Magazine has also a gun mounted on one of the gates; but with this exception the defences do not point towards the city. Rain has fallen plentifully in Delhi. It commenced on the night of Sept. 17th, and was pouring incessantly up to mid-day of the 18th; Meerut has also come in for a fair share of moisture after the long drought. There are several state prisoners awaiting their trial by the Commissioner in Delhi, the most notorious of whom is Nawab Humud Ali Khan, who was seized by Mr. Richards, C.S., of Kurnal, and sent into Delhi, notwithstanding the fact of free pass signed by the late Captain Hodson being found upon him. The result of the trial is anxiously looked for by a large portion of the Delhi people, both in and outside the city, as the Nawab's well known connection with the Royal Family of Oude will, it is supposed, tell against him. The Nawabs Ameen-oodeen and Zea-oodeen Khan have been released from confinement, and have been allowed to go to their estate at Laharoor, which, together with their houses in Delhi, will be restored to them, no evidence of their complicity in the rebellion having been elicited; but, on the contrary, some active assistance is proved to have been given by Ameen-oodeen to the Government shortly before the assault of Delhi on the memorable 14th of September, 1857.—Mofussilite.

A VETERAN AMAZON.—A correspondent mentions that the Banka Bacc, widow of Rughojee Bhoonsla the 2nd, who fought against us at Assaye and Argaum, died at Nagpore on the 7th September. She was a woman of some note during her lifetime. In 1817 she actively assisted Sir Richard Jenkins, the Resident at Nagpore, to arrest her nephew, Appa Sahib, thus avenging the death of her stepson, the Rajah Parsojee, whom Appa Sahib had murdered. She died at the advanced age of eighty-one years.

THE REBELS CAPTURED BY MR. KNOX. Assistant Commissioner of Kooloo, are now on their way to Lahore for trial. They number eighty-four men, and there are with them five women and children. These men were captured at Chuga, in Tootso, the first Chinese village beyond our border. They had, previous to their seizure, given up their arms to the Chinese. Mr. Knox, exclusive of the Chinese who aided in the capture of the Sepoys, had a party of twenty-seven men. Eight hundred rupees were taken from the rebels. Of this sum Rs. 350 will be given to those who assisted in their apprehension, and the remainder, with the Government reward of twenty rupees a head, to the followers of Mr. Knox.

IMPARTIAL TREATMENT.—We (Friend of India) have frequently had occasion to mention instances of the cruelty of the rebels to such of their countrymen, who, having served us, may happen to fall into their hands. Lieut. Freeman, in his despatch from Russarah, dated the 21st August, mentions such a case. He wished to send a letter to Bulliah. The country between Russarah and Bulliah was in the possession of the rebels, indeed Lieut. Freeman was besieged in the former place, and was only released by General Douglas. It was necessary that reinforcements should be pushed on from Bulliah to Lieut. Freeman's assistance. A faqueer volunteered to take the letter. It was concealed in a chupatty. Unfortunately the poor fellow was captured by the enemy, and the next day was sent into Russarah with his left arm cut off at the elbow, his right arm severely wounded, the fingers of his right hand nearly cut through at the top joints, his nose cut off, and three shots in his body. The poor man was placed under surgical treatment, but shortly expired.

A VIRAGO.—A strange occurrence happened the other day on the "conroe" at Calcutta, Captain Evans was attacked by a Mrs. Grace Rowe, who had armed herself with a horsewhip, and was compelled to alight from his carriage, take to his heels, and fairly run off. Subsequently, on the 20th September, she forced her way into his room, threatened him with a cane, and assaulted him by seizing his whiskers. Captain Richard Evans under the circumstances was compelled to seek legal protection, and Mrs. Grace Rowe was bound over to keep the peace. Her counsel thought fit to say to Mr. Hume, "If I could go into evidence—but I can't—I think I could tell such a disgraceful story as would surprise any one, of the complainant, an officer in the army." He should either have said nothing or gone into the case.

PROFICIENCY REWARDED.—The honourable the president of the council of India in council has been pleased to direct that soldiers who have been trained at the normal school, and who have obtained certificates of proficiency as schoolmasters, shall be struck off the strength of their regiments as soldiers, and be borne on the town major's list in the grade of 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class schoolmasters, or 4th class or assistant schoolmasters as the case may be.

VETERAN ESTABLISHMENT.—The Court of Directors have been pleased to grant a commission as Lieutenant on the Veteran Establishment to Deputy Assistant Commissary of Ordnance, Mr. J. Corcoran, and also to promote Lieutenant Henry Michell, Assistant Commissary of Ordnance, to the rank of captain.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE, &c.—We have seen from time to time announcements made in the Gazette of the present of large jaghires to native chiefs, who have remained faithful to us during the rebellion, and should like to know on what principal such jaghires are withheld from Europeans who have also distinguished themselves. Why should not the more deserving amongst the European defenders of Lucknow be selected for some such distinction? There were in the Residency many gentlemen unconnected with the Government, who highly distinguished themselves during the siege. It is useless to talk of the encouragement given to Europeans to settle in India, when not a portion of the soil is ever bestowed upon them even for the most meritorious services. Why should not Mr. Boyle, Mr. Vincent, and some other gentlemen whom we can name be made Jaghirdars? The Government have confiscated estates enough in their possession to reward those who upheld their authority in the time of need. It is only by the settlement of Europeans in India that we can ever hope to free natives from their bondage of ossified civilisation.—Friend of India.

COPPER MINES.—Dr. A. Campbell reported on the 3rd August, 1858, that he had fixed the jumma for the year on the Sinchul and Rungpore copper mines. These mines were settled at Rs. 1081. The quantity of copper made last year was 379 maunds. In Calcutta the metal sells for about Rs. 40 a maund. This would give a gross return of Rs. 15,160 on the produce of the year.

NEW MISSIONARY STATION.—We understand that it is the intention of the Church Missionary Society to make Lucknow one of their stations. Mr. Leupolt has accordingly been ordered from Benares to organize the Mission. Before the outbreak of the mutinies, the Church Missionary Society had, we believe, no establishment at Lucknow.

BENGAL POLICE.—The Englishman understands that the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is about to propose a novel measure for the reform of our police system. The office of Darogah is to be abolished, and honorary or deputy magistrates invested with the powers of the abolished office. The only difficulty in the way is the number of Darogahs. In Bengal, there are at present about 486, while there cannot be more than 140 deputy and honorary magistrates. The new arrangement would render it expedient that the numbers of deputy and honorary magistrates should be at least doubled.

GWALIOR.—What is our Resident at Gwalior doing? From time to time we receive accounts of the state of utter disorganization into which Scindia's territories have fallen, and yet with the solitary exception of the attack on Powrer, due to Brigadier Napier, no successful attempt has been made to restore order. All the British territories adjoining Scindia's dominions are kept in perpetual disquietude, from time to time bodies of armed men cross the frontier, and plunder inoffensive ryots, our subjects. When pursued the marauders retreat into Scindia's dominions. Half the disquietude of Etawah arises from the laxity of rule at Gwalior. It is affirmed that there are now in the town in confinement several notorious rebels who have not yet been brought to trial, whilst four wretched creatures, seduced into revolt, perhaps by these very men, have been recently blown away from cannon.—Friend of India.

THE ANDAMANS.—The convict settlement at the Andamans appears to be in a wretched state of discipline. Nine convicts have been hanged, and the "overseer" at Port Blair has been suspended. He is now awaiting an investigation, sixteen charges of a serious nature having been brought against him. There is some doubt whether the selection of Dr. Walker for the governorship of the convict settlement was a wise one. Since he has been in charge, we have heard of nothing but emeutes and quarrellings, sepoy's prejudices offended, and sepoy's prejudices cherished.

VALUE OF GUNBOATS.—A correspondent of the Phoenix mentions the signal service, the steamer Benares, wretchedly incapable as she is, has rendered on the river between Buxar and Ghazepore and up the Kurrunnassa. She destroyed all the boats on the Ghazepore side of the river, shelled an old fort, and captured some rebel villagers, who have given us a great deal of trouble. It is of great importance that all boats should be seized between Buxar and Ghazepore, so as to prevent the ingress or egress of the Shahabad rebels. When the country is quiet again, and the Government have restored something like order to the finances, gunboats will be maintained on all the important and navigable Indian rivers.

HORRIBLE, IF TRUE.—The Phoenix reports a horrible occurrence near Arrah. On the morning of the 16th Sept. a detachment of H.M.'s 10th foot, camped between Koelwar and Arrah, heard of the approach of a strong body of the enemy. They advanced to attack them, leaving one man named Bradshaw behind to take care of their great coats and camp utensils. The Sepoys heard of this, dispatched a force who came by a circuitous route upon the encampment, seized Bradshaw, and skinned him alive! The report requires confirmation.

THE SEA-SERPENT AGAIN.—The Jara Bote, of the 28th July, reports:—"Captain Byl, of the Dutch barque Hendrik Ids Anbacht, communicates to us the following: Sailing in the South Atlantic Ocean in 37 deg. 27 min. S. Lat. and 14 deg. 51 min. E. Long., and with very rough weather, we observed, between twelve and one midday of the 9th June, a frightful sea-monster, which for the space of nine days remained constantly beside the ship. The monster was about ninety feet long, and twenty-five to thirty feet broad, and frequently came with such force against the ship as to cause her to tremble all over. It spouted a great deal of water over the deck of a very disagreeable smell. The captain, fearing that the monster might damage the rudder, tried all means to get rid of it. After more than one hundred musket balls had been fired into it, and a harpoon and a long iron bar buried in its body, the blood was observed flowing from many wounds, so that at last, through loss of strength, it could no longer keep up with the ship and was lost sight of. Its skin was torn in many places in consequence of its striking violently against the copper."

A NATIVE MAGISTRATE.—The Court appointed to investigate the charges preferred against Kisory, Chand Mitre, the junior police magistrate of Calcutta, have commenced their sittings. The charges are six in number. 1st. He unjustly acquitted a native servant accused of robbing his European master, that servant acknowledging the crime. 2nd. In order to make it appear that he had not acquitted falsely Abdool Raheem, he tampered with, and altered the entry of the case in the case book. 3rd. In submitting an explanation of this case he falsely pretended and alleged, in a letter to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, that he had, in the hurry of business, "warned and acquitted," instead of "acquitted" the accused. The other three charges are of a similar nature, but the fourth charge is of a peculiar character, for not only, it is alleged, did the junior magistrate dismiss a criminal wrongfully, but actually handed the Chowkeydar who brought the charge over to Mr. Wachupe, for bringing a false accusation. This led to the proceedings. Mr. Graham prosecutes for the Government, and Mr. Newmarch appears for the defendant.

THE NEPAL RUMOUR.—The Englishman publishes a letter from an old resident in Darjeeling dated the 21st September. It was rumoured that the Jung Bahadoor was to invade the British territory immediately after the Dusserah holidays. His efforts were to be directed to Darjeeling and Patna, a rumour very much more probable than that impossibility. Darjeeling and Goruckpore. The rumour is based on the fact of the desertion of one thousand Gorkha coolies from employment in the erection of the barracks on the Sinchul, upon the stoppage of the usual supplies of ghee, oil and sheep from Nepal, and upon the erection by the Gorkhas of barracks at Flum about sixty miles from Darjeeling. It is affirmed that Dr. Campbell has received official intimation from the Court at Nepal of an intended attack. This has been disproved.

GHAZEPORE, Sept. 28.—It appears now that extensive new intrenchments are to be made—the jail and all the opium buildings are to be taken in. Just now every description of eatables and drinkables here are very scarce and dear; in fact, many articles can't be had at any price, port wine and brandy selling at 36 rupees the dozen, and beer eagerly bought at 12 rupees a dozen.

THE LAWRENCE MEMORIAL FUND.—The Punjab subscriptions to the Lawrence Memorial Fund now amount to Rs. 34,870. After erecting a suitable monument in St. Paul's Cathedral, it is intended by the Calcutta and London Committee of the Fund, to devote the surplus to the Asylum founded by Sir Henry Lawrence at Mount Aboe, and to the establishing another in the Neilgherries for the benefit of the children of European soldiers serving in the Madras Presidency.

THE MOOLTAN MUTINY.—The Mooltan correspondent of the Panjabee notices a dispute amongst the officers of that station consequent upon the mutiny of the 62nd and 69th Regiments. A Court of Inquiry has been appointed, of which Major Hamilton was the President, but Brigadier Farquharson making some objection to the appointment, Major Hodge of the Bombay Fusiliers succeeded. The civil and military authorities are also reported to be at "daggers drawn," the former asserting that they gave the officers in command of the mutinous regiments notice of the outbreak in sufficient time for its frustration.

"UNCOVENANTED DISPENSARY COMPANY LIMITED."—We are glad to learn that the "Uncovenanted Dispensary Company, Limited," has received the support of the service. The capital will consist of Rs. 10,000, in 500 shares of Rs. 20 each. All these have been appropriated—none having been allotted to the native employees of Government. A meeting of the shareholders will be convened after the Doorga Pooja holidays, when arrangements will be made for establishing the Dispensary. The object of the Company is to enable the members of the service, whose income is limited, to obtain good medicines at a reasonable price. Under judicious management, the Dispensary will prove not only a boon to those for whom it is designed, but also a source of profit to the shareholders.

WARS AND RUMOURS OF WARS.—The Panjabee hears that alarming rumours are current at Peshawar. The Datt was thought to be advancing. A detachment of H. M.'s 94th and one gun, either on account of this rumour, or on some other grounds, was sent out towards the Kyber. The solitary gun was to be used as a signal, and as soon as its report was heard, another gun in the lines of the 81st was to be fired. On the report of this second gun the whole of H. M.'s 81st had received orders to turn out. The 21st and 24th N.I. are still at Peshawar, the 27th N.I. have been sent down, sixty deserted during their first day's march. The roads about Peshawar are thronged with hundreds of natives armed to the teeth, and altogether there is considerable excitement.

A SUCCESSFUL DOUR.—"Letters from Sumbulpore of the 17th of September mention a successful dour after some rebels under Monohur Sing, by a party of Captain Bird's subdivisions, and of the royal police. The rebels, about fifty in number, were found at sunset encamped near the bank of a tank, quietly eating their dinner, and were completely surprised by our party. Twenty of them were killed, including the leader, Monohur Sing, and two other chiefs. The darkness of the night favoured the escape of the rest, but they left behind them in their flight a lot of matchlocks, percussion guns, swords, and battleaxes, which were captured and brought in by the subdivisions. The result of this little expedition is highly creditable to all engaged, and augurs well for the future tranquillity of the district. Monohur Sing was a person of influence, and a notorious rebel, and it is generally thought at Sumbulpore that with his death disturbances will cease."

A LITTLE PREMATURE.—A private letter received from Gya mentions "that the rascals are subdividing Behar into different jurisdictions. True it is that they are 'counting the chickens before the eggs are hatched,' but still for all that, it will not be less amusing to you to know that Oomer Singh is proclaimed King of Snahabad, that Ally Kurrem is a pointed the Nizam of Patna; Jodhur Singh gets Gya for his trouble; and Mehuandee Hossein is rewarded with the Nizamut of Sarun and Tirhoot."—Englishman.

THE SHIP TYBURNIA has brought to Calcutta four hundred and fifty Infantry, and one hundred and nine of the Royal Artillery. She made the passage from England in eighty odd days, and the health of the troops was remarkably good throughout the voyage.

BATTA.—The Governor-General has conferred a donation of six months' batta on the troops under Brigadier Smith, who co-operated with the force commanded by Sir Hugh Rose. His lordship has also conferred a similar donation on the Rijnootana field force, under the command of Major-General Roberts, "which is still in the field encountering extraordinary difficulties, enduring much fatigue and hardship, and has rendered important service in the pursuit of the rebels from Gwalior."

SIMLA, September 13.—A Court of Inquiry has been, and still is, sitting at a place not a hundred miles from Simlah, to inquire into the conduct of an officer whose expenditure has exceeded his means. His property was attached by his creditors, and report says, after the attachment took place, he disposed of a portion of it. This, and other highly reprehensible actions, some of which I will relate, have formed the grounds for the sitting of the court. This officer sold a gun to a hill chieftain for 200 Rs., and a pony valued at 100 Rs. This gun, it was afterwards learnt, was not the officer's property. The chief was obliged to give it up, and naturally demanded the 200 Rs. and pony back again, which the officer was unable to give, having spent the one, and sold the other, but sent a number of things in lieu, which the chief was obliged upon by the magistrate to return, being attached property—the chief thus being a loser altogether. This officer is likewise the author of a levy of "kites," which have returned to their disconsolate holders. It is such actions that lower the English character in the eyes of natives, and bring us into disrepute. Before closing my letter, I must mention an occurrence which has cast a gloom over the residents of Simlah, especially the older, in having sustained the loss of one of their members. Mr. D. O. B. Clark expired on Sunday last. He was the first to start a school in December, 1836, under the auspices of the then Political Agent (the late Gen. Tapp). He was much respected for his high integrity. With him has ceased to exist the last boys' school at Simlah. —Englishman.

DR. HALLUR.—We hear from reliable authority that Dr. Hallur, the Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in the Presidency College, has received an offer of the professorship of Cosmical Physics in the University of Jena. It is, however, doubtful whether the learned professor will accept the appointment.

THE MOOLTAN REBELS.—"We hear from different sources that the few remaining Sepoys of the 62nd and 69th native regiments were seized with despair at the example made of their comrades, that in many instances finding there was no hope of escape, they committed suicide. We are told of a Havildar of one of the regiments, stopping on the banks of the Indus, and saying that he had eaten the Company's salt so long that he would not be Harami any longer, and so deliberately filled a gurrha with sand, tied it secure round his neck, and jumped into the river, accounted as he was. It is a pity that his repentance came so late. Others have been so closely pursued, that they have hurriedly filed their dooties with sand, and then plunged into the river. One man of the 69th has been caught by a tehsildar in the Lei district."—Dohi Gazette.

CACHAR FAIR.—The Office of the Superintendent of Zillah Cachar has published a notification in the Calcutta Gazette, from which we learn that a fair is to be held at Sichaer, the Sudder station of Cachar, at the end of next December. It is to last five days, and is to be annual. The inhabitants of the neighbouring districts to the west as well as those of Assam to the north, will be invited to attend, bringing from their countries articles for barter and sale. These districts are Dacca, Mymensingh, Tipperah, Sylhet, Cherrapunjee, and Assam. To meet the merchants and traders from these places are to be invited the people of the independent States of Manipore and Kuchoo, in Burman, and the tribes of Casyahs, Meekins, Kookies, Nagas, Kacharies, Kacha Nagas, Angamees, and Looshais. In addition to the attractions of trade there are offered those of amusement, for prizes will be offered by public subscription to the winners in boat, elephant, horse and foot races, as well as for other athletic games and exercises, among which may be mentioned the Maniporee, Kangjai, or hockey upon horseback. A list of articles likely to be in demand is given, and it is rather surprising to find that Lieut. Stewart expects the Kookies, Nagas, &c., to purchase carpets, corkscrews, needles, guitars, garters, and other articles indicating a state of civilization.

DARJEELING.—The following has been received by Government from Dr. Campbell, Superintendent of Darjeeling, dated 25th September:—"My messengers returned last night from Nepal, with a letter from the Resident, saying all is quiet on the frontier, and there is no indication of hostilities whatever."

MR. DODD, the Executive Engineer of Dum-Dum, and latterly acting at Barrackpore in the room of Captain A. Fraser, appointed to the Secretariat Department of the Public Works, is to proceed to Lucknow, and to do duty under Major Cromerlin, the superintending engineer there.

TOO LATE.—A correspondent writing from Alahabad, on the 24th September, remarks:—"I told you before that P. teron and Carruthers were up here, on behalf of Narayan Rao, and the Madho Rao, of Kervee in Bundela. Well, they, P. and C., applied to Government for, and got sanction to their being supplied with the charges against two Rana, and instructions were sent to Mr. Mayne, at Banda, to let counsel and attorney have access to their clients, and to afford them all possible facility in the object of their visit. The reply to this was, that the two clients had been tried three weeks previously, and condemned, and that (singular to say), on the morning of the day that the instructions of Government were received at Banda, the condemned clients had been sentenced—Narayan Rao to transportation for life, and Madho Rao to reside in Benares under surveillance, but the sentence on Narayan Rao was recommended to be commuted to imprisonment in the country for life."—Hurkaru, Oct. 5.

SUBURBS OF CALCUTTA.—The following suburbs, Dukhinsore, Balighurrah, Bunoogly, Baunuggur, Subik Nowaparah, Palparrah, Dum-Dum, Kunyepore, Entalghat, Taleezunge, Russa, Barabagan, Auruckpore, Gobindpore, Diakooreah, Podrah, Moodie Allen, Dnnaparah, Futtchpore, Lunkeepoor, Behulah, Shahpore, Bishenpore, Poonungee, have been added to the Union, for the purpose of the Act declared by Notification, No. 369 of the 1st April, 1857. Under Section X. of Act XX. of 1856, the tax to be levied in the said suburbs will be an assessment according to the circumstances and the property to be protected of the persons liable to the same.

SIR W. B. O'SHAUGHNESSY, the superintendent of electric telegraphs in India, has been congratulated by the Supreme Government of India for having completed the electric telegraph line from Kurrachee to Bombay, and for laying down the Ceylon cable across the Gulf of Manar, signals being sent across in the latter place with one cell.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned the establishment of Rs. 80 per mensem entertained from 1st Jan. last, by Honorary Assistant Magistrate, Mr. Storm, in Rajshahy, pending orders on the report called for in respect to the establishments of honorary assistant magistrates generally.

The India General Steam Navigation Company was duly registered under the Limited Liability Act on the 24th September.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 8.—Among matters of local interest we have but little to notice. The comet has duly made its appearance, and was visible in Calcutta on the 4th of perfection. It is said that the natives view it as a bad omen of their cause, as it is visible in the west, which they interpret as the point wherefrom India is to be ruled. No day has yet been fixed for the publication of the proclamation of the Queen's authority, but arrangements are in progress for illuminating on the eventful day all public edifices, and the public have been invited to join in the general demonstration. A ball and a great pyrotechnic display in honour of the occasion are to come off after the native holidays, which commence on the 12th and end on the 25th, during the interval of which the public offices will be closed and all business suspended. —Englishman.

CAMP BELLAH, Soraon Field Force, 26th Sept.—"Our progress from Allahabad was a very slow one, for it took three days to cross three hundred men over the Ganges. Once over, we marched on to this place, which is about two miles outside Pertulghur, and joined the Soraon Field Force assembled here. In our front is a small nullah about twenty yards wide, which separates us from a port called Ahmetee, which is about eight miles off, and is said to contain some 16,000 Budmahes, eighteen guns, and, moreover, to be very strong. Various rumours are about; some that the Begum has given orders that immediately we complete our bridge, all the people on her side are to fall into Ahmetee and there stay to give us fight; others that the man who commands at Ahmetee has sent in to surrender. We had some races last week, got up principally by the 54th. They lasted some four days, and were not bad. The last day was the free handicap for all horses, winners or not, who had run. The weather is getting very comfortably cool, the mornings and evenings are delightful, and the general health of the soldiers is very good."—Englishman.

A CAMEL CORPS.—"We are given to understand," says the Sind Herald, "that the Commissioner at Ajmere is busy collecting camels all over Rajpootana, as 10,000 are required for the cold weather campaign. Of this 500 are to be riding camels, capable of going over sixty miles of ground per diem, so that, with a flying brigade of this description, there is little doubt but that the Pandies will be well accounted for next cold season."

FREIGHTS.

To London, £1 to £3. 0s. To Liverpool, £1 to £1. 17s. 6d.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, October 8).—On produce market has been very brisk under the active demand which has and still prevails for shipment both to Europe and America; but the continued light supplies and advancing prices of the principal staples prevent large operations. Indigo.—The selling season has already commenced. Rau Silk.—On the receipts of the London mail of 25th August, the demand for this article has somewhat fallen off, and in consequence a limited business has been transacted in it during the fortnight for the English market at a decline of 0-5 to 1-0 per cent. For Bombay a good business is doing in low quantities. In European furniture there is very little doing, and prices may be quoted a little lower. Stoe.—In dealer's hands have increased to 7 to 8-0 manilla. Silk Piece goods.—In Corahs a moderate business has been done since our last, and confined chiefly to good and middling qualities, and their value is maintained. In Bananones, Choppah, and Tassar there is nothing doing. Stocks of Corahs are about 12,000 pieces, and of Tassar 3,000 pieces. Oil Seeds.—Supplies of used have considerably fallen off, and prices have an upward tendency, both Patna and Up-country cleaned being a present at Rs. 4-0 to 4-2 and Hansally at Rs. 3-10 to 3-14. Rape.—Shipments of a fair extent are in progress for Great Britain. Jute and Hemp.—A fair business in Jute is going on for Great Britain. Supplies of the new crop are still very sparing, and prices do not show any alteration. Good picked is still at Rs. 18 to 19 Fair Rs. 16 to 17-8, and Orissa y Rs. 14 to 15 per bale. Hemp has been in limited supply, and may quote value at Rs. 16 to 18-8 per bale. Hides and Skins.—The former continue in active request for Great Britain, France, and America. Our market is at present bare of desirable quality Goat Skins are scarce, and command our best quotations, viz., Madras at Rs. 45 to 50, and Calcutta and Patna at Rs. 35 to 40 per hundred.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 8).—The extreme high prices both on Tea and Pice Goods, and the approaching holidays of the Duggi Poojah, which commenced on the 12th inst., have kept off buyers from the market. The dealers are still engaged in clearing off their former contracts, and have no great desire for fresh operations, business has, consequently, been limited, and prices on both Mule Twist and Gay Goods have somewhat receded. The only exceptions in demand at present are bleached light goods for the use of the holidays, at well nigh mint prices. Mule Twist—A very limited business has been done since our last, owing to extreme prices. The retail buyers from the second-hand dealers having kept back, have caused an accumulation of stores in the bazaar to about 2,000 Bales; prices have, consequently, receded 5 to 4 pice from the extreme rates. Coloured Yarns—He-man and British Dye Turkey Red are in limited request, and have fallen in price 6 pice to 1 anna per lb. since our last. Imperial Red is also rather slower. Chintzes and Prints—Madder Red Calcutta Chintzes are saleable to a fair extent. Scarfs, Shawls, Shawls, &c. are selling to a fair extent for the approaching holidays. Crathor better prices. Iron—A limited quantity for local requirement. There are no up-country buyers, and stocks in both first and second hands are rather heavy. Prices of the day show a slight fall on English flat square and bolt. Copper—Excepting Sheet, which is rather heavy in the hands of importers, all other descriptions are very light. Present quotations show a rise on bronzes, tin, bolt, and ingot.

RELIGIOUS NEUTRALITY.

Religious neutrality in the army! The phrase recalls the days when George III of blessed memory, drove from his councils the ministry of "all the talents" for the ferocious Jacobinism of proposing to enable Catholic officers to hold the rank of colonel in the army. To advocate religious neutrality in the army at this time of day must seem to many innocent people a mere combat with a phantom. Facts, however, prove the reverse of this. The spirit which thrust from power the best ministry which ever served George III, the spirit which kept Mr. Canning out of power during many of the best years of his life, the spirit which staved off the measures of Catholic relief in a manner that gave them, when at last conceded, the appearance of forced and ungracious concessions, the spirit which still animates drunken mobs at Orange meetings and inflames the vituperation of a Spooner or a Newdegate, that spirit though put into a strait waistcoat by the thing which a noble sectarian indignantly denounces as "what is called toleration" is as full of spiteful vitality as ever, and when, after long and unwearied activity, it manages to get one arm out of its confinement, strikes a blow against religious liberty, which is the more dangerous, inasmuch as it is the more unlooked for. In pursuance of our comments upon the various measures and propositions of reform which have been or are in course of being brought forward in connection with the army, it falls to our duty prominently to point out a foul blow of the above description; in order that the highest authorities at home may be warned of the danger which is incurred by pacing power in the hands of narrow prejudice and obstinate zeal. The instance in question is perhaps one of the strangest cases of human perversity that has ever occurred in the history of the British army in India. As an example of pernicious civilian intermeddling with military affairs, and ignorance of the temper which exists in bodies of European soldiers, it is quite without a precedent. When, also, we consider the circumstances of the time, the position of the British Army in India, the pressing demands for men from England, the urgent necessity of stimulating, by a generous policy, the ardour of our soldiers to the utmost, the love and gratitude which their deeds and heroism universally inspired, the glow of reassurance which the mere aspect of their gallant and cheery countenances brought to the hearts of us Anglo-Indians, we are lost in astonishment at the brain which should conceive, and the obstinacy which should sustain, a policy, at once so ignoble, and so prejudicial to the best interests of the British nation.

It will be known to most of our readers that, among the advantages which a wise and liberal policy had conferred on the British soldier in India, was an allowance in money for his wife and family. It consisted of five shillings a month for each child up to the age of fourteen, which was extended by Lord Dalhousie to sixteen; and this, with a similar stipend for the wife, was called the "subsistence allowance." From 1840, the advantage had been enjoyed by all married soldiers without any condition whatsoever. It had resulted in improving generally the morality of the army, and in diffusing a spirit of content and gratitude among the soldiers and non-commissioned officers. Being widely known in England, it had formed one great attraction for men to enlist. India is not the place where ordinary inducements will suffice to recruit the army. Men will fight shy of long-continued exile from their native land, of an uncongenial climate, and of disease and temptations, peculiar to India. The greater the attractions we can offer, the larger and more respectable will be the crowd of applicants for admission into our Indian service. The plan of affording subsistence allowance to married soldiers had undoubtedly had its influence in this respect. Among its recipients were of course Christians of every denomination. Large numbers of these were men whom an enlarged spirit of liberality has made the Government of England to regard as entitled to all the privileges of Christians of the established sect. Thanks to the liberality of the Government—in this respect—these gallant, glorious, soldiers, were for years participating in all the advantages of the "subsistence allowance." They little knew that they were jealously watched by the dark and frowning spirit we have above alluded to. They little knew that there was one part of India where an arm would struggle out of the strait waistcoat to aim a foul blow at their little children. Yet it was so. By some extraordinary misconception on the part of the Home authorities there was appointed for Madras a governor with all the narrow-mindedness of a Newdegate, and more than the obstinacy of a Sir George Barlow. Lord Harris, though not deficient in some kinds of ability, is unfortunately gifted by nature with an intellect of the narrowest dimensions. Capable of warmth and liberality towards whatever assimilates to it, his mind stiffens like ice before anything that is opposed to its prejudices. Yet so painful to his poor weak reasoning powers is this compression, that it confuses and distorts them beyond remedy. The effect upon such an intellect of strong sectarian and personal sensibility is easy to conceive. We speak of it more in pity than in wrath—in sorrow than in anger. We can understand how it mistakes prejudices for principles, obstinacy for moral courage, spite for resolution, and how it can never see that there are two sides of a question; and we can therefore comprehend its excessive abuse of whatever opposes it, and its utter intolerance of contradiction. Drawing sweeping conclusions from particular facts, as exemplified in minutes upon the freedom of the press, and upon the Coast army—inventing fictitious personages as scapegoats, exemplified in the justificatory minute upon the appointments of Dr. Gundert, and the Rev. Mr. Percival—are but the natural and necessary consequences of a mind and temperament such as are possessed by Lord Harris. It would be well if their results terminated with acts such as these. But they do not. Lord Harris has all the restlessness of the sect of puritans. Had he lived in the days of the Commonwealth he would have been assuredly a Roundhead scribe. What minutes would he not have written about the Catholics! What panegyrics upon the massacre of Jeddah! Times, however, are fortunately changed. The puritan now a days is limited to petty persecution in dark places. His teeth are drawn and his claws are clipped—not quite sufficiently. Lord Harris' zeal was developed, not after the manner of the Rev. Gideon Kettle-drumle, but in the petty persecution of Catholic soldiers' children, and in preventing the railway people from running special trains on a Sunday. He determined that all soldiers' children, without reference to the creed of their parents, should attend the regimental schools; and he made loss of the subsistence allowance the penalty of stopping away. The immediate result of this was, to deprive numbers of Catholic soldiers of the money with which they had hitherto supported their families. The Catholic Church objected to the schools; but though the nature of the objection was perfectly consonant with the doctrine of that Church, it is not necessary to enter into its discussion here. All that we have to recognise is the fact that the schools were objectionable to the Catholics. As for disputing the principle of the objection we might as well enter into an argumentation upon that of high mass. What was the effect? One that was painful, lamentable to witness. The Roman Catholic Bishop vainly remonstrated with Lord Harris, pointing out to him the unhappy consequences of his conduct. But his lordship, as usual, mistaking prejudices for principle, and obstinacy for moral courage, was not to be moved. He persisted in carrying out his order. Then followed a letter from the Catholic bishop, excommunicating the children who should attend the regimental schools, as well as the parents who sent them there. Still Lord Harris remained obstinate. His spirit, he no doubt flattered himself, rose with the occasion. He was little aware of the dangerous consequence of his act, and little knew how impossible it is to coerce soldiers in matters of conscience. Nay, he was even so frenzied as, in the heat of his excited imagination, to doubt the Catholic priests. A Protestant officer was ordered to attend and note the words of a minister performing divine service in a Catholic chapel. We can pity all this when we think only of the man—not so, however, when we lift our eyes to the position of the Governor of Madras—a functionary who has to watch over the fanatical religious susceptibilities of twenty-two millions of people. We may regard with sensible regret any ebullition of religious intolerance of a private nature at the present day, but we must emphatically condemn it when it experiments upon the spirit of a large proportion of the British army, not limiting itself even to that. It was not to be supposed that Lord Harris could conceive the non-recognition of his act by superior authority. No doubt he set it down as the most statesmanlike transaction of his four years administration. No doubt he was in a high state of exultation upon the subject. He had no "open council" like that in Ceylon to debate upon, and protest against, his measure. The neglect of Madras affairs, which is characteristic of the supreme Government, allowed the matter to lie over for eighteen months—eighteen months of heart-burning, and hope deferred, to Catholic parents. But relief came at last in the shape of the following order:—

"Pending further orders the Governor in Council authorises that the subsistence allowance to Roman Catholic children, who are withdrawn from regimental schools from religious scruples, shall be disbursed to those entitled to draw it, provided they attend other schools which are properly conducted, and where suitable instruction is afforded. It will be necessary for the commanding officer of the regiment or station to ascertain the point and certify to this effect, and certificates of the daily attendance of the children should also be furnished by the Roman Catholic chaplain or schoolmaster.

"The order in the preceding para. is to have effect from the 1st July, 1858.

"(Signed) W. H. WAPSHARE, Actg. Deputy Secy. to Govt."

The son of George Canning should have been less tardy. For though it is melancholy to chronicle the appearance of such an order and the necessity for it, at this time of day, it is still more melancholy to remark that being so long deferred, the order, like all other concessions of the nature that have been made to Catholics, looks as if it were extorted only by the necessities of the time. European soldiers are the crying want of India, and every inducement should be held out to incite them enlist. Now is not the time, in the midst of arduous campaign, to depress the spirits of the gallant men who, for England, are daily exposing and offering up their lives. The authorisation of the "subsistence allowance to Roman Catholic soldiers' children who are withdrawn from regimental schools from religious scruples," pending further orders, of course means for ever, but we would recommend the friends of the soldier and of religious liberty in general, not to forget this striking episode in the history of the British army in India. There is no deficiency of sectarian fanatics in the world, though they are generally better able to keep down their exuberant zeal and intolerance than the present Governor of Madras.—Athenæum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The Government of Madras has decided that the Engineers in the department of public works must exercise complete control over all the larger irrigation works for which separate establishments are allowed. The question of the complete transfer of all hydraulic works is left for future consideration. Where tanks supply only one village, the interference of the D. P. W. is considered unnecessary. Government, while deciding this matter, at the same time decided that enamdars must pay some small annual quit rent as contributions towards the repairs of tanks, &c.

OOTACAMUND.—The assistance of Government was lately applied for towards the formation of a public library at Ootacamund. It was likewise proposed to erect a building for the purpose, into which the local museum might be transferred, and the authorities were asked to contribute a site for the structure and half the cost of the project, which was roughly estimated at Rs. 15,000, the other half being raised by private subscriptions. Government in reply have expressed a regret that they did not feel themselves at liberty to assist the promoters of the scheme with a grant from the public funds to the extent solicited. They were quite willing to promise the site rent, and to admit the library to the same advantages as are enjoyed by similar establishments at Madras, and if any buildings they might raise afforded the necessary accommodation the Museum might be transferred, and the grant of Rs. 100 monthly now allowed for its support made over for the general purposes of the united institution, but further than this the Government did not think it had the power to go. There are few fixed residents at Ootacamund, it was argued, and the greater part of those resorting to the Hills were casual visitors, and the Government could not but entertain some doubts as to the stability or good management of the institution, and even if these were more assured, the circumstances of those who frequented the Neigherries were such that they might fairly be expected to provide for the establishment and support of a library from their own resources.—Madras Spectator.

COIMBATORE.—The Collector of Coimbatore, Mr. J. W. Cherry, and a party of some ten gentlemen have just returned from an exploring expedition to the unknown regions of the Anamallies. It was Lord Harris' intention to have visited these mountains, and the trip was originally designed with this purpose in view, but his lordship's serious indisposition has prevented his carrying out the plan. The party started from Coimbatore on the night of the 12th September, and were absent about ten days. The weather during this time was not the most favourable. They, however, climbed to a height of about 6,000 or 7,000 feet. Their report is every way most satisfactory, as they consider these hills almost equal to the Neigherries and every way suited for colonisation, with abundance of forest land well adapted for coffee. At present the higher ranges of these hills are entirely uninhabited. It is to be hoped that Government will take some steps to open out this unexplored country by the construction of roads, &c. Here is a new and a promising field opened out for private speculation. Two of the party—Mr. Biddome, the officer in charge of the teak forest, and Dr. McPherson—had a very narrow escape. They had shot an elephant, and imagining the animal to be dead they incautiously approached and began to examine it more closely. Suddenly the elephant started up. Both gentlemen took to their heels and endeavoured to conceal themselves behind the trunks of trees. The huge beast rushed down in full charge, first on one and then another, Dr. McPherson unfortunately exposed himself in running across from one tree to another, and the infuriated animal rushed upon him. The doctor had sufficient presence of mind to dash his hat in its face, and in a moment was concealed behind the trunk of a tree. On this the elephant turned round, plunged into the depths of the forest, and was not seen again. The country generally is suffering greatly from want of rain. Prices very high and great distress among the ryots. With five successive years of drought, it is no wonder that Coimbatore maintains its notoriety for the prevalence of gang robberies.—Madras Times.

APPOINTMENTS.—It is generally believed in Madras that Capt. Roberts, military secretary to the Governor, is about to be appointed to the recently created office of fourth police magistrate; that Mr. Murray, private secretary, is to be made second judge of the Small Cause Court; and that Dr. Sanderson becomes private secretary.

LIEUT. H. B. BELL, 25th N.I., is about to resign the service.

MR. J. TALBOYS WHEELER has been directed to officiate as Professor of Moral and Mental Philosophy and Logic in the Presidency College, vice Mr. J. D. Mayne, who has resigned the appointment.

THE 32ND N. I. are directed to proceed from Kamptee to Vizianagrum, and not to Pegu, as ordered on the 27th July.

GRATITUDE BY PROXY.—We noticed the passage through North Berar and adjacent provinces of some ten ata balls. An inquiry was made as to the route they had passed, and to discover the person who first circulated the balls. It appears that they were circulated by a certain Marwarree barber, in fulfilment of a vow. The man had promised to feed all the dogs of the province if he recovered. Being restored to health, he hit upon this ingenious device by which all the dogs were to be fed, but not at his own expense.

THE ROYAL PUNTAH RIOT case has called forth a minute from Government. The Commissioner of Police, Colonel Boulderson, has received "a wiggling." The Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Lafond, has been "dismissed, but without prejudice to his re-employment—in a less responsible position when an opportunity offers;" and Inspector Stuart and Duffadar Ramoodoo have been discharged. Colonel Boulderson is also blamed for the decision he came to after inquiring into the conduct of the Inspector and Duffadar. Although they admitted "they were guilty of gross neglect of duty"—the Commissioner considered it was "a mere relaxation of vigilance." The concluding paragraph of the minute conveys the thanks of the Governor in Council to Mr. C. Roberts "for the promptitude and energy evinced by him on the occasion of the riot, whereby the police were recalled to a sense of their duty, and the impending catastrophe averted."

COCHIN, August 28.—Some days ago, a juggler was assaulted in Ernacollum by three men (two Illoouens and a Malabar Christian), and knocked down in the street senseless. The man died the same night from the effects of the blows he had received. The Malabar Christian, it is reported, offered a large sum of money to the relations of the deceased to hush up the prosecution, but they, although poor people, refused "the price for blood," and prosecuted the assailants, who were committed to prison. A notorious brigand of the Moplah caste, who, with his gang, infested, for a series of years, the territories of Travancore, as far as the frontiers of Cochin, both on shore and by river, and had committed several murders, was at length captured, a few days ago, through the instrumentality of his paramour. She effected her purpose by plying him with strong liquor. The ruffian is shortly to pay the last penalty of the law, a punishment he richly deserves. An East Indian lady at Nagercoil, in Travancore, was lately robbed of about 5,000 rupees in cash, in the absence of her husband. The burglars effected their entrance in the dead of night, by the door. The watchmen took to their heels, terrified at the savage appearance of the men, who were armed to the teeth.—Bombay Times.

THE ARMS ACT appears to be very partially acted upon in the Madras Presidency. Soon after its promulgation all the sulphur in Canara was collected by the Police Ameen and stored in his cutcherry, pending the issue of licences to the owners. The same was done in other districts, but in Canara, the whole store, except nineteen maunds, was destroyed by fire. The Government, therefore, were compelled to compensate the owners, and directed that the remainder of the sulphur should be sold by auction. If the new owners are not to store their sulphur under the care of a Government officer, the Arms Act seems a dead letter.

ARCHDEACON v. BISHOP.—Sir C. Rawlinson has given an opinion in the case of Archdeacon Shortland v. the Bishop of Madras. It will be recollected that some time since the Bishop of Madras appointed the Rev. Mr. Lugard, Assistant Commissary of the diocese of Madras, and that Dr. Shortland brought a suit in the Supreme Court, calling on the Rev. Mr. Lugard to show by what right he filled the office of Assistant Commissary, and the matter was referred to Sir C. Rawlinson for his private arbitration. The opinion of the chief justice is, that the bishop has no right to appoint an Assistant Commissary, while the Commissary is in the diocese.

MILITARY ITEMS.—We understand, upon good authority, that some Sikh regiments are about to proceed to this Presidency, and that Madras regiments are to take their place in Bengal. This seems like the commencement of a new policy in our military system, of which we augur the happiest results. We also learn that a European cavalry regiment is to be stationed here, in lieu of the 8th Light Cavalry disbanded, and that one European and several native regiments are to be added to the army of this Presidency. Rumours are already afloat respecting the speedy assimilation, in all respects, of the Madras Artillery to the Royal Artillery, but we trust that they are, to some extent, unfounded. Surely the authorities will not be so hasty as to order an immediate assimilation, without first ordering a mixed committee to inquire into the points of difference.—Spectator.

PALMYRA TREES.—Owing to the reckless destruction of Palmyra trees growing on waste lands in the Guntur district, the Madras Board of Revenue have imposed a tax on each Government tree felled, and a tax of one anna upon every one hundred Palmyra leaves cut. The tax is not levied in cases of extreme poverty. The preservation of Palmyra trees is of great importance, as the wood is likely to come into extensive use in the public works department. We should be very glad to hear that precautionary measures had been taken to preserve the gutta percha trees also, which in the Straits are recklessly felled to obtain the juice, which might equally well be obtained by tapping. It is stated, in the report on the Madras museums, that the gutta percha tree exists in that presidency. The subject is of the more importance just now, because of the vast increase of submarine and fluvial telegraphs.

THE ASSIMILATION ORDER.—The Madras Athlete observes that the order assimilating the artillery and engineers of the Indian army to the same branches in Her Majesty's service is causing great excitement in Madras. That order permits the Commissions of the present Lieutenant Colonels to be antedated to the dates of their majorities. No such reckoning is allowed to officers of a higher grade than Lieutenant Colonels. Thus Colonels, and even Major Generals, will be superseded by officers of a much lower standing. For instance, a Lieutenant Colonel of 1848 obtained his majority in 1842, he therefore antedates his Lieutenant Colonelcy to the former period. A Major General in 1848 whose majority is dated in 1832, and Lieutenant Colonelcy in 1842 is not permitted to antedate his commission. That is a Major in 1842 and Lieutenant Colonel of 1848 is put upon the same footing as a Major of 1832, a Lieutenant Colonel of 1842 and Major General of 1848. The order of assimilation is therefore manifestly a blunder. We should like to know whether the assimilating suggestion comes from the Court of Directors, from Sir Colin Campbell or Colonel Durand. In the Madras Presidency it will supersede such men as Major Generals Whinyates, Blundell, Grantham, Prescott, Budd, Hutton, Coffin, Whitlock, Cameron, Prior, and Johnson, with Colonel A. Cotton.

THE VESTRY ORDER.—A Madras contemporary, alluding to the recent order of Government that Chaplains are not, without permission, to reside in the church vestries, says:—"In one church, not a hundred miles from the Presidency, we know that the Communion Table has been turned into a common cupboard, the receptacle of old candlesticks and other rubbish! We doubt if the Vestry rooms of St. George's cathedral are sufficiently commodious for even ordinary uses; and certainly we should not envy our esteemed friend the Chaplain of the Black Town District the occupation of his Vestry, even as a temporary place of residence."

OFFICIAL APATHY.—At Cannanore the district engineer in excavating a tongue of land to the eastward of the fort came upon a bed of pure quicksilver. The discovery was reported to the Quarter-Master General by Brigadier Fitzgerald on the 10th September. It appears that to work the quicksilver would, without due precautions, endanger the safety of the fort. The Madras Government have taken no steps to discover the value of the deposit, on the plea that their mineral viewer is about to resign! The Madras Government appear to think that they live under the old regime. The resources of the country are not to be ignored even if a Mr. Wale be disposed to resign, and the foundations of an old fort be undermined. No pains have been taken to ascertain whether the quicksilver would repay the cost of working.

A RUMOUR.—It is rumoured in Ceylon that Sir Henry Ward is to be transferred to the government of Madras, and that Sir Charles McCarthy will be his successor. The good people of the colony are, however, very unwilling to part with their present ruler.

LEGAL.—On the 1st October, Mr. Benjamin Brooks and Mr. George Edward Branson were sworn in, admitted and enrolled Attorneys, Solicitors, and Proctors of the Supreme Court.

PROGRESS.—The Rance of Vizianagrum is, we hear, coming down to Madras with her two sons, who are to be educated at the Presidency College. Mr. Armour will continue, as heretofore, their private tutor. We are inclined to attribute this in no small measure to the wise counsels of Mr. Reid, the Government agent.

CHINA.

China news, again, is insignificant. The Earl of Elgin awaits, at Shanghai, the arrival of the commissioners for arranging the tariff; and as these gentlemen did not leave Peking until the middle of last month, their appearance is not looked for until the first week in the next (October).

As the American treaty was made first, the tariff for it should be created in similar order. His Excellency Mr. Reid does not see this, and has gone to Japan.

The Russian Ambassador, Count Poutiatine, avails himself of the present opportunity to proceed to Europe, carrying a treaty recently concluded by his Excellency at the Court of Jeddo. Tariff details for the Chino-Russ Treaty are of no moment apparently—we hear of no Legation for arranging them either at Shanghai or Tien-Tsin.

French journals will announce to Europe the success of Admiral De Genouilly in effecting a landing on Cochin China. In China we know little more than is contained in the following announcement, as made to this Government through M. de Bourboulon, H.I.M.'s Minister Plenipotentiary:—

I, the undersigned, Rear-Admiral Commander-in-Chief of the French and Spanish forces charged with the demand of reparation due for the wrongs done to the Governments of France and Spain, and in virtue of the powers belonging to me as Commander-in-Chief, declare: That from the first of September, 1858, the Bay and the River of Turon, and the port of Chang, Callao, are held in a state of effective blockade by the naval and military forces placed under my command. Any ship which shall attempt to violate the blockade will be proceeded against according to international laws and the treaties in vigour with neutral nations.

G. RIGAUT DE GENOUILLY.

Turon Bay, 1st September, 1858.

News of the unresisted capture of the forts at Turon was brought here by the chartered steamer Scotland. This vessel returns to Turon to day, carrying some guns for the forts, and a quantity of fresh provisions. The latter articles are greatly needed it is said. Annexation is the order of the day in Cochin China. With the Russians on the north, and the French on the south, English security in China will be well assured (1)—Overland Friend of China, Sept. 28.

CENTRAL ASIA.

On the 26th of August, Sooltan Mahomed Khan gave an entertainment to Dost Mahomed and many Sirdars. Sooltan Mahomed Khan presented the Dost, at the breaking up of the party, with a horse and silver saddle, &c., and two Cashmere shawls. On the 27th, Dost Mahomed received news from Herat. The Shah had written to Sultan Ahmed Jan, requiring him to send Rahim Dil Khan with all his property to Mushed. Rahim Dil Khan was very glad at this, and started at once, escorted by 500 horsemen of Sooltan Ahmed Jan's. On the 29th, Dost Mahomed received letters from the British authorities, through Nawab Foujdar Khan. On perusal, the Dost immediately forwarded the letters to Mahomed Afzul Khan, at Balkh, with orders to send men (it is not clear whether troops or messengers are meant) to Oorgunge and Herat. On the 31st, Dost Mahomed received a letter from Balkh. The writer stated, that Mahomed Afzul Khan had accepted secretly 3000 tillas, worth about Rs. 19 each from Meer Atalik Beg, the ruler of Koondooz, and had recalled the troops he had sent to attack Koondooz. When Dost Mahomed read this he was very angry, and said that when his own brothers commenced to be bribed off by their enemies, an evil time had indeed come upon him. The Dost added, that if Mahomed Afzul Khan would not proceed against Koondooz, he would do so himself.

On the 2nd of September, Mahomed Shereef Khan having had two new guns made, was engaged in trying them. Shere Ally Khan is very ill indeed, and can scarcely eat any food. On the 3d, Dost Mahomed held a council of war, to determine what should be done about Koondooz. Mahomed Oosman Khan advised him to lose no time in sending troops at once to Balkh, where being joined by those of Mahomed Afzul Khan, they should proceed at once to conquer Koondooz. On the 4th, two regiments were started towards Balkh. On the 6th, Gholam Mahomed Mookhtar represented to Dost Mahomed Khan, that Meer Akhor Ahmed Khan, ruler of Furreh, has permitted the sepoy and sowars, with their families, to go towards Herat and Mushed, taking Rs. 40 per man, and Rs. 20 per woman, for them. The Dost replied, that he, also, had heard this, but he believed that Sirdar Futeh Mahomed, also, has a hand in it, to whom a letter was sent, desiring him not to allow any sowar to go to the Herat side without taking Rs. 50 per head, which will check every one from going there. On the 7th, the Dost summoned Sirdar Wulle Mahomed Khan, Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan, and Mahomed Shereef Khan, and ordered them to send their sowars under Sirdar Shere Ally Khan to Candahar, and themselves to remain with him (the Dost). He also ordered that his own force (except Meer Akhor Kasim Khan, Shah Ghasee Sheredil Khan, and Shah Pusund Khan), under Sirdar Mahomed Uslum Khan, and Sirdar Ahmed Khan to go to Balkh, and thence, joining with the force of Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan, to go to Koondooz. On the 8th, news of Bokhara was received from Sirdar Ufzul Khan, that the King of Bokhara had written to his chiefs to gather their forces and repair towards Sumur Kund, and that after the Mochurrum he himself will go to Kogand, the ruler of which place was gathering his forces. The King of Bokhara has gone to Shahur Subz.

We learn, through another source, that a Kafilah arrived at Peshawur on the 8th inst. After leaving Cabul, they were attacked by robbers, and plundered of merchandise and other property, and several of their number wounded. On arriving at Jellalabad, with the remnant of their property, they prepared a list of their losses, and turned back, intending to lay a complaint before the Dost. On the way, they were attacked by the Lowanee tribe, and again plundered of horses, &c., and four of their number were carried away prisoners. Being afraid to proceed, they stopped at Naia Hazam, a place near Jellalabad, and went in a body to Yah Yah Khan the Hakim of the place, and laid their complaint. He first said,—“Give me Rs. 20, and I will escort you to my boundary in safety,” but apparently thinking better of it, he said:—“No, you are taking horses, &c., for the Feringhees, and the thieves have done well to plunder you.” So the men were obliged to proceed as best they might. They were not, however, again molested. One of the men said, that before the Kafilah left Cabul, a Saiud from Gooner had gone to Dost Mahomed for aid, in order that he might proceed to wage a religious war with the infidels. The Dost said that it rested with kings only to wage war. Sooltan Mahomed Khan, and two or three other Sirdars, however, gave the Saiud Rs. 3000, and he went off towards Jellalabad. It is said to be this man who plundered the Kafilah, and it is reported he is now in the Khyber with his prisoners and booty.

On the 9th, the Dost ordered Surwur Khan Luvance to take the treasure from the house of Sirdar Gholam Hyder Khan to that of Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, which was accordingly done. Sirdar Shere Ally Khan has recovered from his illness. Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan asked permission to go to the Kohistan as several murders were perpetrated there. The Dost granted him permission, but ordered him to return soon. The Sirdar went away the same evening with thirty sowars. On the 10th, the Dost ordered Surwur Khan Luvance to go and take charge of Meer Atalik Beg's brother's place, and to collect tax from the people who had come from Koondooz and Indrah with a large amount of merchandise. Surwur Khan accordingly went there and collected Rs. 700. On the 11th, Dost Mahomed Khan ordered Mirza Ahmed Khan to bring Meer Atalik Beg's brother, and Kazee Meer Budukhshan, with their attendants, to whom the following khillats were given:—To Meer Atalik Beg's brother, Cashmere shawl, one piece; Khimkhab cloak, one piece; Mahoot cloak, one piece; Dacca muslin, two pieces. To Kazee Meer Budukhshan, Cashmere shawl, one piece; Mahoot cloak, one piece; Dacca muslin, one piece. To the rest of their attendants one chogah each was given, and all were permitted to go to Toorkistan. On the 13th, the Dost ordered Sirdar Zoolfekar Khan to go to Huzara, and collect revenue there, which the Sirdar accordingly did.—Lahore Chronicle.

CEYLON.

THE RAILWAY.—The working survey of the rail-road is complete for upwards of twenty miles; and as soon as the land is made over to the Company the works will progress rapidly. During a recent inspection Mr. Dayne altered the line in one or two places, the variations being very slight. The upper part of the road is now undergoing a most careful survey, in order to select the route least objectionable, and to determine whether the incline at the mountains shall be ascended by locomotive or stationary engines. Considering the nature of the ground to be gone over, the peculiar features of this mountain pass, and the heavy gradients that must necessarily occur, we incline to the opinion that fixed engines at certain distances up the incline will be the best and cheapest. We believe that no determination on this point has as yet been arrived at by Mr. Dayne. It is one on the decision of which will greatly depend the success or failure of the whole scheme as a commercial speculation.—Examiner, Sept. 9.

IMMIGRATION.—The Colombo Observer anticipates that the immigration into the island of coolies for 1858 will not fall short of 100,000. The arrivals to the end of August had reached 84,000. The whole difference between the administrations of Ceylon and Madras is shown by this emigration and immigration. The administration of the one country, ruled by interlopers, attracts population; in the other officials expel it from her shores; in the one country land is brought into cultivation, in the other land is steadily and surely thrown out of tillage. It is apprehended that in five years Ceylon will actually export yearly one million cwt. of coffee. Already the export has reached 600,000 cwt.

COLOMBO at length possesses a salt-water bath, where no sharks can enter, and perfectly clear and clean. The bath holds 37,000 gallons of sea-water, raised by a Persian wheel, worked by a windmill. The water is thus ever running into the bath, and flowing off from the surface. Colombo owes this luxury to the energy of two gentlemen, Dr. Elliott and Mr. Pereira, the one furnishing brains and the other money.

MR. RAREY's book, it appears, does not contain his secret. Dr. Thwaites, of Ceylon, wrote to Rarey, and the reply has been printed in the Colombo Observer. Mr. Rarey volunteers to visit that island if a class of 200 subscribers at two guineas each can be formed, and says, “The method cannot be learnt by any written instructions, but must be seen to become acquainted with it.” Were Mr. Rarey to visit Calcutta on these terms, there would be no difficulty in securing a class of 200 persons at Rs. 100 each.

Operations in Central India.

From the Depy.-Adj.-Genl. of the Army, to the Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Mil. Depart., with the Gov. Gen.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the C.-in-C., to transmit for submission to the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen., a despatch dated 26th ult., from Maj.-Gen. Sir H. Rose, K.C.B., commdg. Cen. India field force, reporting the operations of the 2nd brig. of the force subsequent to the capture of the fort of Garakota, embracing the forcing of the pass of Mudinpoore, and capture of the forts of Serai and Marowra.

2. His Exc. considers that these operations were most skillfully conducted.

H. W. NORMAN, Major,

Depy.-Adj.-Genl. of the Army.

Hd.-Qrs.: Camp Futehgurh, 26th April, 1858.

Camp before Jhansi, 26th March, 1858.

From Maj.-Gen. Sir Hugh Rose, K.C.B., to Maj.-Gen. Mansfield, Chief of the Staff, Cawnpore.

Sir,—I have the honour to report to you, for the information of his Excellency the C.-in-C., the operations of the 2nd brig. of the Cen. India field force, under my orders, since the capture of the fort of Garakota.

A halt of four days at Saugor was necessary for the repair of my siege guns; I therefore marched back to Saugor, in two days, leaving Maj. Boileau, with the Sappers and Miners, at Garakota, to demolish all he could of its defences.

The rebels had held a steep and thickly-wooded hill, a few miles to the north of Garakota, which gave them the command of the road to Dumoh; after the fall of Garakota, they then abandoned it, leaving open the communications between Saugor and Dumoh.

My siege art. was ready in four days, on the 18th inst. But want of supplies, caused by the devastation of the Saugor and the neighbouring districts by the rebels, and other circumstances, did not allow me to leave Saugor till the 27th inst.

This delay did away, very much, with the good effects of the speedy fall of Garakota. The rebels not seeing any further operations, or movements to the front, against them, regained courage, and occupied again in force the strong positions in the Shaghur and adjoining districts, such as the forts of Serai and Marowra, and the difficult passes in the mountainous ridges, which separate the Shaghur and Saugor districts.

These passes are three in number. The pass of Narut, and the fort of Carnelgurb, near Malthone; of Mudinpora; and of Dhamooney.

My object was to reach Jhansi, against which I was ordered to move, as quickly as I could; but on my road there I wished to take up my 1st brig., which I had marched from Mhow and Indore to Goonah, for the purpose, as previously stated, of clearing and opening the Grand Trunk Road from Bombay to Agra, in obedience to my instructions.

I anticipated resistance to my advance on Jhansi, at the passes, the forts of Serai, Marowra, and Thal-Behut, at which latter place it was said that the Rajah of Banpore intended to make his last stand.

It was also affirmed by some, but denied by others, that the fort of Chundeyree, to the west of the river Betwa, formerly a family possession of the Rajah of Banpore, would be defended.

It was necessary that the 1st brig., on the west, and the 2nd brig., on the east of the Betwa, should be concentrated for the attack of Jhansi.

I determined to force these obstacles to the forward movement of my force, and to the union of my 1st and 2nd brig.; and accordingly gave orders to Brigdr. Stuart, commandg. my 1st brig., to move from Goonah, westwards, and take Chundeyree, whilst I forced my way northwards, and crossing the Betwa, marched with both brigs. against Jhansi.

An operation against the passes was more than usually difficult, on account of the great length of my line of march. For knowing the danger of a want of ammunition, I took with me abundant reserves of it, having besides to take care of a convoy of fifteen days' supplies for my force and its camp-followers.

The pass of Narut was by far the most difficult; and the enemy having taken it into their head that I must pass through it, had increased its natural difficulties by barricading the road with abatis, and parapet, made of large boulders of rock, fifteen feet thick; all passage by the sides of the road being made impracticable by the almost precipitous hills, covered with jungle, which came down to the edge of the road. The Rajah of Banpore, who is both enterprising and courageous, defended this pass with 8,000 or 10,000 men.

The next most difficult pass was Dhamooney; very little was known about the third, Mudinpora, except that in the ordnance map it was described as "good for guns."

Under these circumstances, I requested Maj. Orr to reconnoitre these passes, whilst I was detained at Saugor for supplies.

Supplies for my force having come in to Saugor, I marched from that place on the 27th inst., to Rijwas, a central point, from which I could move against any one of these passes. Maj. Orr's force joined me at Rijwas. With his usual intelligence, he had collected information which made me select the pass of Mudinpora for my point of attack.

In order to deceive the enemy as to my intention, and prevent the Rajah of Banpore from coming from the pass of Narut to the assistance of the Rajah of Shaghur, who defended Mudinpora, I made a serious feint against Narut, by sending Maj. Scudamore, commandg. H. M.'s 14th Lt. drags., with the force stated in the margin,* with their tents and baggage, to the fort and town of Malthone, just above the pass of Narut, whilst I made the real attack on the pass of Mudinpora. Having taken the ruined little fort of Barodia, and left a small garrison in it, to keep up my communications, I marched, on the 3rd inst., against the pass of Mudinpora, with the force stated in the margin. As the column approached the pass, the enemy's skirmishers fired on the advanced guard, from a ridge of hills on our right, near the village of Noonee. I sent up a party of the salt customs, under Mr. Bartie, who, advancing, drove them back.

At about 800 yards from the entrance of the pass, we saw the enemy in force, on the hills, on the left of the pass. Maj. Orr made some good practice at them with round shot, and spherical case.

The pass was formed by a sudden descent of the road into a deep glen, thickly wooded. To the right, farther on, the road ran along the side of a lake. The left of the road was lined by rocky and precipitous hills.

The ardour of an excellent officer induced him, at this time, to make an incautious movement with his guns to his right front, with the view to pour an enfilading fire into the enemy. But he had not taken into consideration that this movement brought him to within fifty or sixty yards of the edge of the glen, in which lay concealed some hundred sepoy, who, before he could unlimber, opened a very heavy fire on his guns, which he was unable to depress on them. The sepoys fortunately fired too quick, and too high, and the officer retired his guns out of the range of their musketry, with only a few casualties. The sepoys hailed this little reverse with shouts. But their success had only brought on their more rapid defeat. For knowing now their exact position, and seeing the necessity of showing them that a calm retreat was only the prelude of a rapid offensive, I advanced 100 of the Hyd. Contingent inf. under Capt. Sinclair, at double time, and made them charge into the glen, bring their right shoulders forward, and sweep it down towards the road, following this up by a movement of a co. of the 3rd Europ. against the front of the sepoys, and of the salt customs, from the extreme right, against their rear. To still further discomfit them, I sent a troop of H. M.'s 14th Lt. Drags. to a knoll quite in rear of the glen, and commanding a view of the lake and the other end of the pass. The rebels were driven with loss from the glen, and, crossing the road, ascended the hill on its left, for the purpose of joining the large body of rebels who occupied the hills divided by ravines on the left of the road. The troop of h. a. would have swept them away with grape, had not the officer commandg. it mistaken the rebels, on account of the similarity of dress, for men of the salt customs.

Not giving the rebels time to breathe, I directed Capt. Macdonald, my asst. qr. mr. gen., to storm the hill to the left of the road, with two cos. of the 3rd Europ. Capt. Macdonald conducted them ably and gallantly up the almost precipitous height, and extending the grenadier co. from the right, and supporting them with the other co., drove them from the first to the second line of hills. As soon as Lieut.-Col. Liddell had come up, with the rest of the 3rd Europ., I moved him up the hill, in support of his two cos., directing him to advance, and drive the enemy successively from all the hills commanding the pass. He performed this movement entirely to my satisfaction.

The glens and hills which protected the pass having been taken, I sent Capt. Abbott, with the 4th Hyd. cav., to clear the pass, and drive in the enemy's front. This he did effectually.

The enemy, repulsed in flank and front, retired to the village of Mudinpora, in rear of the end of the lake. The village was fortified by a formidable wall, in the shape of a bund of great thickness of earth and solid masonry, which dammed up the lake. The enemy had placed the few guns they had in rear of the bund, and had been firing with them on the 3rd Europ. on the hill.

The pass having been gained, I sent directions to Brigdr. Stewart, whom I had halted in rear of the pass with the reserve and siege train, to advance through it, and occupy the head of the lake. As soon as they had arrived, I opened with the 8-inch howitzer, and the 9-pdrs. in advance of it, a fire on the rebel guns.

At this time, I received a message from the officer commandg. the rear-guard, that the enemy had fired from the range of hills running to the pass of Narut, on him and his long line of baggage. I had all along thought it likely that the Rajah of Banpore might come to the aid of the rebels at Mudinpora, as soon as he had discovered that the move of Maj. Scudamore was a feint, and my attack the real one. I therefore sent a troop of H. M.'s 14th Lt. drags., and a regt. of Hyd. cav., to cover the rear guard.

A few rounds drove the enemy from their position in rear of the bund, and they retired from Mudinpora, through the jungle, towards the fort of Serai.

I directed Maj. Orr to pursue, with the remainder of the Hyd. cav.

The cav. which I had detached with Maj. Scudmore, and to assist the rear-guard, rendered the force available for the pursuit small.

Maj. Orr and Capt. Abbott under him, pursuing along the road through the jungle, came up with the rear of the rebels, consisting principally of the 52nd B. N. I., and killed a good many of them, amongst the number, the notorious mutineer, Lall Turbadio, who, as havildar maj. of the 52nd, was instigator of the mutiny in that regiment, and whom they made their commanding officer.

I owe my acknowledgments to Maj. Orr and Capt. Abbott, for their conduct on this occasion. Capt. Pinkney, who accompanied my force as political agent at Jhansi, distinguished himself in the pursuit.

I marched the force several miles beyond the pass into an open and level country. The line of baggage was so long that it did not come up till the next day; but owing to the precautions I had taken it did not sustain the slightest loss.

The results of the success of Mudinpora were as numerous as they were favourable. My force had got into the rear of the passes, and the enemy's line of defences, of which they thought so much. The pass of Narut, considered by them to be impregnable, was turned.

Mudinpora, it is true, was the weakest of the passes; but, on the other hand, it had been defended by the sepoys of the 52nd and other regiments, and by 7,000 picked Bundelas. The sepoys and the Bundelas quarrelled, the former declaring that the latter had run away, and left them to fight at the pass; general mistrust and a panic ensued in the rebel camp.

The fort of Serai, or Seyrage, a fortified palace of the Rajah of Shaghur, perfect in architecture, now used as an arsenal for the manufacture of powder and shot, fell the next day into the hands of my troops. The dyes of the old Saugor Mint, from which the rebels were making balls, were found here in quantities.

The day after I took possession of Marowra, an ancient fort with a double line of defences, in an important position, on the road from Saugor to Jhansi, and from Shaghur to Malthone.

The Shaghur territory was attached to the British possessions by Sir Robert Hamilton, and, in consequence, the British flag was hoisted on the fort of Marowra, in presence of my brigade.

The passes of Narut and Dhamooney were abandoned, and Sir Robert Hamilton established a police station at Malthone.

In fact, the whole country between Saugor and Jhansi, to the east of the river Betwa, which since the outbreak of the rebellion had been in the hands of the insurgents, was now, with the exception of Thal-Behut, restored to the Government.

I beg leave to recommend to your Excellency, for their conduct at the forcing of the pass of Mudinpora, Lieut.-Col. Liddell; Maj. Scudamore, for the skillful manner in which he conducted the feint against Malthone, which neutralised the force of the Rajah of Banpore; Maj. Orr; Capt. Abbott; Capt. Sinclair; Capt. Macdonald, Assist. Qr.-Mr.-Gen.; and Mr. Bartie, commandg. the Salt Customs Police, who had a short time before been strongly recommended for his gallant conduct in attacking the rebels' position at Dhamooney.

Commandg. Gen. India Field Force.

Reduction of Powrie.

From Brigdr. Gen. Napier, C.B., commandg. Gwalior Div., to the Chief of the Staff.

Hd. Qrs. Allahabad, Camp Powrie, 30th Aug. 1858.

Sir,—My telegram of the 21st and 22nd, and my demi official letter of the 20th, will have put you in possession of the principal occurrences here, which I will now report more fully.

Brigdr. Smith, commandg. the Brig. at Sepree, received information that the fort of Powrie, 20 miles N.W. of Sepree, had been seized on the 4th inst., by Maun Sing, the Raja of Narwar, who corrupted the garrison, most of whom joined him, after letting him into the place. His force was reported to be 4,000 men, of whom 700 were rebel sepoys, well armed with flint and percussion muskets.

Very urgent applications for protection were made by the local authorities to Brigdr. Smith, as Maun Sing was on the point of seizing other valuable towns, and alarming the well-disposed inhabitants of the district. The Brigdr. therefore moved at once to Powrie on the 6th, but found it too strong to be attempted with field guns, and encamping at a distance of three miles, applied to me for 2 12-prs., 2 8-inch mortars, * Maj. Scudamore's Force.—3 trps. H. M.'s 14th Lt. drags.; 1 trp. 3rd Lt. cav.; 100 irreg. cav.; 1 32-pdr. howitzer; 3 Bhoppal 9-pdrs.; 24th regt. By. N.I.

Sir H. Rose's Force—Advanced Guard.—500 Hyderabad cav.; 200 Hyderabad inf.; 4 guns art.; 1 comp. 3rd By. Eur. Centre.—1 trp. H. M.'s 14th Lt. drags.; sappers and miners; 4 guns H.A.; right wing 3rd By. Eur.; 3 9-pdr. guns. Capt. Lightfoot's batt.; 2 54-inch mortars; 1 6-inch mort., 1 8-inch howitzer; left wing 3rd By. Europ.; siege train; 3rd By Lt. cav.; baggage and convoy. Rear Guard.—125 Hyderabad inf.; 1 howitzer, and 1 gun H.A.; 1 trp. H. M.'s 14th Lt. drags.; 50 Hyderabad cav.

and reinforcements. The requisition reached me at Gwalior on the 9th.

On the 11th the Siege Train left Gwalior, and arrived at Powrie on the 20th, where I encamped with Brigdr. Smith's force, total strength as per margin,* just out of range of the enemy's guns. A party of 100 Inf., with 233 Inf. and two guns in support, under command of Maj. Vials, immediately seized a temple four hundred yards from the main gate. The enemy's picket retreating into the place, from which a smart fire of round shot and musketry was opened, and replied to by our rifle. I then proceeded with Brigdr. Smith; Capt. Turnbull, Chief Engnr.; Col. Blake, Comdg. Art.; and my staff to reconnoitre the north-east side, whilst Col. Robertson, 25th B.N.I., accompanied by Major. Chetwode, with a strong escort of cavalry and guns, reconnoitred the west side.

Having determined on the necessary arrangements, 4 8-inch mortars were sent down to the temple at sunset, and continued to play without intermission during the night.

A breaching battery for 2 18-prs. was commenced at 300 yards from a bastion on the east side, and nearly completed by morning.

A battery for the howitzer to give an oblique fire on the defences of the east side, and cross-fire on the breach, was also commenced at 400 yards, but being interrupted by a party of the enemy in the thick jungle, the bildars ran away, and could not be re-assembled. The mortars continued to play all day of the 21st, and had a sensible effect on the enemy's fire, which had been maintained with much briskness on the temple, and on all approaches. During the night of the 21st both batteries were completed, armed, and on the point of opening, when I received a message from the fort, to say that Maun Sing, with his followers, had escaped in the night, and praying that the mortars might cease.

I regret that it was out of my power, with my force, to invest the place properly. It is a mile and a-half in circuit. One side rests on an impracticable precipice, flanked by large ravines and jungle, and backed by a deep torrent, and a forest extending for many miles. In front of the other side is open ground, with tanks and marshes. The main gateway is very strong, having three gates, and numerous lofty bastions to flank them.

The Draug, or jungle gate-way, has two gates, and opens on ravines and jungle; a wicket leads down by the one side of the precipice, and there is also a path sufficient for escape of men in single file down the other.

The walls, though ancient, and in some places dilapidated, are generally ten feet thick, of massive stone, and from 25 to 50 feet high, and are well protected by the precipice above mentioned, by deep tanks, and a wet ditch, except at two or three points.

I found on the walls seventeen guns, all of which have been burst, except four of the smallest, which have been disabled.

No one at Gwalior, with intelligence enough to describe Powrie, could give me a correct idea of its size and strength; but a native plan, procured through the Political Agent at Gwalior, gave me correct information in some details which were valuable.

I received every assistance from Brig. Smith, comdg. Rajpootana brig.; and his brig. maj. Lieut. Golds-worthy; from Col. Blake, comd. art.; from Capt. Todd, 14th drags, assist. adjt. gen.; and Capt. Field, R.A., in charge of the siege train.

Maj. Vials, of H.M.'s 95th, at his own request, retained command of the advanced party at the temple.

Capt. Turnbull, chief eng.; Lieut. Festing, R.E., and Lieut. MacLachlan, B.H.A., Dep. Judge Adv. Gen., worked without intermission at the batteries, aided by Lieuts. Budger, Pearson, and Anderson, 95th regt., assist. field engs.

Capt. Turnbull and Lieut. MacLachlan, supported by a party of twelve volunteers from the 95th and 10 regts under Lieut. Crealock, 95th, examined the ground up to the foot of the proposed breach, both to see that there were no obstacles to the assault, and to find the best way.

This was a service of some danger, as the enemy were on the alert, and outside the walls. It is entirely owing to the exertions of these officers, and the efficient practice of the mortars under Capt. Field and Lieuts. Harris and Strutt, comdg. detachments, and their officers, that we recovered a place of such strength as Powrie in forty-eight hours. The escape of Maun Sing is to be regretted, but it could not have been prevented without a large force, and it would have been equally inexpedient to draw away troops from any other quarter, or to let the enemy remain in possession of a place in front of our force a day longer than could be avoided.

The troops have borne exposure and fatigue with the utmost cheerfulness, and very little sickness.

On the 23rd, Brigadier Smith came on the track of Maun Sing's party, near the Koonoo River, and recovered two guns, which they had carried away from Powrie; and Col. Robertson, with a light column, is now following them closely.

Capture of Forts Dehaign and Tiroul.

The Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following two despatches from Brig. F. Berkeley, C.B., comdg. Soraon field force, dated the 15th and 18th inst., the former reporting the capture of the village and fort of Dehaign, and the latter reporting the subsequent capture of the fort of Tiroul.

R. J. H. BRICH, Colonel,
Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mil. Dept.,
with the Gov.-Gen.

From Brigdr. Berkeley, C.B., comdg. Soraon field force, to Maj.-Gen. Sir W. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Camp, Soraon, 15th July, 1858.

1. Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C-in-C., that I yesterday attacked and captured the village and fort of "Dehaign," employing for that purpose the force as per margin.*

2. The rebels retired into the fort on our approach, allowing the skirmishers to occupy the village with very little opposition.

3. I directed patrols of cav. to encircle the fort, and posted the H.A. with a cav. escort on ground where they would have a good view of any rebels attempting to escape from the north side.

4. On the arrival of the heavy guns, I caused them to open in the direction pointed out to us by natives, but it was impossible to judge what effect was produced, the fort being completely hidden by trees and thick scrubby jungle. I determined, therefore, to attack at once with the Inf., and ordered the 7th Pun. Regt. to advance in skirmishing order, supported by the detach. of the 54th Regt., under command of Maj. Gillum; the 24-pr. howitzer followed close in rear, guarded by a coy. of H.M.'s 32nd L.I.

5. The 7th Punj. Inf. in two bodies, respectively headed by Lieut. Gordon, who was in command of the regt., and Capt. Colla, of the 32nd L.I., Field Engnr., dashed gallantly forward, and following the enemy rapidly up, entered the wicket along with them, closely followed by the detach., H.M.'s 54th Regt.

6. About two hundred and fifty of the rebels were killed in the ditch, the rest were rapidly chased through the jungle, and cut down in every direction. About one hundred and fifty of those that escaped from the fort were cut up by the Cav. and H. Arty., but several parties succeeded in getting off, owing to the paucity of Cav.; in all about five hundred were killed.

7. "Dehaign" cannot properly be called a fort; it is a large area of jungle, surrounded by a dilapidated earthen wall and ditch, and fenced with a thorny abattis. In the centre is a square brick house; in this I have left a strong Sikh picquet to protect the labourers Mr. Willock has procured to cut the jungle, level the walls, &c.; when that is done the picquet will be withdrawn, and the house destroyed; no guns were found in the fort.

8. Both officers and men exerted themselves to the utmost, and I trust will be considered to have merited the approbation of H.E. the C-in-C. Mr. Willock, joint magistrate, accompanied me, and rendered every assistance in his power.

Comdg. Soraon Field Force.

From Brigdr. Berkeley, C.B., Comdg. Soraon field force, to Maj.-Gen. Sir Wm. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Soraon, 18th July, 1858.

1. Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C-in-C., that on the 16th inst. I proceeded with the Soraon field force as per margin* to attack the fort of Tiroul, seven miles north of this camp.

2. We found the village deserted, and took up our position on the only open side of the fort, which is to the west, without any more resistance than an occasional round shot from the fort.

3. The fort is surrounded on three sides by an impenetrable thorny jungle, a few footpaths being cut in it, which are known only to the natives. It is also surrounded by a very thick thorny abattis, has six bastions, and mounted three guns; the escarp and parapet are about twenty-five feet high, in some places rather less; on the west or open side is the gateway, closing with a strong door, which is the only entrance to the fort. This side was fenced in with a double abattis, having a passage twelve feet wide between them; in rear of the inner one were trenches and "places d'Armes" for the defenders of the breastwork, who could, if forced, retreat into the fort through the gateway, and leave the attacking party exposed to the close fire of the loopholed walls.

4. Although I call this side open, it is only comparatively so, as what with the high thorny abattis, and the trees, it is with the greatest difficulty that a glimpse can be obtained of any part of the wall.

5. The mortars and 24-pr. howtzr. did their work luckily and well, and the enemy evacuated the fort in the night, leaving three guns, five hundred rounds of gun ammunition, and a quantity of powder behind them.

6. I have left three hundred of the 7th Punj. Inf. as a guard in the fort, until arrangements are made by the joint magistrate, Mr. Willock, for its destruction, which will be a work of some time.

7. I have to thank Maj. Michell, R.H.A., for the good service he rendered in directing the fire of the heavy guns, and Lieut. Cottingham, R.A., for the unflinching energy he displayed in working his mortars.

8. I also wish to bring to H.E.'s notice the gallant conduct of Capt. Colla, H.M.'s 32nd L.I., Field Engnr., who guided a small party of Punj. Inf., under the walls of the place, and succeeded in introducing portfires into the abattis. The enemy rushed out, and drove them away, killing the Naigue; they then put out the fire, so that no effect was produced, but Capt. Colla's endeavour to fire the abattis was not the less meritorious.

9. Capt. Middleton, Brig. Mij., with a covering party of ten men of H.M.'s 32nd L.I., also placed, in the middle of the night, before I was aware of the evacuation of the place, a bag of combustibles in the middle of the abattis in front of the wicket.

10. I received every assistance from all officers engaged, and the Punj. Inf., on whom, from necessity, after the Artillery, the hard work fell, were most zealously and ably commanded by Lieut. Gordon, H.M.'s 61st Regt.

11. Mr. Willock, the joint magistrate, was kind enough to assist me in everything that lay in his power.

F. BERKELEY,
Brigdr. Comdg. Soraon Field Force.

Description of Tiroul.

The fort is of mud, and nearly square in form, with seven round bastions, connected by curtains. The curtains are about seven feet thick at top, with a loopholed parapet, and on the inside have a sufficient slope to enable the defenders to ascend with ease to the terre plaine. This shape gives a great increase to the thickness of the curtains near their base. The place is surrounded (except at the gateway) by a dry ditch, about six feet deep, and the height from the bottom of the ditch to the top of the parapet varies from twenty to twenty-five feet. On the north-east and south-east sides there is an impenetrable jungle of trees and thorny underwood.

On all sides there is a breastwork outside the ditch, with flanking rifle-pits, and a thorny abattis in front; on the west there are two lines of this abattis, about fifteen feet apart, and very thick at the north-west angle, outside the tank. There is an ingeniously contrived labyrinth of entrenchments, screened from view at a distance, a part of which enfilade the approach to the gateway. There is only one entrance to the place. The west front of the fort is comparatively open, and a view of a portion of the south-west bastion and a small part of the curtain can be obtained at the distance of four hundred yards; the remainder of the place is concealed by trees. The abbatis forms the greatest obstacle to an attacking column, as the stormers would be delayed by it many minutes, exposed to a close fire from the body of the place and outworks.

Affair at Mohan.

No. 381 of 1858.—The Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Adj.-Gen. of the army, No. 713, dated 13th Aug. 1858, forwarding copy of a report from Col. F. C. Eveleigh, C.B., H.M.'s 20th Regt., comdg. at Nawabgunge, of an affair with insurgents in the neighbourhood of Mohan, on the 8th Aug., 1858.

R. J. H. BRACH, Colonel,
Sec. to the Gov. of India, Mil. Dep., with the Gov. Gen.

From the Adj.-Gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to the Gov. of India.

Mil. Depart., with the Gov. Gen.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the C.-in-C., to forward for the information of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen., a report dated the 9th inst., from Col. F. C. Eveleigh, C.B., of H.M.'s 20th Regt., comdg. at Nawabgunge, of an affair with insurgents in the neighbourhood of Mohan, on the previous day, which H. E. considers to have been very well managed.

W. MAYHEW, Lt.-Col.,
Adj.-Gen. of the Army.

Hd. Qrs., Allahabad, 13th Aug., 1858.

From Col. F. C. Eveleigh, C.B., comdg. at Nawabgunge, to the Offg. Depy. Assist. Adj.-Gen., Lucknow.

Dated Nawabgunge, 9th Aug. 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the Brigdr. at Lucknow, that yesterday morning, at five o'clock, I received a letter from Mr. Carnegie, Deputy Commissioner at Mohan, stating that enemy in force had attacked the Police Battalion stationed there on the previous evening (7th inst.), crossed the bridge, and driven in the Police picquets, and as he expected to be again attacked the following morning, he requested me to come to his aid.

I accordingly started from Nawabgunge with the troops named in the margin* at 6 A.M. yesterday morning, the 8th inst., and on my arrival at a village three miles this side of Mohan, I turned to the left towards the village Hussengunj, as I conceived that should the enemy in the tops about Mohan obtain intelligence of my approach, he would, in all probability, retire in the direction of that village, which is on the direct road to Ru-soolabad, and where he has generally a force of from six to seven hundred men.

On crossing the open maidan towards Hussengunj, and when about a mile from it, I perceived the enemy's Sowars and Inf. rapidly retreating from the village, apparently towards Ru-soolabad.

I immediately pursued at a gallop for about a mile and a half, but finding that the guns could not approach near enough to open fire, I halted them, and sent on two squads of the Irr. Cav., under Lieut. Godby, who followed the enemy in pursuit for about five miles.

The result was most satisfactory, for between forty and forty-five men of the enemy were killed, his only gun, a brass 3-pr., captured, together with one elephant and two camels.

After a short rest I proceeded through Hussengunj to Mohan, about three miles off, and met the Deputy Commissioner coming out with the police force.

I remained at Mohan, under a tree for some hours, to refresh the troops, and finally arrived at camp at 3.30 P.M.

The enemy's forces did not appear to be more than about one hundred and fifty Sowars and two hundred Inf., but I am inclined to think, from information afterwards received at Mohan, that numbers were lurking about in the neighbouring topos, which are thick and numerous.

The brass gun I left at Mohan, and it was placed in an excellent position to command the bridge.

I beg to express my thanks to Lieut. Godby for the able manner in which he handled his Irreg. Cav.

F. EVERAUGH, Colonel,
Comdg. at Nawabgunge.

* 300 1st Sikh Cav.; 2 guns B.H.A.; 25 gunners mounted, to support the guns; 12 rank and file H.M.'s 20th Regt., mounted on Mambars.

GOVERNMENT EDUCATION AND NATIVE PREJUDICES.

Surtout, point de zèle. Now, more than ever, is it of consequence to impress this salutary maxim on the minds of English magistrates in India. No small degree of moral courage is necessary to withstand the pressure from an affectedly liberal but really narrow-minded portion of the British public. The education and evangelisation of the gentle Hindoo is at present the cuckoo-cry most in fashion. The fancy will, no doubt, wear out in time, but, it is to be feared, not before much irreparable mischief shall have been done. The Court of Directors were fully aware of this new danger to the stability of our Indian empire, and one of their latest despatches from their Public Department was directed to the maintenance of their "ancient policy of perfect neutrality in matters affecting the religion of the people of India." This document, which is distinguished for its perfect honesty and high-toned feeling, was called forth by the Machiavellian conduct of the Inspector of Education in Behar. That gentleman, in reporting on the extensive district under his superintendence, complains of the difficulties arising from the prevalent and inveterate belief of the natives that Government is bent upon their conversion to Christianity. These prejudices, he states, are strengthened by every attempt to reason against them—an admission little to the credit of his own tact and judgment. But if his discretion and argumentative powers seem to be defective, still more so are his notions of rectitude and good faith. He shall speak for himself:—

"While, therefore, keeping up the theory of eliciting voluntary effort, I find it to be the most efficient and satisfactory course, in practice, to take for my starting point, and to allow my subordinate to do the same, that it is the order of Government that people should now educate their children, and that the people ought to be satisfied that Government would not command that which is not good for them. Having laid down this principle, we then proceed to prove, by every argument at our command, that in so doing the Government has no intention whatever to interfere with the religion of its subjects."

This gentleman appears to hold the jesuitical doctrine that the end justifies the means. Not so the Court of Directors. No sooner had they become acquainted with this most pernicious and disgraceful proceeding on the part of a public servant entrusted with a delicate and responsible duty, than they instructed the Governor-General to administer a severe reprimand to the officer who had so strangely forgotten the first elements of public honour. The views they express are so just in themselves, and so creditable to their expounders, that we feel we cannot do better than transfer them to our own columns.

"We desire," say they, "that you will express to Mr. Chapman the serious displeasure with which we have viewed his conduct, in thus inducing the natives to believe that it was the order of the Government that their children should attend the schools under his inspection."

"It is our intention that it shall be entirely open to all with the natives whether they will avail themselves of the facilities of education which we afford to them or not."

"It is the duty of all public servants to carry out with good faith the declared intentions of the Government under which they act. There is no safety for a State if over-zealous individuals be permitted, in the execution of the duties entrusted to them, to substitute their own policy for that of the Government."

"A Government must not be supposed to say one thing and mean another."

"In the above passages, and in many other parts of Mr. Chipman's Reports, there are statements of the most important character, with respect to the apprehensions entertained by the natives of interference with their religion on the part of the Government in their educational proceedings."

"The Government will adhere, with good faith, to its ancient policy of perfect neutrality in matters affecting the religion of the people of India, and we must earnestly caution all those in authority under it not to afford by their conduct the least colour to the suspicion that that policy has undergone, or will undergo, any change."

"It is perilous for men in authority to do, as individuals, that which they officially condemn. The real intention of the Government will be inferred from their acts, and they may unwittingly expose it to the greatest of all dangers, that of being regarded with general distrust by the people."

"We rely upon the honourable feelings which have ever distinguished our services for the furtherance of the views which we express. When the Government of India makes a promise to the people, there must not be afforded to them grounds for a doubt as to its fidelity to its word."

AN IMPERIAL PROCLAMATION.

A MAN who shows his cards is tolerably certain of losing the game. This blunder was made by no less a person than his Imperial Majesty the Great Mogal, or, as he styles himself, Bahadur Shah Padshah Ghazee Muhammed Darn Bukht Wali Nizamut Kadif Mirza Kareem ool Sonjah Bahadur. Not that we suppose for one instant that this many-titled potentate would have had the slightest chance of success had he kept his cards well in hand, and played with the science of a Hoyle. Under any circumstances his case would have been desperate, but he himself has told to all the world how wretchedly he proposed to play. Ordinary men are content to ventilate their folly in a book, which may possibly never be seen beyond the magazines of their publisher, but a Great Mogal can be satisfied with nothing short of a Proclamation, posted up in the most conspicuous places for the benefit of all men, both of those who can read and of those who can only listen and interrupt. This veracious document, dated August 26th, 1857, commences with the predicate that "in this age the people of Hindustan, both Hindus and Mahomedans, are being ruined under the tyranny and oppression of the infidel and treacherous English. It is therefore: the bounden duty of all the wealthy people of India, especially of those who have any sort of connection with any of the Mahomedan royal families, and are considered the pastors and masters of their people, to stake their lives and property for the well-being of the public." Starting from these premises, this "Ishtahar" proceeds to show that "the ancient works, both of the Hindus and Mahomedans, the writings of the miracle-mongers, and the calculations of the astrologers, Pandits, and Rannals, all agree in asserting that the English will no longer have any footing in India or elsewhere." This assurance will, no doubt, be particularly agree able to M. de Cesena, and other writers patronised by our faithful ally d'outre Manche. The sway of the British being doomed by inexorable fate to come to a close, it is incumbent on all to assist in "promoting the common good, and thus attain their respective ends." Otherwise they may lose a golden opportunity, and have leisure afterwards to repent of their folly—a state of things thus described by a poet:—"Never let a favourable opportunity slip, for in the field of opportunity you may meet with the ball of fortune; but if you do not avail yourself of it, you will have to bite your finger through grief." It is absurd to suppose that "the present slight inconveniences usually attendant on revolutions" will continue when the Imperial Government is established on a firm basis. Those who may now suffer at the hands of a sepoy or any other marauder have only to make known their grievances, and they shall receive immediate redress from the public treasury—but not a word about the punishment of the offender.

This preamble is followed by five sections, given at full length in the Delhi Gazette, but which our narrow limits compel us to epitomise. The first section sets forth that the British Government in making zemindary settlements have imposed an exorbitant land-tax, and, not content with the gratification of their avarice, have dishonoured and ruined many zemindars by putting up their estates to public auction for arrears of rent, and by allowing "a common rascal, a maid-servant, or a slave," to institute suits by which "respectable zemindars are summoned in court, arrested, put in jail, and disgraced." There is no question as to this being a substantial grievance in the eyes of the natives, who shrink with loathing from the degrading necessity of having to appear in court, even were it only as a witness. Then, the cost of stamps and the tediousness of litigation in the Company's Courts are only too justly reprobated, while exception is also made to the annual subscriptions for schools, hospitals, and roads. Under the Imperial Government all these extortions are to be done away with. "The jummas (assessments) will be light, the dignity and honour of the zemindars safe, and every zemindar will have absolute rule in his own zemindary." This grand old feudal principle has been sadly overlooked by British philanthropists, and we are now suffering for their absurd determination to govern the dependencies of the Crown according to the system that prevails in the mother country. Certain recompenses and advantages are next offered to zemindars who are ready to oppose the unbelievers, and promises are made which might stagger the most credulous.

The second section regards merchants. These worthies are assured that "the infidel and treacherous British Government have monopolised the trade of all the fine and valuable merchandise, such as indigo, cloth, and other articles of shipping." The people of the country have now nothing left to them but trifles, and even on these customs and stamp fees levy a contribution. "Besides this, the profits of the traders are taxed with postages, tolls, and subscriptions for schools." But when the Imperial Government shall be securely established, "all these aforesaid fraudulent practices shall be dispensed with, and the trade of every article without exception, both by land and water, shall be open to the native merchants of India, who will have the benefit of the Government steam-vessels, and steam-carriages for the conveyance of their merchandise gratis; and merchants, having no capital of their own, shall be assisted from the public treasury." No wonder if after this we read that it is the duty of every merchant to take part, openly or secretly, against the unsympathising stranger.

We now arrive at the third section, which is addressed to public servants. This is so exceedingly characteristic and cogent, that we copy it verbatim.

"It is not a secret thing, that under the British Government natives employed in the civil and military services have little respect, low pay, and no manner of influence, and all the posts of dignity and emolument in both the departments are exclusively bestowed on Englishmen. Few natives in the military service, after having devoted the greater part of their lives, attain to the post of Subadar, the very height of their hopes, with a salary of 60 or 70 rupees per mensem; and those in the civil services obtain the post of Sudar Ala, with a salary of 500 rupees a month, but no influence, jagere, or present. But under the Badshahi Government, like the posts of Colonel, General, and Commander-in-Chief, which the English enjoy at present, the corresponding posts of Pansadi, Punj-hazari, Half-hazari, and Sippah-salari will be given to the natives in the military service; and like the posts of Collector, Magistrate, Judge, Sudder Judge, Secretary, and Governor, which the European civil servants now hold, the corresponding posts of Wuzeer, Qazi, Safr, Suba, Nizam, and Dewan, &c., with salaries of lacs of rupees, will be given to the natives of the civil service, together with Jagere, Khilluts, Inams, and influence. Natives whether Hindus or Mahomedans, who shall fall fighting against the English, are sure to go to Heaven, and those killed fighting for the English, will doubtless go to Hell. Therefore all the natives in the British service ought to be alive to their religion and interest, and abjuring their loyalty to the English, side with the Badshahi Government and obtain salaries of 200 or 300 rupees per month, for the present, and be entitled to high posts in future. If they, for any reasons, cannot at present declare openly against the English, they can heartily wish ill to their cause, and remain passive spectators of the passing events, without taking any active share therein. But at the same time they should indirectly assist the Badshahi Government, and try their best to drive the English out of the country.

"All the Sepoys and Sowars who have, for the sake of their religion, joined in the destruction of the English, and are at present, on any consideration in a state of concealment, either at home or elsewhere, should present themselves to me without the least delay or hesitation.

"Foot soldiers will be paid at the rate of 3 annas, and Sowars at 8 or 12 annas per diem for the present, and afterwards they will be paid double of what they get in the British service. Soldiers not in the English service, and taking part in the war against the English, will receive their daily subsistence money according to the rates specified below for the present, and, in future, the foot soldiers will be paid at the rate of 8 or 10 rupees, and sowars at the rate of 20 or 30 rupees per month, and on the permanent establishment of the Badshahi Government, will stand entitled to the highest posts in the State, to jagirs and presents:—

| Matchlockmen.....              | 2 annas a day. |
| Riflemen.....                  | 2½ do.         |
| Swordsmen.....                 | 1½ do.         |
| Horsemen, with large horses, 8 | do.            |
| Do., with small do. . . . .    | 6 do."         |

The fourth section is the most feeble of the quintett, and is intended to eulist the good-will of artisans, such as weavers, cotton-dressers, carpenters, blacksmiths, and shoemakers. It is assumed these industrious beings have been shorn of their occupations by the introduction of English manufactures into India, but they would probably retort that admitting their profits were now less than formerly—and it is not so—they have at least one advantage under the Feringhee rule, that of enjoying their own without molestation.

In the fifth section rent-free lands are promised to all pundits, fakirs, and other learned persons, who shall make common cause against the avowed enemies of their respective religions, in conformity to the precepts of their holy books. And the Ishtahar or proclamation concludes with a terrific denunciation of all who shall still adhere to the British Government. Their estates shall be confiscated, their property plundered, and themselves with their families "imprisoned, and ultimately put to death."

CORRESPONDENCE.

"QUIETA NON MOVERE."

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—The oracle of the Strand has spoken. In regard to my former letter to you, a correspondent of the Illustrated London News writes as follows:—

"In Allen's Indian Mail of the 20th October, I observe that a correspondent, writing from the Oriental Club, dated 16th idem, accuses you of gross ignorance in stating that Sir Henry Montgomery, one of the new members of the Indian Council, a Madras Civilian, was on the Staff in Ireland. You may give this clever correspondent the 'retort courteous,' as Sir Henry was on the Staff in Ireland—on that of the Marquis Wellesley."

In the first place, I beg to remind the editor of the Illustrated that it was not the case of Sir Henry Montgomery solely, as the above would imply, that called forth my letter. His particular case was one only amongst many instances of "gross ignorance" noticed by me; and I would ask the editor what reply he can make to the other cases? He appears to have nothing to say on the subject. He allows judgment to go by default, but joins issue on that of Sir Henry Montgomery. In self-justification, therefore, I have examined into the evidence of this case, and will lay before you a brief statement of the results. The whole matter turns upon a reference to dates. The question is, was Sir Henry Montgomery, the member of the Council of India, ever on the Staff of the Marquis Wellesley in Ireland? The Marquis was first appointed Lord-Lieutenant in 1821, and Sir Henry was nominated a student of the College at Hailybury (by Mr. Canning, I believe) on the 1st of August in that year. On examining the Army lists, I find at that date only one Henry Montgomery inserted therein, and he was a lieutenant on half-pay. Was he the present Baronet? For the following reasons, this evidence is, I think, against this hypothesis. Firstly, because he (the lieutenant) is described simply as Henry, not Henry Conyngham, Sir Henry's second name. Secondly, because this officer entered the army in 1815; so that it is pretty clear he was not Sir Henry, who was born in 1803; for I ask, is it likely that any Administration in those pure days would have lent itself to such an enormous job as that of granting a commission to a gentleman of the mature age of twelve—an age when most gentlemen are about to enter on the second and most delightful phase of their scholastic career—that of the public schools?

As for the editor of the Illustrated London News, I can only feel pity for him. No wonder that he makes egregious blunders. Having to listen every day, and at all hours, to the enlivening strains of the 104th Psalm tune, as staccato'd out by the clock bells of the church immediately facing his office, I am not surprised, poor fellow, that the modicum of brain which he ever possessed should have become addled. I do not know whether the same excuse applies to his correspondent.

To the former, should he be in a position to understand and appreciate common sense, I would commend an attentive pondering on the motto with which I have headed this letter. The latter will, I trust, pardon my "quip modest" for his "retort courteous;" and so I bid them both heartily farewell.—Yours, Oriental Club, Nov. 9, 1858. ORIENT.

THE ANCIENT INDIANS, says Dr. Wilson, were unquestionably beef-eaters, while the fanciful doctrine of the Metempsychosis, which has ended in bringing their descendants under a superstitious fear of the lower animals, was utterly unknown to their fathers.

IMPORTANT TO PASSENGERS FROM INDIA.—The following notice has been issued by the Hon. Board of Customs at Southampton:—"Notice to Passengers.—A clerk is in attendance in the baggage warehouse to receive Customs' duties on articles subject thereto, brought by passengers with their baggage. No charge is made by the Customs for receiving these duties; and passengers, if so inclined, may pay them and pass their effects without the intervention of an agent.—Custom-house, Southampton, October, 1858."

A CIRCULAR MEMORANDUM, in reference to the new description of clothing for India, has been issued from the Horse-guards to all commanding officers of battalions, regiments, and depots. It announces that draughts for India must in future be provided, prior to embarkation, with one suit of drab-coloured India clothing, a pattern of which is deposited in the pattern-room at Pall-mall. This suit must be provided regimentally at the expense of the men, and will form part of the Indian clothing required to be provided on the arrival of troops in India, which by the last regulation consists of two suits of drab-coloured twill, and of other minor articles. The memorandum further states that when troops proceed to India by the overland route, it is desirable that this drab suit should be considered a part of their sea-kit, and a corresponding reduction should be made in the articles provided under that head.

APPOINTMENTS (Downing-street, Nov. 8).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Capt. C. Sim, R.E., to be Surveyor-General for the Island of Ceylon; and the undermentioned gentlemen to be members of the Legislative Council of the colony of New Zealand, viz.—G. A. Arney, Esq. (chief justice); C. R. Bakistoun, Esq.; G. Cutfield, Esq.; J. H. Harris, Esq.; J. Johnston, Esq.; J. Menzies, Esq.; and Maj. gen. R. H. Wynyard, C.B.

PROMOTIONS IN H.M.'S FLEET IN CHINA (Admiralty Nov. 8).—In consideration of the successful operations against piratical junks in the Chinese Seas, as recorded in the London Gazette of the 2nd inst., the following promotions have taken place:—Lieut. L. Wildman to be Commander, by commission dated Oct. 15; Lieut. J. W. Webb to be commander, by commission dated Nov. 5; Mr. W. Brabazon to be acting lieut. (to be confirmed on passing at the Royal Naval College), by commission dated Nov. 5.

INDIAN RELIEF FUND.—The General Committee of this fund previous to issuing their annual report, have directed that the following abstract of their proceedings to the present date be published:—The total amount of subscriptions, with interest and premiums on investments, up to the 27th ult., is £433,620. 17s. 6d.; loans repaid, £1,108. 2s. 1d.; total, £434,728. 19s. 7d. The expenditure has been as follows:—In remittances to India, £127,286. 18s. 7d., exclusive of power to draw for £10,000; relief granted to sufferers in this country, donations, £30,739. 2s. 4d.; loans, £5,018. 7s. 6d.; expenses of management for fourteen months, advertising, £4057. 8s. 1d.; salaries, stationery, rent, and other expenses, £2,166. 15s. 10d.; total expenditure, £169,268. 12s. 4d. The balance at this date is £265,460. 7s. 3d., but this is subject to applications for further assistance, which are still made from Calcutta, and it is certain that, in numerous cases, both in India and Great Britain especially, those of widows, orphans, disabled soldiers, and other sufferers incapable of contributing towards their own support, further provision will ultimately be requisite, involving the appropriation of capital to a very large amount, which cannot at present be calculated. The expenditure for relief in the United Kingdom granted by the committee has been as follows:—Donations to 32 officers, £3,055; to 86 widows and orphans of officers, £9,653; to 25 orphans of officers, £1,410; to 25 wives of officers, £2,133; to 51 other relatives of officers, £3,504; to 82 relatives of soldiers, £529; to 13 disabled soldiers, £29; to 298 widows and 423 children of soldiers on weekly allowances, £2,928; to ladies' committee for clothing £61. Loans to 9 officers, £946; also to 21 relatives of officers, £2,224. Donations to 10 clergymen and missionaries, £729; to 6 widows of clergymen, £386; to 1 wife of missionary, £100; to 23 widows and orphans of civilians, £1,470; to 75 indigo planters, merchants, railway officials, &c., £4,248. Loans to 17 civilians, £1,847. Total amount of relief in United Kingdom, £35,757.

MILITARY ON DITS.—In all probability (says the Times of yesterday) the 14th Light Dragoons and the 9th Lancers will return from India next year. Should two more cavalry regiments be ordered out, the 11th Hussars and 13th Light Dragoons will, in all likelihood, be those selected.

BREVET.—The undermentioned promotions to take place in succession to Col. B. F. D. Wilson, prom. to be maj. gen., v. Maj. gen. Lord C. Wellesley, dec.:—Lieut. col. J. Fraser, half pay unatt., fort maj. at Jersey, to be col.; Maj. T. Lillie, Ceylon rifle regt., to be lieut. col.

THE MUSEUM AT THE INDIA-HOUSE.—This important institution, the efficiency of which was placed in great jeopardy by the death of the late lamented Dr. Royle, is now likely to become extensively and permanently useful as a means of developing and diffusing information regarding the productive resources and manufactures of India. Dr. Forbes Watson has been appointed, we learn, to the post held at the India-house by Dr. Royle; and the widow of that gentleman has placed at his disposal her late husband's valuable MS. histories of many articles in the museum not fully described in the catalogue. It will be remembered that the arrangement of the museum had not been completed when Dr. Royle was unexpectedly removed by death when in the zenith of his usefulness. Dr. Watson has already done much good service in connection with the productive resources of India, and is in all respects a worthy successor of a great man.

Government in its Relations with Education and Christianity in India. By the Rev. G. P. Badger. Smith, Elder, and Co.

A SENSIBLE and well-argued plea in defence of a perfect neutrality in religious matters, and worthy of the calm consideration of both legislators and missionaries. The writer maintains the middle course with perfect consistency, and reasons from the ancient Scriptures and modern experience against the folly of thrusting Christianity upon those who are not prepared to receive its doctrines. Himself a minister of the Anglican Church, he is not likely to feel indifferent on the subject of religion, but his zeal is tempered with discretion, and he fully recognises the absurdity of giving that which is holy unto the dogs, and of casting pearls before swine. His knowledge of the native character enables him to appreciate the soundness of the "old traditional policy," and moderates any tendency to impatience with the little progress that has yet been made. The Governments of former days were often compelled by circumstances to accept certain clauses in their treaties with Native Powers which they would gladly have had expunged. But those clauses, having once been formally ratified, may not now be violated, or repealed, without a breach of public faith which nothing could justify. The Court of Directors, while regretting their apparent sanction of Pagan rites and ceremonies, rightly judged that no true religion could ever demand the sacrifice of honour, and therefore adhered to their engagements with scrupulous fidelity. No change in this respect, we rejoice to think, is likely to take place, so long as the direction of public affairs remains in the hands of Lord Derby, or that of the Indian Department in those of his gifted son. But it is appalling to think on the irreparable mischief that may be done should Mr. Bright and his compeers ever find themselves in a position to influence the internal administration of India.

With regard to secular education also Mr. Badger draws his conclusions from facts rather than from specious theories. He shows that thus far the only effect of education has been to refine and intensify the failings and vices common to both Hindoos and Mahomedans, and, indeed, to all Asiatics. It has failed alike to improve their moral character, and to secure their attachment to British rule. Such being the case, Mr. Badger wisely concludes that the Government is not called upon to make sacrifices in order that its subjects may become more vicious and disaffected than they have hitherto been. To retrograde would be neither just nor dignified, but nothing more need be done until the natives show a better appreciation of the efforts already made in their favour.

ARGUMENTUM AD HOMINEM.—Suttee, though not common in a province (Scinde) where Mahometanism was the prevailing creed, was patronised by the Hindoo priests, who derived a profit from it. "All nations," they said to the Governor, "had customs which should be respected, and this was a usage especially sacred." "Be it so," the Governor replied, "but my nation has also a custom. When men burn worn alive we hang them, and confiscate all their property. My carpenters shall, therefore, erect gibbets on which to hang all concerned, when the widow is consumed. Let us all act according to national customs." Though they had no compassion for burning women, they felt that it would be unpleasant to be hanged themselves; and there was an end of Suttee. Sir Charles Napier was accustomed in this fashion to reason quations with the natives, and his arguments and his rude banter made converts to his policy, or at least silenced opposition.—Quarterly Review.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAG-

NESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for removing BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignees, Messrs BAILEY and WILLS, of Horley Fields Chemical Works, Wolverhampton, and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents

TEETH.
No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.
Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patente.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.
All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldonsquare, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.
—GOUT and RHEUMATISM.—These most painful disorders are equally prevalent in town and country, and is-sure to be found as often in the patrician's palace as the pauper's cot. It is commonly supposed that gout and rheumatism are different diseases; but, in fact, they are identical—not distinct diseases, but different forms of the same disease, though it is true that some extreme cases may seem to disprove this assertion. The cause and the seat of both is depraved blood, and he who would successfully contend with either must point his remedies to this vital fluid.
Holloway's admirable Ointment affords immediate local relief, and his wonderful Pills, directly acting on the blood, eradicates all disease.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS
is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNI-VERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison. The Hygienic, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines, the monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

FRAMPTON'S PILL OF HEALTH.
Price 1s. 1 1/2d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

This excellent Family Pill is a medicine of long-tried efficacy for purifying the blood, so very essential for the foundation of good health, and correcting all disorders of the stomach and bowels, and restoring all disorders of the afflicted of its salutary effects. The stomach will speedily regain its strength; a healthy action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys will rapidly take place; and renewed health will be the quick result of taking this medicine, according to the directions accompanying each box.

PERSONS of a FULL HABIT, who are subject to headache, giddiness, drowsiness and sinking in the ears arising from too great a flow of blood to the head, should never be without them, as many dangerous symptoms will be entirely carried off by their timely use.

For FEMALES, these Pills are truly excellent, removing all obstructions, the distressing headache so very prevalent with the sex, depression of spirits, dullness of sight, nervous affections, blotches, pimples, and sallowness of the skin, and give a healthy, juvenile bloom to the complexion.

These Pills unite the recommendation of a mild operation with the most successful effect; and for elderly people, or where an occasional aperient is required, nothing can be better adapted. In consequence of the great and increasing demand, the Proprietor has obtained permission from her Majesty's Commissioners to have the name and address of
"THOMAS PROUT, 239, STRAND, LONDON."

Impressed upon the Government Stamp, affixed to each box.
Sold by all Vendors of Medicine.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 13th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the Bombay Mail of the 25th October we receive satisfactory intelligence from all parts of India. The cessation of the heavy rains had enabled the British troops to take the field once more, and to act with vigour against their ubiquitous enemies. Lord Clyde, it is said, has completed his arrangements, and was about to give the coup de grace to the hopes of the insurgents. His lordship's subordinates, however, have not waited to learn the result of his deliberations, but have taken upon themselves to cut up the rebels wherever an opportunity presented itself. In Oude several gallant actions have been fought, in which fortune never for a moment wavered. The most important, perhaps, was that at Sundeela, where Captain Dawson, with 1,400 police infantry and 500 horse, drove an overwhelming force out of the town, and on the following day gained a decisive victory in the field. Three guns were captured, 1,000 men slain, and the rest dispersed after a ten miles' close pursuit. On the 8th October Sir Thomas Seaton added to his former laurels by intercepting a body of rebels on the frontier near Shahjehanpore, when three guns were taken, and 300 dead bodies left upon the ground. That same day another body attacked Powayne, but were repulsed, though with trifling loss. Three days earlier, Brigadier Everleigh took two guns, and put 200 rebels hors de combat at Meangunge, between Lucknow and Cawnpore.

In the Patna Division a success has been achieved at a cost all too dear. A rebel chief named Megha Sing had for some time past fixed his head-quarters at a village only twenty miles from Buxar. A small force went out against him on the evening of the 6th Oct., and succeeded in cutting up sixty of his followers. Unhappily, the two commanders, Captain Nason, Military Train, and Captain Douglas, Madras Cavalry, exposed themselves too unsparingly, and were mortally wounded while heading the charge.

The Jugdespore district, so long the rallying point of Oomur Sing's adherents, has been occupied in force by the column under Brigadier Douglas, without encountering the slightest resistance.

The most stirring intelligence, however, is from Central India. On the 2nd October the broken remnants of the Gwalior Contingent were at Esaughur, a fortress in Scindiah's dominions. Of this place they became masters without opposition, through the treachery of the garrison, and obtained an invaluable prize in the shape of 21 pieces of artillery. The approach of Brigadier Smith, however, induced them to beat a speedy retreat, and on the morning of the 6th, Esaughur was entered by a small detachment of cavalry under Captain Mayne. Still undaunted, Tantia Topee next marched upon Chandairee, the gates of which were thrown open to him by the commandant. But not even here was he allowed to enjoy any long respite from pursuit. If he remained at Chandairee, he would certainly be surrounded by the British forces, for General Michell was moving upward from Seronge, and Brigadier Smith was pushing on from Esaughur. In this pressing danger the rebels divided into two bands, one under Tantia Topee, the second under the Nawab of Banda. The latter took the direction of Mungrowlie, but was stopped by General Michell on the 9th, and utterly defeated, with the loss of six guns. In the meantime, Tantia Topee fell back on the Betwa, which he crossed at a ford, seven miles N. W. of Tal Behut. General Michell, however, was too quick for him, and on the 19th overtook him at Sindwah, twenty miles from Teary, and brought him to action. The result was Tantia's complete defeat, with the loss of four guns and five hundred men.

The Bheel leader, Scotaram, has been slain by Captain Keatinge, at the head of a body of Holkar's Cavalry. Tranquility in Kandeish may now be expected to ensue.

The aged King of Delhi, with the youngest of his wives, Zenut Mahal and her son Jewan Bukht, had reached Allyghur on his way to Allahabad. His departure from the ancient seat of empire does not appear to have created any sensation among either Hindoos or Mahomedans.

It is not improbable that the Council of India may inaugurate their possession of office by the distribution of very considerable patronage. We have some reason to believe that an extensive promotion of officers, and consequent filling up of the lower grades, will follow upon the reconstruction of the Bengal army—a contingency no longer remote.

Our "Official Gazette" of this day, it will be seen, contains a long list of removals and postings in the Bengal Artillery.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

ALLAHABAD, 5th Oct.—Captain Mayne reports by Telegraph that he left Seronge on the morning of the 30th September, with 400 sabres from Leo, the enemy said to be 14,000 strong with four guns, Tantea Topee, the Banda Nawab, the Rao Sahib, Ruheem Ali and Adil Mahomed Khan, fled towards Mogul Serai on the 28th September, saying that they were going to Esaufghur. They had forty wounded, and numbers of women and children. Captain Mayne reached Pachore on the 1st October, bringing sixty rifles from Leo in fifty hours. The enemy had left the previous evening, and were at Sarickparie twelve miles north of Pachore. Captain Mayne has recovered the Goona-road, and is in communication with that place; he intends keeping on the track of the rebels.

ALLAHABAD, 6th Oct.—The following intelligence has been received of the movements of the rebels under Tania Topee, and of our pursuing columns:—The main body of the rebels left Seronge on the morning of the 28th September. In the direction of Kuchnar Serai on the 29th, they were at Putchraj. Another body of rebels, under Adil Mahomed, of Umptapallee, was moving in another direction. Brigadier Smith was at Bakuja en route to Goona on the 1st October, his intention being to outflank the rebels, and, if possible, to get ahead of them. On the 2nd October Tania Topee attacked and took Esaufghur by the Chundaree and Shoopoor ghauts. The Soobah is in confinement; and it seems that Scindia's troops fraternised with the rebels. Brigadier Smith was, on the 3rd October, at Kuchnar Serai; General Smith either at Seronge or Mogul Serai.

The following, dated the 5th Oct., has been received from Lucknow:—On the 3rd October, Hureehand with 6,000 men and eight guns crossed the Goomtee ten miles north of Sundeela; he was joined by several other zemindars. On the morning of the 4th he came within three miles of Sundeela with 12,000 men and twelve guns. Captain Dawson, at Sundeela, entered a fortified enclosure with 1,400 infantry, and sent his 500 cavalry back to Nulliabad. There are 100 Police Foot at Raheemabad. On the 4th October the rebels entered the western side of Sundeela. On the same evening a force of 1,200 men, H.M.'s 88th Regiment, with two nine-pounder guns, and two five and a-half inch mortars, 250 police cavalry, and 600 police foot, marched to Mulhela, whence they will advance with 500 cavalry sent back from Sundeela.

ALLAHABAD, 8th Oct.—The following has been received from Captain Mayne, Esaufghur, 6th October:—Brigadier Smith's force arrived here this morning. The Rao Sahib with most of the treasure and guns left Esaufghur yesterday for Chunderee, Tania Topee with the rest of the force follows at sunrise, and will reach Chunderee to-night. Four guns were taken from this; about 800 Sowars have gone to plunder Ranode. A combined movement is proposed for surrounding the rebels at Chunderee with the Mhow, Goona, and Brigadier Smith's columns.

The Chief Commissioner of Oude sends the following from the civil officer at Nuwabgunge, Cawnpore. A force under Brigadier Eveleigh of four guns, 150 cavalry, and 200 infantry met the rebels at Meeangunge on the evening of the 5th, captured two guns, all they had; killed and wounded 200. The rebels numbered 100 infantry, 200 cavalry, and two guns, our loss two or three sowars killed, five or six wounded.

The civil officer at Sundeela reports that on the 7th October the rebels were driven out of the town after some hours fighting, losing one gun and more than 100 killed. Our loss is one police foot killed and one wounded; in Captain Dawson's entrenchment, one artilleryman killed, more not known, but loss is very slight.

ALLAHABAD, 11th October, 1858.—A force marched from Shajehanpore on the 8th of October, and came up with the rebels, at Beek-homer, four miles on the other side of the Sookuta Nuddee; 300 rebels were killed, and two guns out of three taken. Our loss about twenty killed and wounded.

The following has been received from Lucknow:—Our column, after taking the village of Panoo, four miles from Sundeela, by assault, pursued the enemy for ten miles. The enemy were beat off very difficult ground, and there was a continued succession of single combats. Our loss, Europeans, two officers wounded,—Lieutenant Green, of the Rifles, severely, and seven privates. Police, four killed and forty-four wounded; five Hussars killed, and twenty wounded, or missing; the loss of the rebels on the second day all agree in estimating at about 1,000 killed on the field, and three guns captured. Many sepoy were in the field. 2,000 police foot, and 500 cavalry will be left at Sundeela.

Sir R. Hamilton reports the following intelligence from Tehree, dated 1st (sic in original) October:—

The Deputy Commissioner of Lullutpoor had reached Khanpoor with the Tehree troops. They were attacked on their way by the rebel Thakoors from Chundaree at Buldabas; seventeen rebels were killed, and the rest fled. Some troops from Jhansi had reached Tehree, and were to proceed at once to Banpore.

ALLAHABAD, 12th October, 1858.—The Commissioner of Jhansi reports on the 9th October, that Tania Topee on the 8th was at Sirrus Ghaut, seven miles north-west of Tal Behut, his force being partly on the north, and partly on the south bank of the river Betwa, and he appears undecided which course to take, whether to make for Tehree or to move on Jhansi. The Tehree state is assembling troops to resist him. Captain Fenton, Deputy Commissioner of Chunderee, was at Banpoor on the 8th; but was to leave that afternoon for Tehree with all his establishment, and join Colonel Liddell's small force at Pirtheepoor, three miles north of Tehree, on the Jhansi road. It was reported that 400 British Cavalry had reached Amolee, one march west of Kurrara.

The Commissioner of Rohilcund reported on the 10th October, that the rebels attacked Powaeen on the 8th and were firing from 1 A.M. to 2 P.M.; they attempted to carry the place, but were repulsed with loss of four killed, nineteen wounded, and one gun burst. Our loss, eight wounded.

GWALIOR, 8th October.—The following has been received just now from Seepree. From Brigadier General Sir R. Napier, K.C.B.—The Sooba of Chunderee reports to the Keemasdar of Seepree, that fighting there between Scindia's troops and Tania Topee's force had lasted three days. The rebels lost about 800 killed, our loss trifling, town plundered by the rebels. The brother of the Dewan all right in the Chunderee Fort.

INDORE, 9th Oct.—Capt. Keatinge reports from near Sindh, that the rebels' leader, Seeta Ram came out to forage; hearing of this, Capt. Keatinge went after him with Holkar's cavalry and some sowars, came up to them and attacked them. They fled towards Beejaghur, but the cavalry came up with them, and killed Seeta Ram, the leader, and ten more rebels, and captured six (alive), and took twelve horses and all their provisions. Seeta Ram's head has been brought into camp and recognised. There is no doubt about his being killed.

HILL SPORT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FRIEND OF INDIA.

MY DEAR SIR,—A love of sport, or a restless spirit, often carries the Anglo-Saxon servants of Government when on sick leave to scenes little frequented if ever traversed by Englishmen, and they thus pick up information geographical, geological, political, commercial, or zoological, which might be either interesting or useful to the public, even when carelessly recorded, if transmitted to the pages of our popular periodicals.

Having after a twelvemonth of hard work and exposure in pursuit of rebels and mutineers in the plains, been sent on six months' m.c. leave to visit the hills, avoid the rains, and recruit in pursuit of more agreeable if less exciting sport than that of last year in a better climate, I proceed, on the premises first stated, to give you some notes of my trip, either for publication, or cremation, as you may deem most fitting.

If you possess, or any of your readers who may peruse these notes possesses, a copy of the map of Kumaon and British Gurhwal, published by Captain Thuillier in 1850, chiefly from the researches of the Stracheys, you will find that near the Niti Ghât, which is just south of the great Thibetan marts of Gartok and Daba, the line of eternal snow through which our difficult and dangerous Ghâts into Thibet pass, takes a bend southward, leaving the watershed line which is our boundary, and along which the snow line, except in this instance, extends, and although all the highest of the Himalayan peaks are found on spurs south of the watershed, yet the line of watershed itself is throughout so elevated as to place, comparatively speaking, a tax of difficulties almost prohibitive on our commerce with Central Asia, China, and Thibet. It was this difficulty which induced Lord Dalhousie when at Simla to direct the commencement of the great Thibet road which takes advantage of the passage cut through the Himalaya by the Sutledge, to make a commercial artery between Central Asia and Hindostan; but the interminable windings of that road will require, to make it worthy the design of its projector, an amount of outlay which our Government will hardly disburse: the sum even necessary for proper repairs on what has been accomplished appears now to be obtained with difficulty, and, until railways cover the Punjab, the point where this road debouches on the plains must be deemed ill chosen as regards the further journey towards Europe of commercial staples from Thibet. Of the great value and importance of the Thibet trunk road, however, and the advantage it will give us in introducing our manufactures direct to Central Asia, instead of hearing as we have done of Manchester piece goods being procurable only from the Russian traders, there can be no doubt, and it is much to be regretted, that the present stagnation in its progress exists.

To return, however, to the point on the map to which I have alluded, the tract of land enclosed between the high snow range and the watershed line is now an uninhabited waste. It is above the range of tree vegetation excepting just at Gong, where birch trees and a kind of cypress are plentiful, but is covered with excellent grass, and an innumerable number of flowering plants. Vetch and lupins, wild onions, leeks, rhubarb, and atees (the fashionable substitute for quinine), grow in quantities.

The character of the slopes and the entire geological formation is more that of the table land of Thibet than of our precipitous hills, and there are throughout it numbers of small lakes or rather ponds, which, being supplied with water from springs warmer than the atmosphere around, form agreeable baths throughout the summer. The names marked in the map, Rimkim, Shel-hel, Hoti, Septel, &c., are those of camping-grounds only, halting places for the numerous droves of goats, joobools, and oxen, &c., which traders take through the tract in the summer. The height of the numerous points on the watershed where paths from the tract enter Thibet is not much above the table lands bordering the Sutledge, and you will perceive that the Gong river, collecting as its affluents all the streams of Hoti and Septel, bursts through the line of snow hills, and thus forms what ought to be the gate of Thibet, if advantage were taken of the immense assistance given us by the Gong river, and we completed along it merely the narrow ledge which serves as a road in those regions.

It is already easy to go from the south as far as the junction of the Girtee stream with the Gong, and from the north to the junction of the Septel stream with that of Gong, but the intermediate portion is so precipitous that no human being has yet traversed it. Blasting the rock and the erection of platforms of the birch wood, there plentiful, would, however, accomplish all that is necessary.

The Gong river route not being practicable, the traders of Bumpa, Gumsali, Pharka, Malari, Jelum, &c., when bound for Gyancee, or other places east of Daba, all cross either the difficult and dangerous "Chor Hoti" pass, which is 18-300 feet high, or its still more dangerous and difficult neighbour, the "Drun-jun." There are droves of goats with their loads of merchandise and drivers frequently lost in snow storms just previous to the closing of these Ghats. The bones of the men are burnt the succeeding spring, but unless some near relative comes to remove the wool, borax, &c., which may have formed the consignment, as also the clothes of those who perished, they are left lying where they fell, an object of superstitious dread to the other traders.

All the inhabitants of our snow valleys trade. They reside from March until November in the villages just under the Ghats, where a scanty cultivation is carried on by their women, and whence they take flour, rice, sugar, cotton, &c., &c., into Thibet; bringing back borax, salt, wool, and pushum. Most of them have some member of their families residing at Daba, or Gyancee, on the Nunakhar Lake, to collect the amount of merchandise they require from the Bunneahs; and from November to March the inhabitants of all these valleys abandon their villages, and live along the banks of the Aluknunda about Kurnprag, Nundprag, &c., whence they effect their exchanges with the plain Beoparees at Nujeebabad.

These remarks will show how important a site for an entrepôt or dépôt of commerce the Hoti and Septel tracts would become, if the road along the Gong river course was made, and I am sure that a promise of a proportionately increased trade is all that is necessary to induce the Kumaon Commissioner, or his present intelligent assistant for Gurhwal, to find means of effecting the desired object.

The means of transport used are "the chowr gai" or yak, which carries a load of from 150 to 200 lbs., and is purchased for from twelve to fifteen rupees, but which dies if taken down to the lower ranges; the joobul, a mule, between the yak and the hill-breed of cattle, which carries from 100 to 150 lbs. weight, is purchasable for from twenty to thirty rupees, and can go without injury down to Nujeebabad in the cold weather. Lastly, goats and sheep, which cost from two to three rupees each, carry from ten to fifteen lbs. weight, and do not comparatively suffer from change of climate. The yaks and joobuls are all bred in Bussahir, whence they are brought for sale; the goats and sheep come from the Chumba district.

The feed of these animals costs nothing; they have ample grazing in Thibet, and in the cold weather throughout the whole course of the Aluknunda and Ganges to Nujeebabad, excepting just the day's march about Sreenuggur and Paoree, there is grazing for unlimited numbers. As nearly as I could ascertain, some fifteen or twenty thousand of these animals cross the tract I have alluded to yearly, and all the traders with whom I conversed said they would gladly pay a tax of one or two pie per goat to escape the difficulties of the Chor Hoti and Drunjun.

Borax costs at the mart of Gyancee from two to three rupees a maund. It comes from the Lake of Chäba, which is beyond the Kylas range of hills, about three weeks' journey for a drove of goats from Gyancee (which is called Gya Nima in the map); the road lies past Kylas, via Darchun or Gungree (which are marked Darchin and Kangri in the map). The road from Daba to Chäba leaves the road between Daba and Gartok at Soonoosorkya (marked in map Sunsurga). The Baboos, who have copied these names, have altered and improved upon them where practicable. At the lake of Chäba itself a tax of one rupee entitles the trader to load his drove with as much borax as they can carry, without any further payment.

The cost of sheep's wool at Daba and Gyancee is one kuldar or Company's rupee for four or five fleeces, or from one and a half to two annas per pound. The cost of pushum varies considerably, and it is generally bought in the goat's fleeces mixed with the other wool.

As Nujeebabad is close to Roorkee, these articles might find ready transport by the Ganges Canal and river to Calcutta: the mercantile community there will best be able to judge whether borax at the above rates and by the above route will pay.

It may be as well to mention that this year little or no borax has been brought across the Ghats for two reasons. The first is, that last year, owing to the road to Calcutta being closed, the Beoparees who came up declared that borax was dead, "Swaga mur gya," and the traders from Bhote sold what they had even as far down as Sreenuggur for three rupees a maund. Now, an English "Beoparee" would not have said that borax was "dead," but that it had become "a drug." You will as a philologist observe, en passant, the delicate connection between cause and effect shown in the mercantile technical phraseology of the two countries, like the legend of "death and the doctor," who "ride in a gig," and therefore visit the patients together. The second reason of stagnation in the borax trade is, that the garkoon of Gartok has lately chosen to proclaim for himself a monopoly of all the Swaga in the country, and fixed its price at thirteen seers for the rupee. This is but little dearer than I have mentioned (three rupees a maund), but as he has sold none this year, he may perhaps come to his senses next; even if not, however, should the traffic ever become one of suitable importance, the merchant princes of England will very soon put a stop to the vagaries of the Garkoon or any other savage whose antics interfere with their trade.

Hundës affords also a promising market for the coarser kinds of tea produced in our Himalayan manufactories. All the Hunnias drink tea: it is brought from China packed in lumps, the leaves badly dried and sometimes partly decomposed. The masses look more like tobacco than tea. I purchased a lump weighing two seers for seven rupees, which was the market rate. The Hunnias boil the leaves for some hours in an earthen vessel, then pour the decoction into a copper full of hot water, and mix with it salt and ghee. Our tea, even if thus prepared, would command the market.

The Hunnias are almost entirely dependant on our hill territories for their farinaceous food; the only kind of grain they grow on the table-land about the banks of the Sutledge is oowa, a species of barley, but in small patches only. So sensible are they of their precarious position in this respect, that they keep in stores throughout Thibet about three years' supply of grain to provide against any accident interrupting their trade with this territory. They are thorough barbarians, and their rulers, the Chinese, have a great dread of any English travellers or English investigations entering their territories. They could, perhaps, be starved into submission if they misbehaved, by our closing the Ghats, and remitting, while they were closed, the trifling revenue paid by the inhabitants of the snow valleys. This measure would, however, injure our own subjects, and need not be resorted to while we have a regiment of Highlanders or Ghoorkas to march into the hills above Daba and Gartok.

All nations and creeds, excepting Europeans, are free to trade in Hundës. Ghoorkas, Hindustanis, Sikhs, and Willayutees, may all travel to Gartok, or elsewhere. But though the people of the country are friendly towards us, the authorities prohibit our entrance, and fine heavily the zemindars of any district through which Englishmen pass. The people say that if any foreign Raj is established in their country, they trust it may not be that of the "sings" (Sikhs) or Ghoorkas, but that they may have the same English Raj as our hillmen. Our assessment in Kumaon and Gurhwal is very light, more than the revenue being spent in the province by Government for establishments, troops, tea-planting, &c.; and the traders of the snow valleys, who used to pay large sums as taxes to the Ghoorkas, having but little land cultivation, pay us next to nothing. The Commissioners of those districts, which are extra regulation, have also been very lenient rulers. So we have a truly loyal set of subjects in the hills—men who have not yet forgotten the tyranny of the Ghoorkas, and who have fresh in their recollection the exertions of Major Henry Ramsay, their present Commissioner, to relieve their wants during the last two years of famine in the hills. No native government, some of them remarked to me, would have cared what the poorer classes suffered during the famine. The accounts, therefore, of their Raj, which they give to the Hunnias, naturally excites the envy of the latter.

The district officer of the Sutledge valley is the Zumpun of Daba. He appears to have almost absolute authority over the people of his district. He comes from a distant part of the empire—the province of Bood; has no income allowed him but what he can make by trade and fines, &c., and has only about a dozen police, and an unpaid writer, styled vizier, as an establishment. He can, however, call out any number of the inhabitants of his district for military or other duty. They have a very great dread of him, and he in turn has a very manifest respect for the Garkoon or Commissioner of Gartok, his immediate superior. The Garkoon's establishment, however, is not on a much more splendid scale than that of the Zumpun. He has under him for executive duties a sort of captain of police, styled Surpoon, who commands one hundred men, ragamuffin soldiers, armed with inferior matchlocks, and two, sometimes three, swords a-piece. This last awe-inspiring arrangement is intended to make them a match for the dacoits of Hundës, who are at times very numerous, and who come to the attack after discharging their firearms with a sword in each hand, and one tied round the waist.

The Zumpun generally holds office for about three years, and is sometimes promoted at the end of that time to the rank of Garkoon; the present Zumpun of Daba is supposed to be more intelligent than the generality, and has held the post now for five years.

The superior officer to the Garkoon is a sort of Lieutenant Governor, styled "Shibehid," who resides about a month's march from Gartok, in the province of Bood; this accounts for all the district officials belonging to a clique from that province.

The geological strata on this side of the Passes is, like the greater portion of the Himalaya, the oldest kind of sienites, limestone, and argillaceous schists, formerly called primitive or primary strata, a term now abjured by geologists as wrong in the abstract; but why it should not be retained, when once in vogue, as a conventional term or arbitrary hieroglyphic merely, I don't understand. I observed a quantity of fine light green marble, and a good deal of quartz, on my way up the Doulma river. Nearly all the Himalayan streams contain gold, and there was a party of twenty goldwashers, or "Dunnias," as they are called at Summunga, when I passed; they had come to take advantage of the natural quartz-crushing effected by the impetuous current near that place during the rains. They used a very primitive cradle of their own construction for washing, and were quite ignorant of the use of quicksilver. There is a good deal of gold found in the sources of the Sutledge, but it is evident from the poverty of the men who follow the trade, that, by their system of extraction at least, the pursuit is not very profitable, and nuggets, I believe, are unknown. There are, however, some very fine specimens of rock crystal found in the hills about Niti. One of my men described three pieces of "dark blue crystal" found near his village of Bowa, and sold to some traveller for eight annas, but I think he probably had mistaken violet for blue, and that the stones were amethyst not sapphire, though I have no doubt but that all the varieties of crystallized alumina exist on the Thibet side of the passes. Turquois are common, every gipsy woman (kumba) wearing them in her hair. I observed in the Friend an extract from the Times of the 15th July last, regarding the museum of practical geology in Jermyn-street, in which it is mentioned that the great Austrian diamond is only a pure piece of rock crystal. I shall feel much obliged if any of your readers, possessed of the necessary works of reference, would inform me of the exact size and weight of the Austrian diamond, as I suspect specimens as fine might be got in Thibet. I have a very pure fragment which a trader found in one of the streams on the northern slope of the range separating the Sutledge from the Indus. Just across the passes, and even on the top of some of them, there are quantities of fossil bivalve shells, and in a bed of dark friable stone there are ammonites and belemnites in great numbers, extending all the way from Takoollee Shém to Salkh. The ammonites are of all sizes, from a pin's head to a hackery wheel, are generally found in clay boulders, the body of the fish often beautifully crystallized, and the shell portion sometimes sparkling with iron pyrites. I found twenty good specimens at Takoollee Shém in one day's search. The Hunnias also brought for sale numerous pieces of fossil bone which the coolies called "bijlee har," and along the summit of the snow range I found several aerolites, called "devee gola" by the natives.

The ammonites are much prized by pilgrims to Buddinath and Kylas; they seek for those chiefly which have been worn round by the action of the streams in which they are found; they are called sulgrams, or more correctly salik rams by the Hindoos, who in the plains suppose that they are procured by perseveringly praying on the banks of some river, and the sulgram comes swimming along the surface of the water to the holy devotee.

Volcanic rocks of various kinds, basalt, serpentine, and Amygdaloid, are scattered about Kyunglung and Kunchelhego.

I passed up the Niti valley in the end of June, just as the rains were commencing. But little rains falls in any of our snow valleys, and what little there is, generally in the form of Scotch mist. There is, however, a great deal of cloud and fog, which prevents deer-stalking on the hill tops around.

There is an abrupt descent from the top of the Chor Hoti Ghat, on which a glacier lies, for a distance of two hundred yards. This is of course only traversable when covered with snow, but, as snow falls all the year round, the transit is never closed for more than two or three days at a time in the summer. Above and below the descent lie sundry parcels of borax, wool, &c., and remains of some hundreds of goats who have died buried in the snow.

On reaching Hoti I found the usual detachment of four Hunnias, with their tattoos and teapots, but without weapons of any kind, who, hearing of an Englishman entering Bhote, had come to watch my movements. These men had the regular Tartar features and dress; very few of them have any beard; the young men often look like young women, and when old, with a few hairs on the nose and chin, very like weird sisters. They consider all the country about Hoti and Septel as their own. Grazing numbers of ponies there during the summer, they held a long palaver with my men, the burden of their discourse being that I should go back at once; while we replied that no clique under the name of Hunnias or any other had a right to close any of nature's highways against a section of mankind. The Hunnias stated that some four or five years ago two Englishmen passed through the Byans Ghat, visited the Munsorawur Lake, and had the audacity to sail about in a leather boat on it. The Zumpun was called to account for permitting such an insult to the lake. He was fined Rs. 200, and afterwards arrested and sent to Gartok.

I forwarded an ambassador to the present Zumpun with a letter and a Victoria tartan Cashmere plaid, requesting an interview, and promising him a stereoscope and a number of daguerreotype slides which I had brought for the purpose. The wonders of the stereoscope would not, I knew, lose by the description of the coolie I sent with the letter, as it had been duly exhibited to all my camp. The Zumpun was absent from home at the time, but the plaid was taken by his wife, who promised that her lord should pay me a visit at Lurky, between the Niti Ghat and Daba. The Hunnias at that time were all talking of an expected invasion of Runbheer Sing's Sikhs, or Sings, as they are called in Hundés, who were said to be coming from Ladakh. Many years ago the Sikhs, under one Jwalla Vizier, invaded Hundés. The Hunnias did not, during the summer, attempt any resistance, and the Sikh commissariat arrangements appear to have been worse than our own in the Crimea. When the snow fell, the Sikhs, being apparently quite unprepared for it, died in numbers from cold. The Hunnias also attacked them, and destroyed the miserable remnants of their army. The greater number were killed at Kyunglung and Purung, north of Naipal, where Jwalla Vizier died, and the Hunnias had for some years a large collection of weapons taken from the invading army. These have probably been carried off by the last Ghoorka invaders, under Jung Bahadoor. The Hunnias say that Jwalla Vizier, having left no son, a disciple of his has got the command of fourteen thousand men, who are to advance from Ladakh. The Zumpun declared the report a fabrication; but the Hunnias were, nevertheless, carrying off all their property into the mountains, where they say they will locate themselves till the great Llama calls down snow to destroy the invaders. Most of their defence is then left, they say, to the Llama. I pointed out that it might be more convenient if in urgent cases he would call down the snow in the summer, instead of waiting till the winter, and that I could undertake to perform the latter ceremony myself. The coolies all laughed heartily at the Llama's dis-cretion.

My interview with the Zumpun took place, as arranged, at Surkya. He brought two small pals with him, one of which he used as a reception-room. Being on his own side of the Ghat, he said I must call on him, not he on me; and as the matter was unimportant, I waived all ceremony. He had more of the Chinese face than the Hunnias with me, was dressed in a sort of yellow flowered silk gown, with the usual mandarin hat, with a red silk fringe to it and plain glass button. He called the capital of the empire Gyanuk, said he knew the Yang-tse-kiang River, but did not know anything of the rebellion or the war with the European powers. He had brought a Llama as "domestic chaplain" amongst his followers. This man wore a dull red robe, and had his hair cut in the style of Mr. Cox, in Box and Cox. All the Llamas crop their hair, and wear the red robe. This individual had a high, though narrow, forehead, sharp semetrical eyes, high cheek bones, hollow cheeks, an aquiline nose instead of the usual Hunnia snub, but a sensual mouth. Altogether he would have made, in clerical black instead of Llama red, an excellent Belgravian Puseyite confessor.

The stereoscope which I presented to the Zumpun's son was greatly admired. The English ladies, however, depicted on the slides were pronounced inferior in beauty to the hours of Hundés. The captivating aspect of the latter can be appreciated by any one who has gazed on the visage of the female hippopotamus in the Regent's-park Zoological Gardens.

Our fraternisation ended with the usual request that I should leave Hundés as soon as practicable, otherwise the Garkoon would be angry. The Zumpun wished to prohibit my returning via Septel, which he considered within his jurisdiction; but I declined taking any enseignements from him with respect to my movements in what I considered British territory.

I was extremely anxious to push on to the Chava Lake, which no European has, I believe, ever visited, or at least to pass Gartok, which was the limit of Messrs. Moorcroft and Heaney's journey; but the Hunnias put on guard to watch my camp informed me that they had strict orders to prevent my going even to Gyancee; that if I persisted in forcing my way they would fight me. So I told them they had as much chance as a herd of bunchowr bulls of stopping me if determined to go, and the opinion of their Government I did not value a fig; but as coming to blows with them would probably compromise me with my own Government, I would forego entering any village, and merely shoot about Nybukchoung, Tazang, and Chounglas. The Hunnia villages are all moveable: there is only one pukka house in Daba, and two in Gartok, the remainder of these towns being permanent encampments only.

The only large game in Thibet are the burrul, or snow sheep; the nyau, or ovis ammon; the kyang, or wild horse; the bunchowr, or wild yak. The only beast of prey is the chanko, or wolf.

The burrul is already well known to most Himalayan sportsmen, being found on this side of the snow, and has been fully described by "Mountaineer" in the pages of the Sporting Review. Its gigantic congener, the ovis ammon, is more rare. In all but the horns it looks like a large burrul, has the same slate-coloured hair, with black marks on the legs, and fine pushum wool mixed with the hair in the cold weather. The male is generally found apart from the females. The latter have almost straight flattish-shaped horns, something like a goat, while the former has an enormously heavy pair of horns, shaped like those of the common English ram. Both are common in the ravines about Nyoukchoung and Tazang.

As a spectator stands on the elevated land by the watershed, he sees to the north the course of the Sutledge running from east to west through a table land which is fourteen thousand feet high, and intersected with ravines. The Himalayas, to the south, look but an ordinary range of hills, scarcely so elevated in appearance as the range beyond the Sutledge which bounds the view, and in which, to the eastward, the peak of Kylas rises conspicuous. On the plains between the ravines herds of Kyang feed. They are more assinine than equine in appearance, are of a light red colour, with white belly and legs, and have the hog-mane stripe down the back and tail of the ass: the head is disproportionately large, and they bray instead of neighing. I caught a young foal after shooting the dam, but found it an untractable little brute: it escaped, or was stolen, shortly afterwards. The Hunnias say they cannot be tamed or made to do any work; but doubtless Mr. Rarey's system might, as it suits the zebra, succeed with them. They would certainly attract attention in a Hyde Park curricule, and it would be easy to lasso the foals if they were valuable for draught or riding.

The bunchowr is a noble-looking animal, something in appearance like the American bison, but larger. His bushy tail is often used as a fly-flapper in the plains; and two of them, as state appendages, are, or were, frequently to be seen behind the chair of the Governor-General at dinner. The white ones, however, which are the most prized, are those of the chowr gai, or tame yak. The bunchowr, or wild yak, is always black. The word "chowree," derived from the yak, is often also applied erroneously to fly-flappers of sandalwood, ivory, grass, &c. The females and young of the bunchowr are never seen in the nullahs of Shelsel and Keo, which alone are accessible to English sportsmen. The herds inhabit the hills by Gartok, whence, at the commencement of winter, the bulls come to the nullahs above named. These nullahs, having no thoroughfare through them, are not entered by human beings for perhaps years at a time. In them the bunchowr roams in solitary grandeur till the end of July, when all the bulls return to visit their families on the Gartok Hills.

The great difficulty in all Thibet shooting, but especially in hunting the bunchowr, is to prevent sound, sight, or scent reaching the animal. These are positive, comparative, and superlative dangers respectively, which the hunter must provide against. The state of the wind must be carefully and continuously studied while stalking.

I entered the Salkh Nullah on the 5th July last. It had not then been visited for three years. I came unexpectedly on six bulls together, but the wind being unfavourable they were aware of my advent, and on the qui vive, before I sighted them. I got within about 300 yards, but could not approach nearer without showing, so did not fire, under the delusion that I could track them to some more favourable ground for stalking the next day. They, however, abandoned that part of the country the same night, and I hunted nearly a fortnight in the neighbourhood. I never saw them again. On the same afternoon I sighted a gigantic solitary bull—the natives with me said they had never seen one so large before. He, too, scented our approach, and went off over snow and bad ground with the agility of a goat. The course he took, however, led the men with me to suppose that he was making for the Keo Nullah, and I determined at some future time to hunt for him there. I slept the same night in the Salkh Nullah, having left my camp at Shelsel. We all slept on the ground, but I had several blankets with me, and the cold may be imagined from the fact that the topmost blanket was white with hoar frost when I awoke in the morning.

On the 27th of July I reached the Keo Nullah with but little hope of finding bunchowr, as the season for their migration had arrived. I was, however, fortunate enough to come a second time across the big bull of Salkh Nullah, and, wind and ground being favourable, killed him. He had shaggy hair about the head, and long curly hair like that of the tail all along the flanks and legs, reaching to the ground, which gave him a petticoated appearance. He measured nine feet around the chest, and his horns were sixteen inches in circumference at the base, and eleven inches half way up. The Hunnias feasted on his flesh, which was like good beef. The Rajpoots of our hills who accompanied me, though they hunted and helped to skin him, objected to partake of the flesh, from his cousinship to the Braminee bull.

Though the yak is so wild there is no difficulty in securing him if once wounded, as he never goes far from the spot where he is hit, and, unless disabled, charges furiously at the hunter. His charge is not one to be dreaded, however, by any sportsmen who may have met the elephant or tiger on foot. An imaginary line from the right horn to the left eye, and another from the left horn to the right eye, gave at the point of intersection the correct centre for the brain, and almost any rifle penetrates with ease. The Bhotas said that at the time of my visit only four Europeans had ever succeeded in killing the bunchowr.

As some of the numerous officers whom our military necessities have called to this country may wish to visit Thibet before returning home, I append a list of the necessities for the journey, an estimate of the expense and the routes from Almorah and Mussourie.

Those who may obtain six months' leave, and are desirous of making the most of their time in recruiting their health, and who prefer the wild free life of a hunter to the deux temps and silken dalliance of Simla or Mossourie, will not regret a visit to Hundès. The trip can be accomplished during those months which rain renders most disagreeable at our sanatoriums, giving a clear, dry atmosphere in exchange for fogs and constant wet, and, when England recovers from that dread of the responsibilities of her position in the world, that fear of acquiring territory which is at present an unreasoning mania,—when England enters on her share of the Anglo-Saxon heritages of Asia, may she find a band of pioneers in the hunters who have passed the snows!

THE CAMPAIGN IN OUDE.

The following is the official memorandum of proposed operations in October, 1858:—

"To be drawn from Rohilkund, for operations in north-west of Oude, clearing Mohumdee, Nowrunabad, &c., and proceeding to establish itself at Seetapore:—

"2nd Punjab cavalry to send 200 sabres to Shahjehanpore, the remainder of the regiment being divided between Bareilly and Pilleebheet. The detachment light field battery (2 guns), now at Jellabad, to be drawn into Shahjehanpore, unless the commissioner think it absolutely necessary that it should remain. The distribution of artillery between Moradabad and Bareilly to be revised, reducing the strength at the former place. The two guns belonging to Major Hammond's battery, from Meerut to Moradabad.

"Force for operations in the Byawarra country:—

"Brigade (including a detachment which marched to Bismu Nuddar) now at Sultanpore, under Brigadier Horsford, to keep open the communication between Sultanpore and Fyzabad.

"F Troop, royal horse artillery, 6 guns; detachment field battery, 2 guns; heavy field battery, 8 guns; 5th company 13th battalion royal artillery; detachment Madras sappers; H.M.'s 7th Hussars, 417 sabres; Hodson's horse, 312 sabres; headquarters and wing of H.M.'s 53rd foot; 2nd battalion rifle brigade, 1st Madras fusiliers, 5th Punjab rifles.

"The brigade now at Pertaubghur, under Brigadier Pinckney.—Col. Gordon's light field battery, heavy field battery, Major Le Mesurier's reserve company of royal artillery, Sikh company of artillery, Major Stokes's pathan horse, H.M.'s 32nd and 54th foot, 1st Sikh infantry.

"Third brigade, to consist of—en route from Roorkee, Major Lennox's company, royal engineers; from Lucknow, Delhi pioneers, Major Middleton's troop royal horse artillery; en route, 1st irregular cavalry; en route to Azinghur, Jat horse; coming from Cawnpore, H.M.'s 79th Highlanders; Allahabad, Belooch battalion.

"Brigade to move from Sundeelah, on Sunde.—From Lucknow, Colonel Nicholson, with a company of royal engineers; from Cawnpore, heavy field battery and light field battery; en route down country, two squadrons of carabinieri; from Nawabgunge (Cawnpore road), Wales's horse; 1st regiment of Oude police cavalry, H.M.'s 20th foot from Lucknow, left wing of H.M.'s 23rd foot, two battalions of Oude police.

"The duty of this brigade will be to clear the country to the westward beyond Sundeelah, and establish itself at Sunde, or at such point as may be indicated by the chief commissioner of Oude.

"All these various columns—namely, from Shahjehanpore, Nawabgunge (on the Cawnpore road), Sultanpore, Pertaubghur, &c., might commence operations on the same day—viz., the 15th of October. In addition to the troops enumerated there will be left to guard the Doab, of corps en route, Major Moir's horse artillery, H.M.'s 9th lancers, and the 19th Punjab N.I.

"It is proposed, further, that one of the regiments belonging to Fyzabad should be thrown across the Gogra as soon as the river is bridged. A regiment of police being now in formation at that place it is presumed that this may be done without danger. If there be any risk, the portion of the troops now at Durrabad (which is very strong) may be drawn back to Fyzabad.

"As many of the Bengal sappers and miners as are fit for duty to come from Roorkee to Shahjehanpore; Colonel Tomb's troop of Bengal horse artillery from Meerut to Delhi; Major Kay's troop of Bengal horse artillery from Delhi to Lucknow, to relieve Major M'Kenna's troop of Bengal horse artillery, which will proceed to Meerut.

"One battalion of British infantry, with two squadrons of Queen's bays, to Nawabgunge (Cawnpore road). There is already a troop of horse artillery at Nawabgunge.

"In addition to what is stated above, the troops now in Lucknow, Nawabgunge (Bamburkee), Durreabad, and Fyzabad, will all be kept moveable, to be made use of for the reduction of the country, amounting to about 5,000 Europeans and 2,000 natives."

OUDE MEMORANDA.

To ALL CIVIL OFFICERS, OUDE.

Civil officers are requested to select suitable sites for the erection of fortified posts at the following places:—

Nawabgunj, Cawnpore-road; Nawabgunj, Fyzabad-road; Bunnee Durriabad; Sultanpore, and Pertabgurh.

A complete plan of these posts, which will contain a Thannah and Tehseel, has been designed by Colonel Abbott, and will be sent in three or four days; at present the Chief Commissioner wishes officers at once to select sites, bearing in mind the following considerations:—

Size of the work itself (150) one hundred and fifty yards square, which should be within 300 yards of the main road.

Old buildings, forts, &c., may be turned to advantage if possible. It must not be inside any village or collection of habitations, nor be liable to be commanded from any neighbouring buildings or high grounds.

The best possible site is a clear, high, and dry site, with no habitation within 800 yards, possessing either a good well or good water if a well is sunk, and within one hundred yards of the main road. If possible the soil must be such that the earth taken out of the ditch will build well into walls and parapets. If no well, one must be sunk. The fortifications are for the purpose of containing the civil establishments, including the European officers, with about 200 of the military police to defend them when the troops take the field. They must be commenced on at once, and the entrenchment ready by the 15th proximo. No time should be lost in commencing advances to be made from the Treasury. On the receipt of this Memo. the Civil Officer is to decide what he intends to do, and report the same within twenty-four hours to the Military Secretary, and furnish a report every succeeding Monday of the progress made till the entrenchment has been completed.

28th September, 1858.

To ALL CIVIL OFFICERS, OUDE.

Memo.

The Chief Commissioner desires to call the particular attention of all Commissioners and Civil Officers to the following remarks. Military operations in Oude may shortly be expected to commence on an extensive scale. The services of every armed servant of the Government will be required to aid in the speedy suppression of the rebellion and maintenance of order. Probably several influential zemindars will in like manner aid with their contingent forces.

In order that the local Government may render the services of all aforementioned really efficient in co-operating with the regular army, it is absolutely necessary that parties should, while the campaign lasts, be under no divided authority. The Chief Commissioner therefore directs that civil officers will not call on any party who may be nominated to perform a part, however small, in the general military operations of the campaign, to act in any way, or move from one position to another, except by the desire or with the concurrence of the senior military authority in his district.

With reference to the Military Police, the Chief Commissioner deems it necessary to direct that civil officers do not issue any orders to such of the police as may be serving in their districts, unless the police have been specially placed under their orders for district duties.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SERIA, Oct. 13.—We are in full cry after Tantia Topee, he having left this two days ago; the scent is correct and good, and the marks fresh where he crossed the river, therefore we may run him to earth at Teary (Tehree) if we do not succeed in running into the wary old fox before he gets there. To-morrow morning the whole of our Cavalry, the 8th Hussars, and 1st Lancers, with the four guns of Blake's Troop Horse Artillery, and fifty Riflemen of the 95th, mounted either on camels, spare troopers, or tattoos, will "go at" the ford here, although it is chin deep, but we must gather ourselves up for it. The remainder of the brigade, 95th and 10th N. I., a division of two guns, and 100 sabres, will proceed to Chanderee and cross the river Betwa lower down. We arrived here (Seria) yesterday morning, after three long marches from Esaughur, in the hope of intercepting Tantia crossing at the only ford near this practicable into Bundelcund. Seria is twelve miles south of Chanderee, and when we once cross the river Betwa we are in the Saugor district, and Bengal Presidency. Once in Bengal, every one says we shall not return to the Bombay Presidency, for Lord Clyde never allows troops to leave it when he once gets them into his command, and we may have to follow Tantia up towards Banda, for it is supposed when he hears of our close proximity, he will break cover at Teary, and make for Chuttpoor and Ailpore, both large towns, and worth sacking to him; besides, they say, he is likely to get an accession to his force, and be joined by one or two disaffected Rajahs near Chuttpoor, who have long since been known to be in open rebellion, and ready to join anything. We shall make the distance to Teary, some six and thirty miles, in two days. Our Brigadier is going with us; while the Infantry, which will march to Chanderee and halt there to-morrow, will cross the river the day after, and advance also on Teary from another direction, probably going to Lartpore and Doorogon, due west of Teary, while we shall be advancing on it from the south-west. I hear we go to Nurat to-morrow, which is about eighteen miles from this, and seventeen from Teary, so that if the "old-un" does bolt in a westerly direction, the Infantry will nab him. We have a report in camp that the 14th Dragoons and 100 of the 86th have left Gwalior with two siege guns, to join our brigade; if they should be luckily coming down from Jhansi direction, they will be in a good position to prevent Tantia going north. Brigadier MacDuff's brigade was at Rajpore on the 6th, General Whitlock and the remainder of the Saugor division at Banda on the 9th, and General Michel is also advancing from the south; so that it will be very extraordinary, with all these troops so close at hand, if Tantia does escape, although I very much fear it will be the case of the two men and the oyster with us, and that we shall, after our long run of so many, many months, although we have not viewed him since the two good days' sport on the 17th and 19th June last, at Gwalior, drive him into some one else's clutches, who will get all the credit, while we, who have had the real hard work, will come in for the kicks. Our brigade has been granted six months' batta donation, little enough too after ten months' hard field service. A report is in camp that Tantia has two English prisoners.—Mr. Smith, of the police force, and Mr. Fenton, of Jhansi. Have you heard it? I don't think it can be true.—Bombay Gazette.

BAHAWULPORE.—Intimation has been received of the decease of the Nawab of Bahawalpore. He died on the 3rd October, and has been succeeded by his son "Raheem Yar," who has been proclaimed at Ahmedpore (one of the capitals of the Bahawalpore state), and has assumed the title of "Bahawal Khan."—Lahore Chronicle.

MOVEMENTS OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—We have been informed on good authority that it is the present intention of the Governor-General, after paying a short visit to Lucknow, to return to Calcutta in November. This would seem to be a resolution but recently formed, if we remember that it is only a few weeks ago that Lady Canning went up to Allahabad. The remains of the body guard also were sent up country but lately.—Murkar.

JUDICIOUS LIBERALITY.—The Honourable the President of the Council of India in Council has been pleased to extend to the following officers, when performing mounted duties on field service, the existing rule granting compensation for loss of chargers, viz.:—To all foot artillery officers attached to heavy or light guns, drawn by bullocks or elephants; to infantry officers below the rank of field officer, when performing the duties of that grade in room of absent field officers; and to officers acting as orderly officers to officers commanding divisions and brigades. It is to be understood that horse allowance is not authorised by these rules, but compensation only for the loss of horses. Officers commanding divisions and brigades in the field will each be allowed to employ two orderly officers in excess of the authorised staff. These orderly officers may be either regimental officers or staff officers, who are not ordinarily required to be mounted, not being in receipt of horse allowance. The nomination of orderly officers and of regimental officers to perform mounted duties in the absence of field officers is to be notified in regimental, brigade, or division orders, as the case may be.

BANDA, Oct. 7.—Nurrayun Rao and Madho Rao, of Kirwee, left Banda for Allahabad on Tuesday last. The sentence of transportation for life, which was passed on Nurrayun Rao, has been remitted by the Governor-General on the recommendation of the special commissioner, and he will in future vegetate at Huzareebagh on an allowance of 700 rs. per mensem. No orders have yet passed regarding Madho Rao. The district keeps very quiet. The Major-General is on his road to Saugor, and Brigadier Munsey's column will garrison Nowgong. Brigadier Carpenter is still at Nagode, trying to put a little salt on Radha Govind's tail. The latter, however, backed by 500 mutineers and 4000 matchlockmen, cannot be induced to listen to the voice of the charmer even when represented by such a bewitching old sorcerer as Brigadier Carpenter. Captain Griffin, with his gallant Boondelis, is stationed at Rajapore on the Jumna. He has lately been officially complimented upon his gallantry by the Governor-General. The crops are most magnificent, and promise an abundant harvest.—Delhi Gazette.

BUXAR.—A correspondent from Buxar reports to us the gloom which has been cast on the station, by the death, on the 7th of October, of Captain Nason, Military Train, and Captain Douglas, 4th Madras Cavalry. For some days, information was brought that Megha Rae was establishing Thannahs, and squeezing money out of the Chowra Pergunnah, and that he was then at a village called Kheerie. A force was organised by Lieut.-Colonel Dunford, C.B., commanding the infantry, consisting of 100 of the 84th, and about 100 of Madras Rifles and Sikhs, which were sent up the Khurrunnassa by steamer, and the cavalry sent by land, to meet at Dehree, whence they were to proceed together to Kheerie. Unfortunately, the infantry were landed some miles above Dehree, and instead of five had about ten miles to march, the cavalry went on in advance, and soon came upon the enemy, about 400 strong, whom they at once charged, and poor Nason was almost the first to fall. The man who shot him stood firm to receive his charge, when within a few yards of him took a deliberate aim at him, shooting him through the abdomen, and killing him on the spot. This fellow was immediately killed by Douglas, who about half an hour after received a similar wound, but, strange to say, remained on horseback for some time after, and breathed his last the next morning. Both were first-rate officers, and great favourites wherever they were known. The Military Train and 4th Madras Cavalry behaved nobly. About 80 Pandies have been accounted for, all Pucka Sepoys. We have not heard of any loss on our side beyond that of the two cavalry leaders. The parties did not get back until 12 at night, the cavalry having marched about 50 miles and fought a smart action within four and twenty hours. Megha Rae himself was present, but bolted manfully.—Mafussilite.

STAR FORT, JHANSI, Oct. 4.—One hundred and twenty-six of the 3d Europeans are in hospital, and the rate of mortality is increasing. The 24th Bombay Native Infantry have also a good many in hospital: in fact, the natives who came up with the force are getting no better health than the Europeans. About two hundred of the 3d are doing duty in the fort and Star Fort; the remainder are out with detachments. The Board sat on the wounded men a few days since, and I believe they are to be sent down to Bombay some time this month. I also hear that the regiment is to be relieved, and will escort the sick to Alhaur. One of the scoundrels who took a conspicuous part in the murder of our countrymen and women in Jhansi, was strung up this morning on the site of his atrocities. This scoundrel was a doctor in Jhansi at the time of the outbreak; he witnessed and assisted at the murder of the Europeans. The scoundrel avoided the fury of the Europeans when we stormed the city by making his exit. The gallows was erected about thirty yards from the spot where the Europeans were murdered; he was brought to the scaffold about half-past seven. When the rope was put round his neck, a sort of demoniacal smile played on his features, as much as to say, I am satisfied with what I have done. Only a few hundred natives came to see the execution, and not more than twenty or thirty Europeans were present, such sights having been of too frequent occurrence of late to excite any interest. The Rane of Jhansi's father and Prime Minister were hung at this place a short time after we took possession of the city. I have seen a comet for the last six nights. It becomes visible a little after dark, and disappears below the horizon about half-past seven. The natives have prophesied great things concerning it; that it will be followed by war, famine, and a great many other things, and even some of our men believe in such superstitious nonsense. I have lately conversed with Brahmins acquainted with English, who were in Jhansi at the time of the outbreak; they all tell me, that when the Europeans were murdered, the Rane did not want the crime to be perpetrated. She would not sanction such vile measures; but her father threatened to cut her head off if she refused her assent to such proceedings; and when General Rose arrived at Jhansi, she ordered the men on no account to fire on us. She said she was coming out of the city to give herself up to General Rose, but the men in the city got frightened, thinking that if she gave herself up to General Rose she would be all right, and they would be all killed. Before she could get outside the city they commenced to fire on us, and a shell which our horse artillery threw, killed some of the men in the city. She then immediately returned, resolved to fight it out. They also state, that she knew of the half-caste who was concealed in the city, but she did not want to murder any more than she could help. If the above is true, the Rane of Jhansi was not such a tigress as she is represented to have been.—Standard.

PATNA, Oct. 7.—English planters do not seem to be doing well in this district; but a Frenchman I hear is making the Zemindars and Ryots belonging to the locality where his works were situated fork out for his losses. He says he does not think Government will ever give him a rap, so he is determined to take care of himself. This part of the country is far from quiet, our troops cannot catch the rebels. They have got into a plan of spreading themselves through the country, through Indian corn, and other high crops, and then doubling back on our rear whenever our fellows have managed to get near them, and thus there is no doing any damage to the chaps, but they manage to worry us. In fact the country is against us, and solely owing to the Courts. They have worked havoc with all the old landed proprietors, and these ruined men and our Sepoys are the malcontents, and command the entire sympathy of the people.—Englishman.

THE KING OF DELHI.—The following account of the departure and progress of the state prisoners from Delhi will be found highly interesting. The ex-King, his family and attendants, were brought from their place of confinement at an early hour on Thursday morning, and packed in their several conveyances, —were drawn up in line on the piece of road leading from the Lahore gate of the palace to the Grand Trunk Road, where their former guard, of the 2nd Bombay Fusiliers, made them over to a troop of H. M.'s 9th Lancers, told off for the duty. This was done in the presence of Mr. C. B. Saunders, Commissioner of Delhi, Lieutenant Ommaney, the officer in charge of state prisoners, and some other officers who happened to be present. A squadron or two of the Lancers then trotted off as an advance guard, and the cortège commenced moving. The first palanquin carriage contained the deposed monarch and his two sons, Jewan Bukht and Shah Abbas (the latter a youth, the son of a concubine), the carriage being surrounded by Lancers on all sides. Next followed a close carriage, containing the Begum Zeenut Mahil, with whom were Jewan Bukht's wife, her mother and sister, and an infant. The mother and sister of Jewan Bukht's wife were allowed their choice of either going or remaining at Delhi. They preferred the former. The third carriage contained the Taj Mahil Begum, another of the ex-King's wedded wives and her female attendants. Next followed five magazine store carts with tilted tops, drawn by bullocks; these contained the male and female attendants, four in each cart, a party of Lancers accompanying each. In this order the cavalcade progressed very well, until more than half the distance across the bridge of boats had been accomplished, when all of a sudden, one of the bullocks in a magazine cart, probably discovering the nature of the load he was assisting across the Jumna, and finding it infra dig. to do so, displayed his sagacity by a violent attempt to deposit his worthless burthen in the river. As the companion bullock's understanding was not of the same calibre, he pulled in the opposite direction, and only one wheel of the cart, along with the refractory bullock, descended into the boat, a lamp-post luckily placed preventing a complete capsize. This little event delayed the line some twenty minutes or half an hour, when the cart and bullock having been replaced, the cavalcade recommenced its move onwards, and reached the encamping ground at Ghazee-ood-deen Nugger, without further accident or delay of any kind. The band of the Second Fusiliers played the Lancers out of Delhi, and by half-past 3 A.M. they were clear of the city. In camp, the principal prisoner and his two sons occupy a hill tent. A soldier's tent with kunnaut enclosure is provided for the ladies of the zenana, and two pals for the servants; the whole surrounded by a high kunnaut enclosure. The prisoners are securely guarded by dismounted Lancers, armed with swords and pistols, both inside and outside the enclosure, while pickets from the police battalion are thrown out beyond. The horses of the Lancers, a whole troop, actually on duty over the state prisoners, are kept ready saddled, and the enclosed camp is very judiciously pitched between the Lancers and Kaye's troop of horse artillery. Lieut. Ommaney's tent is pitched just outside the enclosure. By all accounts the prisoners are cheerful, and the females may be heard talking and laughing behind their screens, as if they did not much regret their departure from Delhi.—Delhi Gazette.

PUNJAB CHANGES.—For some time various rumours have been current in the Derajat and Sind Sagar Doab regarding certain changes which may be made in the districts and their boundaries. The first proposal is, to form a district with the hill of Sirkesan, 5,000 feet high, as its head-quarters, giving it the adjacent pergunnahs, including the now subdivisions of Meanwallee and Chooab Sydan Shah, in the Leia and Jheelum districts. The second is to make one pergunnah of zillah Khanpur over to Leia, and the remaining pergunnahs over to Derah Gazez Khan, and forming Bunnoo and the subdivision of Meanwallee into a separate district, Derah Ishmail Khan relieving Derah Gazez of its most southern pergunnah. The 3rd is to divide the Leia district between Derah Ishmail Khan and Bunnoo, forming these into two separate districts with two subdivisions, viz., Meanwallee, and Leia or Bhukar. The 4th, should Bunnoo be made a separate district, is to make it over to the Jheelum division, Jheelum making Rawul Pindies over to Peshawar in lieu. A bridge of boats is to be formed at Marce, should any of these changes take place. Sir John Lawrence, though he has not much leisure, will, it is hoped, settle the matter at once, for the people want to know what is to be done, and the value of house property has been deteriorated by these suggestions, which may never be acted upon.—Delhi Gazette.

SULTANPORE, Oct. 10.—The 32nd Foot were ordered off by express courier on the evening of the 8th, from Pertabghur to Sultanpore, and arrived there on the 9th instant. Sir Hope Grant was to move on the morning of the 11th, with a large portion of the force, to the Azimghur district. The 32nd Foot and Madras Fusiliers, and two troops of the 7th Hussars, hold Sultanpore, and an entrenchment is being made there. The force remaining at Sultanpore will be under the orders of Brigadier Horsford, of the Rifle Brigade. An outpost has also been formed about ten miles from Pertabghur, on the Sultanpore side of the river Syc; it is under the command of Colonel Lowe, of H.M.'s 32nd, and he has with him two guns, with European artillerymen, fifty of the 54th Foot, and 200 of the 1st Sikhs, and some of the Pathan Horse.

ALLYHUR, Oct. 14.—This morning a Royal visit was paid here, but alas no salute was fired, as some natives said there would. In the palkee sat the great, or we should say now, the little Mogul. Next came a palkee gharris, in which was seated the promising youth Jumna Bukht, then came a string of shigrams in which were the Begum and the females, but far better worth seeing was the magnificent regiment of Lancers.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—Mr. T. Thornton, Assistant Commissioner, Umritsar, having passed the higher standard, has been vested with full powers. Lieutenant P. Thompson, of the Bengal Artillery, has been appointed an Assistant in the Punjab Revenue Survey. Lieutenant Chalmers, Assistant Commissioner, Googaira, has obtained twenty days' indulgence leave. Mr. J. Kitchen, Extra Assistant, Goorgaon, has obtained one month's privilege leave.

ARRAH, Sept. 30.—As you may feel a desire to know how affairs are getting on in this part of the country, I enclose you a sketch of the movements of the Field Force under my command since September 17. On that day I left Arrah with three mountain train guns, 300 Infantry (H. M.'s 35th and 60th Regiments), 60th Sikh Infantry and 60th Sabres to clear Kurramnassa Tuppa, to the south of Arrah, of rebels; the force was in light order and without tents. We halted at Korli on the 17th, and bivouacked at New Saugor on the 18th; on the 19th we marched at daylight, our route was through rice fields so deep in water that the guns had to be carried on elephants. A deep river had to be forded, but notwithstanding these impediments, as well as the great heat, we came up with the enemy at 4 P.M. at the village of Jamapa; they mustered about sixty cavalry and some 600 sepoyas, besides budmashes. I at once attacked them, killing forty; they carried off their wounded; day closed in, and we bivouacked for the night. Intimation here reached me that Arrah had been attacked, so at day dawn on the 20th we marched for that place, and reached it in the afternoon, destroying some rebel villages en route. The force halted at Arrah on the 31st. It again moved out at 2 A.M. on the 22nd, to the west, to attack a body of rebels estimated at 1800, collected at the village of Kani Shatt, on the Buxar road. We fell in with some 500 of them at 11 A.M., killing thirty-five. The siege guns did good service; the Infantry charged them, but the enemy fled, and we returned to Arrah in the evening. The force halted at Arrah on the 23rd, and moved out on the morning of the 24th to clear the left bank of the Soane of boats. We found and destroyed several, destroying the means the rebels had of crossing into Behar. We moved down the river as far as Nonore, and then retraced our steps, but could not fall in with the enemy. The force has had hard work, marching during the day, except for a few hours engaged in cooking, and sleeping on their arms at night.—Englishman.

CAMP SURAOON, Oct. 10.—The 1st Punjab Cavalry was the first to cross over the new bridge of boats at Allahabad, and march to Suraoon, on the morning of the 9th. Half of the B troop of Royal Horse Artillery crossed the same evening. The 9th Punjab Infantry crossed on the morning of the 10th, and the Belooch battalion were to cross on the 11th. The 79th foot follow on the 12th, and the remaining half of the B troop of royal artillery on the 13th; after which, the carbineers, expected from Cawnpore, and with them the 3rd European Light Cavalry. The enemy who up to 4 p.m. of the 9th, were reported within nine miles of Suraoon, are said to have retrograded to their strongholds, some ten miles further. Banoo Madho gives out that he intends fighting to the last. The Moulvie is said to be with him, and there are some 2,000 rebels with thirty guns of all sorts.—Delhi Gazette.

INDIGO.—We hear that a small parcel of indigo, of the Kania Gobra mark, belonging to Messrs. Watson and Co., was sold the day before yesterday at Rs. 250 per maund. Another parcel of the Jungypore indigo was sold at Rs. 220; and we hear also of parties desirous to purchase one or two fine Jessore marks at fully last year's prices. Yesterday another indigo sale took place—that of the Ramnaghour Concern, Jessore, for 247-8.—Englishman, October 9.

MOOLTAN, September 30.—Though some hundreds of the mutineers have now been executed by order of the military commission, not a single sepoy has assigned as a reason for the late outbreak the fear of being put to death when journeying to their homes after disbandment. The cause universally stated, was a promise of assistance from others, as well as a very strong hope of being able to capture the guns and murder the Europeans. The plot must have been hatching for a long time, as the European soldiers, when out scouring the jungles, found quantities of ball, ammunition, and copper caps stowed away in earthen chattries.

MR. H. MONCKTON, Deputy Commissioner, has been transferred from the Punjab to the North-West Provinces.

GWALIOR.—A force under Lieut.-Colonel Scudamore, 14th Dragoons, has proceeded into the district from Gwalior to collect Scindia's revenue: it consists of 100 troopers of that regiment, 100 men of the 86th Foot; two guns No. 4 company 2nd battalion Bombay Artillery; 300 Sikh infantry; 100 Sikh sowars. These Sikhs are the men lent by the Rajah of Puttiala to Scindia for a few months, and are represented as being a very fine body of men. This detachment has now been out for three weeks; "but," says our correspondent, "beyond destroying a refractory village or two, we have not done much."

RETIREMENT.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. G. Tylee, 41st N.I., is about to retire from the service.

DARJEELING, Sept. 20.—Perhaps you (Delhi Gazette) will like a little news of this kind. All here are in a great state of excitement. News has been brought to Dr. Campbell, the Superintendent here, from some one in Nepal, saying that Jung Bahadur is meaning mischief: he has increased his army, and intends, after the Dusseera, to make an invasion on our territory. His brother is said to be near the frontier with a large army, and that it is their intention to take this place, and then come down on the plains. I think there is much that appears probable and much that does not in the story brought, but I believe more than one have come in from different parts with much the same tale. I hear that instructions have been sent for from Calcutta and Allahabad. Some troops, I suppose, will be sent up with some guns; for if this is taken, although not of much value, yet the prestige on the part of the Nepalese will be great. Stores are being laid in for three months. The ladies are getting frightened; and were it not for the heat of the plains, and the unhealthiness of the season below, I expect there would be a regular exodus; as it is, two or three are on the move.

THE LATE CAPTAIN NASON.—We (Bombay Times) regret to announce the death of Captain Henry Nason, of the Military Train, who was killed in a dour against the rebels in Behar, on the 6th of October. Captain Nason served as a 1st Lieutenant of the Royal Marines, in the Black Sea, from January, 1854, until June, 1856, on board Lord Lyons' flagship the Agamemnon; and was present at the bombardment of the batteries of Odessa in April, 1854, in the action with the batteries and expulsion of the Russian garrison from Redoubt Kaleh on the 19th May, and at the capture of Balaklava, where he was with the Royal Marine brigade on the heights, and also at the engagement there. He likewise served with the Royal Marine battalion on the expedition to Kertch, and was present at the final bombardment and fall of Sebastopol, and on the expedition to Kinburn. He had received a medal and two clasps for his Crimean services. Captain Nason was also engaged with the Military Train during the operations at Lucknow, under the Commander-in-Chief; at the various affairs at Alumbagh, under Sir James Outram; at the final capture of Lucknow, and in the forced march to, and the relief of, Azimgur by Sir Edward Lugard. More recently he has been employed in the suppression of the disturbances in Behar, where he has greatly distinguished himself. On a recent occasion he was prominently mentioned in the despatches for the success achieved on the 13th August, when the enemy were completely defeated and dispersed by a force under Major Carr, of the Madras Rifles. In this affair Captain Nason headed a brilliant charge of cavalry, consisting of the Military Train and the 3rd Sikh Irregular Regiment, who, when their horses were completely exhausted, threw themselves unhesitatingly on two large bodies of the hostile infantry, whom they dispersed with a severe loss in killed and wounded. In this charge Captain Nason had his left shoulder-strap cut by a bullet. Major Carr's report is as follows:—"Having beaten off the bodies in front and right, and not being satisfied about that to the left, I determined to retire; and here Captain Nason, prompted by the spirit which carried him victorious through his subsequent operations, requested my permission to pursue the enemy with the cavalry. At first I demurred, on account of the fearful odds against him, and of my own position; but on his second appeal, seeing his determination, I yielded to him; and to his dashing gallantry, ably supported by his brave men, and the party of Sikhs under Lieutenant Ryall, the success, which by God's blessing was achieved, is entirely due. His despatch will give the detail of his pursuit and punishment of the rebels, but the admiration which his leading and dash elicited from all who took part in his attack, I have to record."

MRS. TODD.—The superintendent of electric telegraphs in India submitted a petition from Mrs. Todd, for a pension for herself and two children, and for compensation for losses sustained by her during the mutiny at Delhi. The President in Council has been pleased to sanction, under the circumstances represented, the grant of a pension of Rs. 32 per mensem to the widow, and of Rs. 16 to each of the two children of the late Mr. Todd, formerly assistant in charge of the telegraph-office in Delhi, who was murdered by the mutineers on the night of the 11th of May, 1857, while engaged in attempting to restore communication between Delhi and Meerut. The pension to commence from the date of Mr. Todd's demise, and to continue to the widow till she is re-married, and to the children until they attain the age of eighteen years. Orders on Mrs. Todd's claim for compensation will be issued on receipt of the superintendent's proposal on the subject.

KING OF OUDH.—The President in Council has decided, in reply to an inquiry made by the accountant general, that the counter-signature of the town major is not necessary to the government paper presented by the ex-King of Oude for the payment of interest, as the signature of the ex-King is sufficient.

LIEUT.-COL. H. M. DURAND, C.B., Bengal Engineers, on special duty with the Right Hon. the Governor-General, has been directed to proceed to Calcutta, and thence to England, on duty, under instructions which will be furnished to him from the military department.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.—The Government of Bombay lately applied to the Government of India for the confirmation of the grant of Rs. 20 made for the repairs of the Catholic chapel at Shikarpore, as also the grant of Rs. 200 made for the repairs of the Catholic chapel at Sukkur. The Supreme Government, under the circumstances represented, has sanctioned the amount granted. We learn that the President of the Council of India in Council has been pleased to decide for the future that the houses of Catholic priests may be repaired at the public expense when forming part of the chapel, but that the Government cannot engage to repair such residences when they are separate from the chapel, though in the same compound.

MUNDLAISUR, 9th October.—Perhaps you may not have heard of Captain Keatinge's success against the rebel Seetaram on the 8th of this month. Seetaram occupied a small fort near Hurgoon. On the 8th, he and a lot of his followers went out on a foraging expedition. Keatinge got immediate news, and was after him in no time with some thirty or forty sowars, and came up with him under his own fort, surrounded him, and killed ten rebels and took sixteen prisoners. Keatinge revolved Seetaram, and brought his head into camp. The rest of the ruffians are dispersed. By advices from Mundlaisur of the 18th, we (Bombay Gazette) have further accounts of Captain Keatinge's proceedings against the late Seetaram's followers—the perturbed Bheels. On the 9th Keatinge encamped before Beejagur, and offered terms to one Ragunath Sing Mundloe, which were accepted. The rebels who were collected in the fort fled precipitately, leaving sixty-five horses and ponies, a few bullocks, and other property and baggage, animate or inanimate, including an old villain of the name of Nana Buxoo, who was too sick to be moved, and who died on his way to Mundlaisur. Some forty-five or fifty prisoners, chiefly Bheels and Bheelalos, have been caught in the different villages about, and a lot more are soon expected. All the Bheel Naiks have come in, and are inclined to be quiet, except Bheema, who was pardoned twice last year, and has as often broken out again. He has, however, dispersed his band, and has now only four or five men with him. He wishes to treat, but we believe the policy is to try to catch and hang him. If any one can do this, it is Keatinge, who is now at Dhutwara on the Nerbudda, and supposed to be within four or five miles of Bheema. The Scindwa road is now perfectly safe, and is likely to remain so. The affair at Beejagur has had the most salutary effect upon the Bheels, and indeed upon all the natives in the district. They thought that no European would ever go into the Scindwa jungle before the middle of January, and so calculated on having four months of quiet looting as they had last year.

A YABOO, of great beauty, from Bokhara, has arrived at Kurrachee for Lord Elphinstone, having been commissioned by his lordship. The animal is described as being of the best breed. The race will doubtless thrive well in England, perhaps better in Scotland. It was yesterday put on board the Berenice for conveyance to Bombay.

DHARWAR, 16th Oct.—Our colonel commanding leaves this on leave, in anticipation of receiving leave to Europe next week; he is to be relieved by Colonel Heyland, 56th Regiment, who is expected daily from Belgaum. Captain Paget, Royal Artillery, departs also on exchange to the Royal Horse Artillery. Subalterns are procuring leave to districts and elsewhere. Surgeons are looking after game at Dandilly. But the soldiers continue locked up in a pestiferous fort, receiving no share of the passing cool winds to invigorate their declining constitutions for, perhaps, a coming battle-field. Games of cricket have, however, been played, officers sharing in the amusement, and ladies witnessing the harmless contest. The comet has been seen nightly, with few exceptions, and, in its magnificence was and is admired. I hear that the Rifles stationed at Bellary are to move to Bangalore; the Highlanders at the former are in indifferent health, and of their number seventy-four are invalided for home. The 74th Regiment are to be inspected this week, by the Major-General Commanding Ceded Districts, and when this is completed, a company under Captain Jago proceeds to Shornpore, to relieve a detachment of the same regiment stationed there.—Bombay Gazette.

ADEN.—Cholera has broken out at this station, and rages with considerable violence.

MR. WALKER, solicitor, has retired from the firm of Messrs. Pollock, Walker, and Faithfull, from the 12th October. The firm is now conducted under the style of Messrs. Pollock and Faithfull.

LIEUT. G. A. VAUGHAN, of Her Majesty's 33rd Regiment of Foot, has been appointed Acting-Aide-de-Camp on the Personal Staff of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, subject to the approval of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HUGH ROSE, G.C.B., and the Divisional Staff, left Poona on the 15th October for Sattara and Mahabuleswar on a tour of inspection. The Lord Bishop of the Diocese left Poona for Mahabuleswar on the morning of Thursday, the 4th October.

CAPTAIN MURRAY, Brigade Major of Queen's Troops, has been nominated to the command of the Kurrachee depot, in the place of Lieutenant Colonel Heatley, who has been ordered to join his regiment now on field service.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Nov. 19, 1858.

THE TIMES ON INDIAN TAXATION.

THE difficulty of judging of Indian questions from an European point of view is strikingly exemplified in a recent article in the leading journal. The unequal pressure of the land-tax there is justly deprecated, and the injustice of extorting a large portion of his gross income from the poor cultivator, "whose whole capital, perhaps, consists of a pair of diminutive oxen, a plough, and a few gold or silver ornaments," while the wealthy banker, merchant, and money-lender are almost entirely exempted from taxation, is exhibited with the ability so eminently characteristic of that wonderful paper. But almost immediately afterwards the writer begins to argue as if he were speaking of a British peasant, and declares that the money thus obtained by the State is "exactly that which would have been likely, in the hands of its owner, to be employed in the permanent improvement of the country and the development of its latent resources." And, a little further on, it is said—"The money of the ryot has a thousand investments as useful to the country as beneficial to himself, while the untaxed revenue of the rich is too often expended in ostentation or debauchery." The latter clause is, unhappily, too true, while the former is simply a rhetorical assumption. No one who knows anything of the Indian ryot would ever anticipate the voluntary employment of his capital in improving his land. Had he untold wealth at his command, he would still follow the system of cultivation practised by his forefathers for a hundred generations. Increase his wealth, and you improve his diet and load his wife and children with more valuable bracelets and anklets. He may also, if piously or ostentatiously disposed, be induced to sink a well, or plant a grove of trees, or build a tank; but assuredly he would never dream of draining his land, collecting manure, or erecting farm-steadings. In our colonies and the United States of America it may be that "there is no stimulus to improvement like the possession of land;" but the inhabitants of those countries do not follow hereditary avocations, and hereditary precepts. The writer in the Times then suggests the redemption of the land-tax, by the sale of unoccupied lands, but omits to point out where these are to be found. Waste lands undoubtedly exist as they do in our own country notwithstanding the vaunted "stimulus to improvement;" but it is not so clear that, even if reclaimable, they will ever repay the original outlay. But the permanent settlement of Bengal, we are told, has had the effect of "binding to our rule every zemindar in that province." A more unfortunate illustration could hardly have been chosen. True, no overt acts of disobedience were committed by the Bengal land-owners, most of whom expend their revenues in Calcutta "in ostentation or debauchery," and seldom apply them "except in the shape of usurious loans to purposes of primary necessity and utility." But it is equally certain that they offered no assistance to Government either in men or money; and if they did not actually co-operate with the rebels, they took no steps to discountenance their atrocities. Besides, in no part of India are the ryots more wretched than in Bengal under this permanent settlement, or less likely to invest their money in a manner "as useful to the country as beneficial to themselves."

Having thus denounced the land-tax, the writer is good enough to point out "samples of the powerful instruments which hang on the walls of the Chancellor of the Exchequer." These are known to mortals as "an income-tax, a house-tax, a succession-tax, a property-tax, a tax on equipages, on horses, on elephants, on carriages." Until the Ethiopian change his skin, and the leopard his spots, the first "sample" will be utterly useless. That a native should assess himself with even proximate fairness is a state of things that has not yet been entertained by the boldest imagination. The second has been already tried and found wanting, but the others are at least not impracticable. However, we see no reason to modify the suggestions we ventured to propose in our paper of the 20th October; but, in any case, the natives of India are much to be pitied if their religious creed is to be dictated from Exeter-hall, and their system of revenue and finance remodelled in Printing-house-square.

ROMANISED HINDUSTANI.

THOUSANDS of years ago, and centuries before mankind were moved by vanity to transmit the record of their crimes and follies to distant generations, there dwelt on the banks of the Euphrates a tribe, or family, whose descendants were destined in the fulness of time to play the most important part in the world's great drama. A long space of time before the historical era, this clan, or community, broke up into, at least, three divisions, who went forth from their primeval home in search of other lands and other skies. Was it because their numbers had multiplied so exceedingly that means of subsistence began to fail the teeming multitude? Or was it because strange rumours had reached them of fairer regions inhabited by effeminate and unwarlike races? But, in truth, it were idle to speculate on the motives that urged them to this wild adventure—it may well be that they were scarcely appreciated, even by themselves. Io, tormented by the gad-fly, and driven to and fro over the surface of the earth, without repose or hope, is the just emblem of the wanderings of the ancient tribes, seeking "fresh fields and pastures new." So, one of these bands of pioneers roamed in a north-westerly direction, traversing Europe and fixing the elements of speech for the future civilisation of the world. Another branch, moving eastwards, crossed the terrific passes of the Hindoo Khoosh, and descended into the wide-spreading plains of Hindostan. There they established a language and a literature that have existed for upwards of three thousand years. The third batch of emigrants passed into Egypt, where they degraded religion into a mystery, and science into a symbolical puzzle. Of these three divisions of one small family it came to pass in the process of time that the western one made the furthest, though not the most rapid advance in genuine civilisation. All these made use of entirely differently sets of characters to express the sounds that represented ideas, whether of thought or fact. That which was adopted by the western branch was the most simple and practical,—that of the eastern the most elegant and flowing. It so happens, however, that the one hundred and fifty millions of human beings who employ the latter alphabet are kept in subjection by a handful of men using the former. Of these there may be a hundred thousand or so interspersed among the hundred and fifty millions, whose language they must acquire as a preliminary to ruling them. Some of them, it seems, find this labour “a great law,” and would prefer to throw the burden off the shoulders of the few on to those of the many, although in this case it would not thereby be lightened, but, on the contrary, greatly augmented. What the few demand is simply this, that the many for their sake shall consent to renounce the language of their forefathers—for it amounts to that—and begin civilisation afresh, under the guidance of their vigorous, but indolent, conquerors. It is argued with some plausibility that the adoption of the Roman character will facilitate the study of European literature, and, consequently, the diffusion of sound, useful, and Christian knowledge. But, on the other hand, it may be answered with greater truth, that the mere mastery of the alphabetical signs is the affair of twenty-four, or at the most of forty-eight, hours. That obstacle, therefore, can hardly be taken into consideration on either side of the question. It is no more difficult, that is, for the Feringhee to learn the Oriental symbols, than for the native to become acquainted with the European. In the native languages, however, there are many modifications of the same specific sound which cannot efficiently be expressed by Roman characters, even with the extreme aid of dots and conventional signs. It is altogether useless to din into the ears of a student that t has a different sound from z, or that d is not d, or h, k. The learner who can master these shades of sound—to speak à la Castlereagh—would as easily make himself familiar with the forms of the various Sanscrit or Persian letters, and in the latter case he would more readily understand the peculiar significance of nearly omophonous symbols. It is also a matter worthy of profound consideration whether an innovation of this radical nature would not alarm and disgust the susceptibilities of the natives to a most dangerous extent. They certainly will feel little gratitude for a boon which they will not for some time be in a position to appreciate, and which they will naturally regard with considerable suspicion. Thus, for the temporary benefit of a handful of lazy Englishmen the peace of a great empire may be imperilled, general dissatisfaction excited, and, after all, the object aimed at by no means attained. Is it worth while, then, in the face of such forcible objections, and for the sake of such slight and problematical advantages, to incur probable risk and certain odium? Is it, in short, worth while to introduce unwelcome and unprofitable innovations in order to sell a few additional copies of a particular Dictionary and Grammar? For that is the true object of this movement. There was, undoubtedly, a time when Hindustani dictionaries commanded almost prohibitory prices. Shakspeare's, for instance, cost no less than £7; his Selections, £2. 2s.; his Grammar, £1. 1s.; and his Introduction, £1. 10s. A writer in the Times, indeed, pretends to regard these prices as extremely reasonable. What, then, ought he not to have said in favour of Dr. Forbes' series of elementary Hindustani works? The best Hindustani Dictionary that has yet appeared for £2.12s. 6d., and a Grammar, combined with Selections, for 12s., may well be considered a great boon to students of that language. To Dr. Forbes the public is mainly indebted for the reduction in the cost of Shakspeare's works that called forth the commendation of the Times correspondent. But it is now as in the olden time, one man sows and another reaps;—he who gathers the fruit was not the planter of the tree.

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of action is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH. New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison. The Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS.

PILLS. Price 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for, during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age.

These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government Stamp.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

—GOUT and RHEUMATISM.—These most painful disorders are equally prevalent in town and country, and are sure to be found as often in the paragon's palace as the pauper's cot. It is commonly supposed that gout and rheumatism are different diseases; but, in fact, they are identical—not distinct diseases, but different forms of the same disease, though it is true that some extreme cases may seem to disprove this assertion. The cause and the seat of both is depraved blood, and he who would successfully contend with either must point his remedies to this vital fluid. Holloway's admirable Ointment affords immediate local relief, and his wonderful Pills, directly acting on the blood, eradicates all disease.

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patents of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 13, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. — Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 23rd Nov. has arrived, without bringing a single item of news, unless it be the announcement that the Queen's Proclamation was to be issued on the 1st of November. Perhaps, too, we may except the explanation of the rumour that caused such unfounded alarm at Darjeeling and in the office of the Bengal Hurkaru. It has at length been ascertained that Jung Bahadoor's brothers and nephews, being weary of his iron-handed despotism, and anxious for a change, no matter what, resolved to embroil their astute ruler with the British Government. To effect this object, they conceived the not very brilliant idea of disseminating false reports of the Maharajah's hostile intentions. They were, indeed, so far favoured by fortune that a certain degree of estrangement was known to have occurred between his Excellency and the Governor General, on the subject of Colonel Ramsay. It was accordingly reported that a camp had been formed at Elain, and that Jung Bahadoor was preparing to spring like a tiger on his unsuspecting allies. These idle, though mischievous tales, were speedily contradicted, and it is not unlikely that the Maharajah's hands may be fully occupied for some time to come in bringing his affectionate relatives to their senses. On a former occasion he hesitated to put a treacherous brother to death through an apprehension of "what the Times would say about it." But he had then very recently returned from Europe, and was still dizzy with all that he had seen and heard. Now that those wholesome reminiscences of foreign travel have faded away he may possibly care less for the opinion of the civilised world, and be disposed to re-assume his Asiatic habits and temperament. In that case the fate of the conspirators will scarcely be an enviable one.

The Bombay Mail, which will be due in a few days, may be expected to bring intelligence of the opening of the new and, we trust, final campaign for the suppression of the revolt. The Commander-in-Chief, it is understood, had completed his preliminary arrangements, and was on the point of inflicting the finishing stroke.

From China the chief news relates to a terrific hurricane that swept over the port of Swatow on the night of the 21st of September, and caused much damage to the shipping. The American and French Plenipotentiaries were at Japan, but Lord Elgin was at his post, and about to superintend the revival of the Customs' Tariff.

The superintendence of the political relations of this country with Persia has been wisely assigned to the Secretary of State for India. The public will, therefore, not again be scandalised by unseemly disputes between the Home and the Indian Governments on questions which equally interest both.

The establishment of the President of the Council for India has at length been completed, and is given in another part of this journal.

On the 9th December will take place the election of four new Directors of the East India Company to fill the vacancies caused by the retirement of Messrs. Charles Mills, M. T. Smith, E. Macnaghten, and R. D. Mangles. The candidates, whose addresses appear in our advertising columns, are Col Ouseley, Maj. General Sim, L. R. Reid, Esq., and T. W. Helps, Esq.

It is reported in the clubs that there is some intention of extending the period of residence for cadets at Addiscombe from three to five terms. As an Act of Parliament prescribes the adoption of the competitive system for the scientific branches of the military service, it would be only fair to allow the young gentlemen at Addiscombe the same chance of obtaining the higher appointments at the end of three terms.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

From Patna, 15th Oct., 9 P.M.

From Commissioner, to Calcutta, to Secy. to Govt. of Bengal.

The Buxar column encountered the rebels under Seedha Sing yesterday morning at Burukspore, on the Arrah Road, and defeated them, killing two hundred. Seedha Sing and the remainder of his party have gone to Jugdespore. Brigadier Douglas drove the rebels out of Karish yesterday; the infantry could not overtake them, the cavalry horsemen, consisting of a party of the Military Train, some of the mounted men of the 10th, and the mounted police, chased and cut up a good number. The mounted police, under Capt. Arbuthnot, behaved admirably. Several of them and a number of the horses are wounded.

From Patna, 16th Oct., 1858, 8 A.M.

From E. A. Samuells, Commissioner, to Calcutta, to A. R. Young, Sec. to the Gov. of Bengal.

The rebels have been driven out of Chowgaen with trifling loss, and have fled to Jugdespore. There has been an action at Chukea, west of Peroo, in which a portion of Colonel Turner's column defeated the rebels with a similar result. I have no particulars of either action. Brigadier Douglas goes again to Karish to-day.

Service Message from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, October 14, 6.35 P.M.

Captain Pinkney, the commissioner, reports from Jhansi, under date the 12th, that Tantea Topee attacked the fort of Chundeyree from the 7th to 9th, but was beaten off on the 9th by the garrison, composed of Scindia's troops. The rebels had retreated to Serai, ten miles south of Chundeyree, with the intention of crossing to Tehree. The rebels, under the Nana's nephew, which crossed the Betwa at Sirus Ghaut, had not entered the Tehree territory up to date. The Ranee was still at Tehree on the 10th. Captain Fenton, the deputy commissioner of Chundeyree, reached Jhansi with military police and establishment on the 11th. Colonel Riddell was at Ranoopore. A telegram from Sir Robert Hamilton, dated 13th instant, informs us that General Mitchell surprised a division of the rebels under the Banda Nawab at Mungrowlee on the 9th, took their six guns, and killed one hundred and fifty. The rebels fled towards Chundeyree. The Rao Sahib has gone towards Jhansi with the other division.

From Patna, 16th Oct., 11.30, A.M.

From E. A. Samuells, to Calcutta, to A. R. Young, Secretary.

Details of the action fought by the Buxar Wing, Col. Durisford, just received from Mr. Garstin: Came on the enemy's outposts at Kampasaur; their main body was posted beyond a nullah some distance further on, and had broken down the bridge. They offered a determined resistance, opening a heavy fire of musketry and firing two guns, which, when taken, proved to be of wood, lined and bound round with iron and copper, the whole covered with leather. Our troops outflanked them, on which they immediately gave way and fled to Jugdespore, leaving, Mr. Garstin thinks, about one hundred on the ground. Our loss was two of the 84th killed, Lieutenant Jones and three men wounded, three of the 20th Sikhs and two of the Madras Cavalry also wounded. The 20th Sikhs behaved splendidly. Col. Durisford goes south to Peopradh. Major Lightfoot will command the post at Phurrepore.

Service Message from J. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 18th October, 9 P.M.

The Civil Officer at Fyzabad reports as follows:—Major Raikes' column fell in with four thousand of the rebels near Jelalpoore on the 14th, and killed seventy. No loss on our side. Colonel Kelly expected to be at Atrawlee on the 14th; Sir Hope Grant is believed to be at Akburpore on the Tonse River; Colonel Simson and Major Raikes at Jelalpoore; Colonel Payne at Solka, and Rajah Maun Sing near Bhudusa.

From Patna, 19th Oct., 7.30 A.M.

From E. A. Samuells, to Calcutta, to A. R. Young, Esq.

Jugdespore was entered without opposition by Brigadier Douglas' column yesterday morning; the rebels had left it, some the preceding day, some that morning. They had gone past. The cavalry are in pursuit.

BENGAL.

CHRISTIAN COLONY IN THE DEHRA DHOON.

The history of the colony is a brief one as yet. As far back as 1855, it was proposed to establish a colony of Christians in some retired place where they would be free from persecution. Mussoorie was first selected, but as the natives did not seem to fancy living in the hills, this failed. It was then supposed that land might be obtained in Dehra Doon well suited for such a purpose, but this endeavour also failed. In April, 1857, a deputation of three native Christians from the village of Mirzapore, on the Ganges, waited on the founder of the colony at Mussoorie, represented the difficulties they had to contend with from the fact of their being Christians, and entreated him to find them a home in the Dhooon, where they would be safe from persecution. He promised to use his best endeavours to meet their wishes after the rains. The insurrection then broke out, and for some months these people were lost sight of. In November, 1857, a piece of land in the Dhooon was for sale, well capable of being cultivated, and having the advantage of two branches of the Western Dhooon Canal running through it. This ground, subject at the time to a heavy land-tax, was purchased by the founder of the colony for Rs. 600; he then trusted to be able to have the assessment modified; this, however, is not yet finally accomplished. The land having been purchased, the founder sent to Mirzapore and told the native Christians that he was ready to provide them with what they had so long desired—"a home where they would be free from molestation." Thirty-four men, women, and children expressed their anxiety to take advantage of this offer, but the mutineers had left them penniless; they had scarcely even clothing; so great was the rage against them on account of their religion that they had been obliged with their families to hide as best they could. Provision for clothing, food, and the means of transport for themselves and families were at once sent, and towards the end of February, 1858, they arrived in the Dhooon. Measures were immediately adopted to hut them and provide them with the means of clearing and cultivating the land for their own future subsistence. Learning from these, the first settlers, that there were many Christians about Mirzapore ready and anxious to follow them, the founder solicited assistance from his friends to aid him in the good work, and one and all agreed that the subject was well fitted for the consideration of the Lahore Relief Fund. The fund at once acknowledged the claim of these poor sufferers to relief, and placed a sum at the disposal of the founder to enable him to carry out his praiseworthy object. This assistance, and the sum of Rs. 126 which had been collected at Mussoorie, at once enabled him to send again to Mirzapore. About the beginning of May seventeen more Christians arrived; since then one or two at a time have come in, and the number now (including the schoolmaster and his family) amount to sixty-six, among whom are four widows with eight children between them, only one of whom, a boy, is of an age for work. The first batch, after being comfortably huddled, were at once set to clear and break up the ground, necessary implements were furnished to them, and water also brought from the Dhooon Canal by cutting water-courses. They have worked fairly, and have now eighty local beegahs sown chiefly with rice. Ere the Rubbee time arrives double that area will be prepared for seed. They have been warned that after the Rubbee crop they must depend on their own labour and energy for a livelihood.

The next batch, who arrived in May, have not done so well, but this is considered more the fault of the schoolmaster who arrived with them than from any indisposition to work on their own parts. So much has been done up to the present date. For the future the colony is too much in its infancy to form a correct estimate of its capabilities. If the terms for the land offered by the founder be accepted by Government, and the Commissioner, Mr. Williams, hopes they will be, he (the founder) is sanguine of success. There are 1,795 acres of good land; 400 or 500 will be retained by the founder for the cultivation of tea and coffee; a portion will also be retained for future settlers, and the remainder leased to the present colonists. It is not intended to restrict the colonists solely to agricultural pursuits. It is hoped that trades of all kinds will be introduced, so that the colony may become perfectly independent of all requisites from without. Again, some may go into private service, particularly the young girls. Once established, they might follow their own inclinations, stay at home or go abroad, but in the meantime, and for the first two years at least, they have been given to understand, and have all promised that they will not leave without permission. On the whole, they are very well behaved, and have given no reason for complaint. Some are more industrious than others, and are, of course, more contented. The education of their children is a point they all seem anxious about; the possibility or chance of their obtaining Government employ, seems the grand object of their ambition. One great want is, a proper schoolmaster, not merely as a schoolmaster, but one who would take a leading part, and have sufficient influence to exercise some kind of control over the rest. The present schoolmaster is wanting in this respect. On Sundays the church service is performed regularly twice a-day, daily public meeting for prayers is also held, but the hour for this varies according to the season. Several of the colonists are as yet unbaptised, though all of them were more or less ready before the insurrection broke out; and the teacher is taking pains that all shall be fit for baptism by the ensuing cold weather. Should the colony succeed, and increase, it is hoped that Mr. Lamb's head catechist "Paul" will be allowed, after his ordination, to remain the greater part of the year at the colony. All the Christians know Paul well, and respect and honour him. A man of his influence and character among and at their head, would do more than all our own endeavours to ensure the success of the colony.—Lahore Chronicle.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

Abstract of the Proceedings of a special Meeting of Directors, held on Saturday the 4th September, 1858.

Present.—Major G. Newbold, President; Lieut. col. R. Ramsay, Lieut. col. O. Cavenagh, Capt. M. R. Nightingale.

Submitted draft report proposed to be circulated to subscribers with the accounts of 1857, two months previous to the annual general meeting.

Resolved, that the draft be adopted, and sent to be printed along with the accounts for 1857 and that the usual advertisement be inserted in the papers, calling a general meeting of subscribers at the Fund Office for Monday the 15th November, 1858, to take the report and accounts into consideration.

Submitted a question as to the increased risks and relative payments which the change made in the constitution of the regiment of Artillery and Corps of Engineers may be considered to involve.

Resolved, that as doubts exist relative to the pay to which the several new grades of Junior Lieut. Cols., 2nd Captains and Junior Lieuts., may be entitled, the grades of subscription in which the officers adverted to should be enrolled cannot be definitely fixed. Should it, however, be eventually decided that the Junior Lieut. Cols., 2nd Captains, and Junior Lieuts., are to draw the same rates of pay as Regiment Lieut. Cols., Captains and Lieuts. of Artillery and Engineers have been hitherto allowed, their grades of subscription would have to be assimilated from dates of admission to the increased pay. On the other hand, should the pay of Junior Lieut. Cols., 2nd Cpts., and Junior Lieuts. continue at the rates heretofore granted to Majors, Lieuts., and 2nd Lieuts. respectively, the grades of subscription will have to be regulated accordingly.

Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Commandant of Artillery and the Chief Engineers, with a request that they will do the directors the favour of communicating the same to the officers of their corps, and of stating their own views on the subject for the information of the directors.

Submitted Returns of Votes on Propositions contained in Circulars Nos. 1 and 2 of 29th April last, and on Circular dated 29th May, 1858, forwarding the names of candidates for election as Director and Provisional Directors.

Resolved, that such of these results as may involve an alteration in the rules be submitted as usual for the orders of Government, and that the others be forthwith acted on; and that, as regards the votes for the election of a Director and two Provisional Directors, though a majority of votes is recorded in favour of Lieut.-Col. A. Huyshe, yet since duty has called him to a distance from the Presidency, he cannot take up his appointment to the Direction, the vacancy in which thus devolves on Lieut. W. N. Lees, who has been elected a Provisional Director. This circumstance, coupled with the fact of Maj. W. Davis's election as second Provisional Director having been rendered of no avail, owing to his departure from the Presidency, will necessitate the election of two other Provisional Directors as soon as may be practicable.

The results exhibited in the Returns are as follows:—

A majority of 451 in favour of abolishing from 1st January, 1859, Article VI., regarding subscription by Brevet rank; the numbers being 513 for and 62 against.

A majority of 513 in favour of adopting from 1st January, 1859, the exchange of 2s 3d per rupee, being the rate allowed the Fund by Government; the numbers being 548 for and 35 against.

A majority of 533 in favour of making the value of present and contingent assets and liabilities the test for judging of the ability of the Fund to meet the demands on it, instead of merely comparing the current receipts and disbursements; the numbers being 549 for and 16 against.

A majority of 337 in favour of requiring applicants for personal benefits to declare that they do not intend retiring but fully purpose coming back to their duty, as also in favour of stipulating for a guarantee from claimants for outward passage money to refund the amount, if they do not embark for India within two months of receiving the allowance, and of debarring medical officers coming out with troops from passage money except in cases where the head money they draw falls short of the regulated allowance to which they would be otherwise eligible; the numbers being 455 for and 118 against.

A majority of 264 in favour of discontinuing from 1st January, 1858, the grant of one-third pension to widows who re-marry on or after that date; the numbers being 439 for and 175 against.

A majority of 520 in favour of allowing officers who resign the service but continue subscribers to enter higher grades after the lapse of the same periods that would have entitled them to such enrolment under Article VIII. had they remained in the service; the numbers being 564 for and 44 against.

A majority of 368 in favour of increasing the Home Agent's office charges to £270 per annum; the numbers being 486 for and 118 against.

A majority of 487 in favour of allowing Mrs. A. Irvine to keep up the subscription of her husband, retired Surgeon R. H. Irvine, in order to secure herself the benefit of the fund, should she become his widow; the numbers being 540 for and 53 against.

The votes for the election of a Director and two Provisional Directors stand as under:—

SCIENCE IN ASIA.

It seems that India is to be the battle-field on which the figure of the earth is to be finally determined. Its position, the advantages it gives to the measurement of arcs of meridian and the safety with which all scientific operations can be carried on, long ago pointed out this country as the most accessible for the comparison of measured and observed distances by which alone the figure of the earth might approximately be determined. We do not require any great powers of imagination to suppose that the surface of the earth undergoes periodic changes. Earthquakes are sufficient to convince the most sceptical that at least there are temporary changes of form, and it is now well established that whilst some parts of the surface are being slowly depressed others are being gradually raised. There are four methods by which the earth's sphericity may be ascertained. By three of these methods we arrive at nearly the same results; but the fourth method, a method by which the shape of the earth is ascertained from comparison between measured distances, and the same distances observed by means of astronomical observations, produces at times great discrepancies. The arcs measured in India by the great trigonometrical survey lead to such anomalous results—that is, they tend to prove that the curvature of the earth is not precisely regular—that at some parts there occur great protuberances, and at others equal or similar depressions. These results have long attracted the attention of philosophers—of those men who carve out stepping-stones of science by which practical men mount to results attracting the admiration or conducing to the comfort of the world. Amongst these men we may place Archdeacon Pratt, who, whatever provincial jealousy may say, is on such matters one of the soundest thinkers in India. We are not sure that we are narrating the history of that gentleman's observations with correctness, but it would seem that he was sensibly struck with the results of the arc measurements in India, and was at first more ready to suppose some error or disturbing cause than that the earth, to use his own expression, was like a gigantic monster heaving its ribs, and then respiring at intervals of time that can be measured only by geologic periods. A disturbing cause was soon found. The instruments by which the measured and computed arcs had been compared were all adjusted by the plumb-line. The plumb-line was supposed to be perfectly vertical, whereas it had in reality been attracted by the huge mass of the Himalayas. Here was an easy solution: the earth was, after all, a spheroid, and the attraction of the Himalayas had been lost sight of. But when Mr. Pratt came to examine the actual influence of these mountains he found it much greater than would account for the difference of curvature. Thus there was a balancing error. Mr. Pratt accepted the fact, and acknowledged the earth not to be an exact spheroid. Such an opinion, of course, did not pass without comment. We will not here, however, enter into the discussion. It is sufficient to say that when the great northern arc from Kaliana (latitude 29 deg. 30 min. 48 sec.) and Damar-gida (latitude 18 deg. 3 min. 15 sec.), a distance of eight hundred miles, was measured, no notice of the attraction exercised by the Himalayas was taken, and the results are therefore vitiated. The result is that maps constructed on such measurements and observations will not be accurately correct, correct enough for all ordinary purposes, but not worthy of the grand scale of operations and expenditure carried out under the superintendence of Colonel Waugh.

It is pleasant from time to time to note that under the surface glare of policy, of the settlement of kingdoms and the suppression of revolts, science has an active life. That men like Mr. Brunel can build and launch a Great Eastern, whilst others, as Mr. Bright, can unite the Anglo-Saxon races of England and America, and render their transmission of thought almost instantaneous. Such results are but the applications of science, and this little noticed discussion on Indian meridians may, in the hands of a genius, possessed of the strange faculty of induction, find shape and exactitude, and lead to results which shall be remembered when those political events now all engrossing shall have ceased to be of more interest than the acts of a petty eastern monarch of three centuries ago.—Friend of India.

SUDDER JUSTICE.

Some three months ago two powerful landholders in Hooghly, known as the Talineparah Zemindars, were found guilty of kidnapping two men. One was detained for six weeks, and one for upwards of a year. The object in the second case was to prevent the victim giving evidence in an affray case. He was rescued by Mr. Grey, magistrate of Howrah, and found, we believe, in so terrible a condition that, according to his own statement, in three days more he would have given in and fled the country. The judge sentenced the landholders, the elder to seven years' imprisonment with hard labour, the younger to two years. They, of course, appealed; and, after three days of argument, the Sudder Court came to a decision. It has not been published, but, according to the Hurkaru,—

"The Nizamut Court upheld the conviction on the count for imprisonment only, and reduced the sentences to three years' imprisonment and six months' imprisonment respectively, with labour commutable for a fine.

"The view which the Court seemed to take was, that the Zemindars had not been cognizant of the affray in the first instance, and had detained the ryots merely with the object of shielding their retainers from punishment, and inducing the ryots to consent to a compromise.

"The retainers, who had also appealed, were considered guilty of all laid to their charge, and left under sentence of imprisonment for seven years, with hard labour."

We do not object to the revision of the sentence, for it is not the time which makes imprisonment bitter to men of the rank and habits of life of these Baboos, but we would call attention to the reasons assigned for leniency. They amount to this, that resistance to justice is a merit. The men are convicted of a crime which is one of the highest offences known to the law, which in India is so easy of perpetration, yet so terrible in its effect that it ought to be made capital, and the Court actually reduce the sentence because the motive was to shield the offenders' servants from the punishment due to another crime! The Zemindars, the Court imply, were perhaps a little in the wrong; but still, after all, the thing was done to shield their servants, and they allow for a motive so laudable. And, thereupon, the same men at the same sitting, sentence the very men, shielding whom was laudable in Zemindars, to seven years' imprisonment in irons!

The Sudder's estimate of comparative guilt is as eccentric as their notion of positive merit. The ignorant retainers who broke certain heads in a row, wherein their own heads were also exposed to be broken, receive seven years in irons. The employers, for an offence much greater, continued deliberately through an entire twelvemonth, receive just one half the penalty. Obviously, therefore, cultivation and position are excuses for crime, and an assault is a greater offence than illegal imprisonment for a twelvemonth. To argue, as the Court may have done, that the retainers, besides the original affray, were also parties to the kidnapping, is nonsense. The men were imprisoned in the Zemindar's own house, in which they are as absolute as kings.

And then the Sudder affects to wonder why every man in India with a brain or a heart demands its extinction as the first necessity of justice.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CURE FOR CASTE.—The following incident is related in a long and interesting account of the Alipore Jail, published in the Englishman:—"Forty sepoy, with a subahdar major, had been received into the jail, and, fearing some violence (for they had, the very day after their arrival, suddenly rushed on the guard, and broken through the wicket into the enclosed space between the two gates spoken of at the commencement of this narrative, and would have escaped, but that the outer gate was locked, as usual), the native militia guard were exchanged for an European guard of trusty sailors of the Naval Brigade. After the disturbance the forty sepoys and the subahdar major were locked up for the night in separate cells. On the following morning they were drawn up in a line before the magistrate. The subahdar major, as the leader, was asked why he refused to labour, as the other prisoners did. He excused himself on the plea of a dislocation of his wrist. The wrist was examined by the doctor in charge, and found to be perfectly sound. This was explained to the man, and he was again asked if he would labour. He replied, 'I am a soldier; I can fight, but I cannot work.' Thirty stripes with a rattan were immediately administered, in the presence of his fellows. The next in order was then asked the same question, and, on his refusal, treated in the same manner. The others scarce waited to be asked, they were only too eager to work; and after this the whole body behaved in the most orderly manner, and gave no trouble whatever."

ALEXANDER'S HORSE.—The corps under the command of Capt. W. E. Alexander, of the Bengal army, designated "Alexander's Horse," have proffered their services to Government as a military corps for general service, whether in Hindostan or out of it, or beyond sea, to wherever they may be ordered, without reserve of any kind. The Governor General has accordingly directed that this regiment be borne on the returns as a military corps for general service, but the establishment, as at present constituted, will continue till further orders. The following are the officers attached to Alexander's Horse:—Captain W. E. Alexander, 53rd N.I., Commandant; Lieut. M. K. St. John, 49th N.I., officiating second in command; Lieut. H. M. Repton, 67th N.I., Adjutant; and Lieut. H. Chapman, 49th N.I., doing duty. Mr. Sheel, a graduate of the Bengal Medical College, is in medical charge.

THE COMET AT AGRA.—The natives have now got a new celestial omen—the appearance, in broad sunshine, of the moon and Jupiter. These were shining brightly and near each other on Monday, the 11th October, at two o'clock in the afternoon. The comet, which has passed rapidly to the south and east—thereby, of course, rising away from the sun, and appearing higher, and for a longer interval every evening—has been exhibiting a tail traceable upwards for 45 degrees, curved towards the north, and with its best defined edge towards the south. Its distance from the earth is rapidly increasing, and its splendour is fast fading.

A NATIVE SUPERSTITION.—We (Delhi Gazette) are assured, from very good authority, that the old story has been revived of our entrapping natives for the sake of making "Momaie," a medicine of wonderful virtue, prepared from human blood taken from the live subject. It will be remembered that a similar report was spread in the Kangra hills, and parts of the Punjab, about ten years ago, about the time of the Punjab campaign. A correspondent, upon whom we can rely, says:—"For some time past rumours have been flying about this district to the effect that an English doctor has taken up his quarters in a nullah, a couple of miles from Cawnpore, near Rajmow, and there distils this wonderful essence. Such reports can only be spread by evil-minded scoundrels, I should say. The object is apparently to impress people with an idea of our growing weak, the medicine being required for the numerous sick and wounded soldiers. Another effect is to keep zemindars from coming into cantonments, as they conclude that, being healthier than townfolk, their blood is preferred."

FIDELITY REWARDED.—The Supreme Government, on the recommendation of Sir J. Lawrence, G.C.B., Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, have confirmed in perpetuity the jagheers (hitherto held on life tenure only) held by Nawab Foudar Khan, the British Vakeel at Cabool, yielding a revenue of Rs. 4,000 per annum, as a reward for his distinguished services for some years past. For his services in 1848-49 Government conferred on him the title of "Khan Bahadur," a jagheer of Rs. 4,000 per annum (for life only) and a cash allowance of Rs. 400 per mensem. The late Governor-General, Lord Dalhousie, doubled the cash allowance, and gave the title of "Nawab," as a mark of his approbation of the Khan's conduct when sent on an embassy to Cabool, previous to the first treaty of Peshawur. But these grants, amounting to Rs. 13,600 per annum, being for life only, the Nawab's sons and family could receive no benefit from them after his death, and they might at once fall to the level from which the Nawab raised himself, by a stout arm, a daring heart, and an intellect equal to great affairs. In consideration, therefore, of the services rendered by the Nawab, and subject to good conduct, and performance of such service as may be required of him, the jagheers above mentioned have been bestowed on him and his lineal male heirs in perpetuity.—Delhi Gazette.

THE PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT entertained in the Central Provinces, experimentally for some time, by the Hon. Mr. Grant, the then Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces, has been permanently attached to the office of the Secretary to the Government of the North Western Provinces, at an additional expense of Rupees 250 per mensem.

PAPER CURRENCY.—In consequence of the great scarcity of specie in the Saugor and Nerbuddah territories, the Government of India have authorised the local Treasury officers to issue paper currencies to the extent of four lakhs of rupees. The notes to be issued would be for rupees 1, 10, 20, 50, and 100. The notes will be recalled as soon as a remittance can be conveyed to the different stations.

THE SALT DUTY.—Lord Canning, on leaving the Presidency for the North-Western Provinces in January last, referred the consideration of Mr. Plowden's report to the Honourable the President in Council, with the remark that the question of reducing the duty on Bengal salt was one which could not be entertained now. In deference to his lordship's opinion, the President in Council does not propose to consider that point.

LIEUT.-COLONEL L. H. SMITH, of the Bengal Invalid Establishment, formerly of the 6th Light Cavalry, who died at Kussowlie on the 29th September, served with the 6th Regt. Light Cavalry during the whole time it was engaged in the Pindaree wars of 1816-17; and was present at the actions of Seeta-buldee and Lukkurchurrah, in 1817; at the storm and capture of Chundeh, in May, 1818; and at the siege and capture of Bhurtapore, for which he received a medal.

ASSISTANT SURGEON DAVID HOOD, M.D., of the Bengal Establishment, has been appointed Civil Assistant Surgeon of Boolundshuhur.

MOMAE.—A friend writes from Delhi on the 15th October. "I have just seen your paper (Delhi Gazette) of the 15th, and in it an article stating that the natives believe in Momae. I can give my testimony that they certainly do so. About three months ago, a child, belonging to my washerman, fell from an upper story of a house into the street, and was stunned. On the second day, the washerman came and entreated me to get him some Momae from the regimental hospital, as a Hakeem in the city had told him that that was the only thing that would be useful in restoring his child to her senses. On asking him what Momae was, he said that it was something extracted from the blood of a human being, and that we had it in all our hospitals. I utterly failed in making him believe that no such medicine existed.—PUNJAB OFFICER."

DEHRA ISMAEL KHAN.—On the morning of the 9th October Ukbur Shah, native commandant of the police battalion, was murdered by Peer Buksh, native adjutant of the same regiment. There was enmity of long standing between the two, and the adjutant fearing that the commandant had given information to General Chamberlain against him as being concerned in the late attempt at mutiny, determined to take his life, which he did by coming up behind, when Ukbur Shah was at prayer outside his house, and cutting him down with a sword. General Chamberlain immediately assembled a court, and at once carried out the sentence by having the prisoner blown away from a gun in presence of all the troops. Some suspicious circumstances subsequently transpired connecting this crime with the mutiny, and these are under investigation. The European force may be expected there about the 19th or 20th, and there would appear to be no cause for alarm from what has occurred. Ukbur Shah had just been made a Sirdar Bahadur, and was much esteemed by the European officers, all of whom attended his funeral.—Delhi Gazette.

MILD COMPUSSION.—A letter from Meerut, dated 17th October, mentions the arrival of the ex-Rajahs of Shahgurb and Bampore, from Allyghur, on that morning at the station, under a detachment of military police, horse and foot, commanded by an European officer. After being made over to the adjutant of the Allyghur Police, that officer very prudently formed his detachment up and disarmed the ex-Rajahs and their followers at once. The arms, it was found, were loaded almost to the muzzle; the Rajah of Shahgurb gave up his arms on their being demanded of him, but the Bampore men, there are two Rajahs, we believe, hung back, strongly remonstrating and declaring they would rather sacrifice their lives than part with their arms, but on the word "ready" being given to the infantry police and the cavalry surrounding them, the chiefs succumbed, and their arms were given up at once; the followers of the Rajahs were about one hundred men, about the strength of the military police. The Rajahs are, for the present, to remain at Meerut, but their followers are to be sent on to Lahore, and to be under the eye of Sir John Lawrence.—Delhi Gazette.

CAPTAIN CAFE.—On the attack on Rhodaman, on the 15th of April, commanded by Brigadier Walpole, in which that gallant and beloved soldier, the Hon. A. Hope, met his death, Lieut. Edward Willoughby, second in command of the 4th Sikhs, sank mortally wounded on the glacis, and his body was not known to be missing until the recall of the attacking party, when Captain Cafe at once resolved to rescue it, if possible, from the hands of the enemy, and heading a heroic little band of volunteers, consisting of two privates of the 42nd Highlanders (Edward Spence and Thompson), with two native officers, and two privates of his own regiment, 4th Punjab rifles, he succeeded, in spite of a terrific fire, in bringing the remains of young Willoughby into camp, but not without the loss of one of the Sikhs, and also of the gallant Edward Spence, who thus nobly gave his life to save that of an officer with whom he had fought and toiled in many a hard and weary struggle. Cafe, therefore, placing the body of young Willoughby in safety, returned, undaunted, to the scene of danger, in order that he might also rescue poor Spence from the enemy's grasp, but in this attempt, though successful, he was dangerously wounded.

A NATIVE PAPER.—The Phoenix mentions that the head pupils of the Ajmere Government school are about to issue an Oordoo and Hindee newspaper. The journal will be started by 200 shareholders, the price per share being ten rupees. We trust the scheme will succeed; we would see established in all the Presidencies at least one good vernacular journal, whose object should be to give information rather than news.

TO PARENTS AND GUARDIANS.—The Horticultural and Agricultural Society held their usual general monthly meeting on the 4th of October. Amongst the seeds presented were those of a plant called Khar-mar. This plant, or as its name implies, "ringworm killer," is supposed to be an infallible specific for the cure of that cutaneous disease. It is thus applied. A sliced lemon is well rubbed on the parts affected until irritation is produced, some leaves of the plant are then bruised, and applied with sufficient force to cause pain. A black juice exudes which, apparently astringent, arrests and cures the disease.

AN INDIAN "LEADER."—We claim our annual holiday.—Friend of India. This is probably the shortest leader on record, with the exception of Mr. Lang's famous article on the Gorham Case, which was couched in these words, more vigorous than polite,—"D—n the Gorham Case."

GRANDIS ET VERBOSA.—The Indigo Planter's Association met on September 29, 1858. Amongst other topics introduced was the question of the employment of English in the Mofussil Courts. A decree of the Sudder Dewanny of Moorshedabad was produced, written in Bengalee, 225 feet long.

GENERAL NICHOLSON.—It was proposed to erect an obelisk and a tank in the Margulla Pass to the memory of the late General Nicholson. It is now suggested that instead of the obelisk a small mission house should be established, and a Mahomedan convert stationed there. The proposer volunteers to allow thirty rupees a month towards the maintenance of the convert during his stay in India, and will, when he leaves for England, deposit a thousand rupees annually in the 4 per cents. as an endowment for the Margulla Pass native missionary station.

NOT QUITE MAGISTERIAL.—The Field reproaches severely the conduct of Mr. Willock, an Assistant Magistrate of Allahabad. A prisoner, a faqueer, we believe, lying under sentence of death, thought fit to spit into the face of the magistrate, as he was being conveyed to the place of execution. He had previously heaped upon the magistrate the most opprobrious epithets. Mr. Willock as soon as the wretch spat at him, drew his revolver, and shot him dead. Mr. Willock has been reprimanded. The incident is one of those misfortunes which are best passed over in silence.

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.—A correspondent of the Englishman announces that the railway works in Behar are proceeding with unusual rapidity. Materials, however, are obtained with difficulty, the villagers from the unquiet state of the province hesitating to bring them in. Boats, too, are not easily procurable for the conveyance of stores, the Government thinking it advisable to prevent as much as possible all communications between the rebels in Ghazepore and the rebels in Shahabad.

PAPER CURRENCY.—The Hurkaru mentions that the Government have authorised the local treasury officers in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories to issue a paper currency to the extent of four lakhs of rupees. We are sorry to perceive the Government notification states this paper currency will be recalled as soon as specie can be conveyed to the different stations. Some day or other we shall consent to make our revenue go a little farther than it now does, by the issue of an adequate supply of paper money.

CALCUTTA FIREWORKS.—The Hurkaru states that the Government have sanctioned an expenditure of Rs. 20,000 for fireworks on the maiden at Calcutta. This expenditure is irrespective of any outlay for illuminations.

THE CALCUTTA MADRUSSAH.—The Phoenix states on authority that the Calcutta Madrusseh is at last to be abolished. The institution is very expensive, and from its very constitution can produce nothing but Arabic scholars or bigoted Mussulmans. India and the world can do very well without either.

A PINCH.—The Lahore Chronicle complains bitterly of the excessive price of all English provisions in the north-west. The army has not been followed, as usual, by sutlers; the dealers have it all their own way. Tea fetches about four rupees a pound, and brandy six rupees a bottle. Beer is proportionately dear, and wine only to be obtained as a favour. The source of all this inconvenience is the want of means of transport. A bullock train is a device of the year, one about as well suited to the nineteenth century as a junk to the Atlantic; but even a bullock train is not to be obtained.

THE SANTHALS.—Captain Boddam has reported on the roads through the Santhal jungles. These roads, though not complete, are in such a state as to facilitate the march of troops through the jungle. When the roads are complete, we very much doubt whether troops will be required at all. Justice and civilisation is what the Santals want.

FAITHFUL AMONG THE FAITHLESS.—The Punjabee publishes a list of the chiefs in the Punjab, who have received rewards from Government for valuable services rendered during the mutinies. The list contains the names of thirty chiefs rewarded by gifts of money, amounting, on the whole, to nearly 10,000 rupees, and small grants of land, gold chains, mangoe trees, revolvers, khilats, and other small presents.

TRIMMING.—A correspondent of the Mofussilite calls attention to the fact that only nine Europeans have since the mutinies been gazetted to forty-six appointments, natives having been gazetted to the remaining offices. This disproportion does not arise from the fewness of European candidates for official employment, neither does it result from the incapacity of such candidates.

CULTIVATION OF THE COTTON PLANT.—It has lately been a matter of doubt whether irrigation was beneficial or injurious to the growth of cotton plants. Official inquiry has been made, and the results forwarded to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society. It appears that in the Madras Presidency, in Berar, Nuldroog, Mysore, Tenasserim and Mar taban Provinces, Pegu, and generally in every province in which the cultivation of cotton has been tried, irrigation is injurious to the plant. But in sandy soils it is still thought that irrigation might be beneficial. The official papers only prove that cotton crops are seldom irrigated, and that when they are irrigated the effect is doubtful.

ASSAM.—The Indian Field announces that the rice crops in Lower Assam are likely this year to be very heavy. This will be a great boon to the ryots, who have with difficulty managed to outlive the late scarcity. It appears probable that in Bengal the rice crops will be but scanty, and we shall not receive supplies from Arracan this year, for we are just now exporting rice to Akyab. Assam grain will therefore readily find its way into Bengal, and make up for part of the deficiency in the crops of Lower Bengal. The same journal thinks that the outturn of tea in Assam will this year be considerably over a million of pounds. Fresh land is being gradually brought under cultivation, and the young plants wear a healthy aspect. Want of population and labour is still the great obstacle to increased production, but the Tea Company are working steadily. We (Friend of India) wish they would put a steamer or two on the line, to carry their produce. The only communication with Assam now is a tow boat, a somewhat primitive mode of accomplishing a journey of 1,100 miles.

JUNG BAHADOOR.—The New Era and Press explains the rumours which have been so long current regarding the Court of Nepal. When Jung Bahadoor was away in Oudh assisting in the reduction of Lucknow certain of his brothers plotted against his return to Katmandoo. The popularity, however, which the Regent had acquired amongst the soldiers on account of the booty they had carried back into their own country, frustrated any attempts on the part of Jung's relatives at open resistance. Accordingly it was determined to represent Jung Bahadoor as plotting against the British Government. The designs of the conspirators were aided by the departure of Major Ramsay, the British representative, and the misunderstanding connected therewith. A nephew proceeded to Dr. Campbell, produced a forged perwanna ordering the advance of the Goorkha troops, and stated that a camp was in process of formation at Elam. Dr. Campbell despatched messengers, the camp was found really to exist, and it seemed probable that the representations of Jung's hostility were true. Troops were therefore ordered to Darjeeling, three months' provisions were laid in, and the Depot was put into a state of defence. The preparations were scarcely completed, when direct communications were received from the Court of Nepal, and the falsity of the information became apparent.

CAST-IRON SLEEPERS.—Mr. Turnbull, in his report on the East Indian Railway works for the six months ending the 30th June, 1858, remarks upon the comparative uselessness of cast-iron sleepers. The only part of the Raneegunge railway in an unsatisfactory state is that laid with cast-iron sleepers. The sleepers constantly break, and it is proposed during the cold season to relay the whole with wood.

A WRECK.—The Hurkaru announces the loss of the ship Souladar. She left Mauritius on the 29th July with 300 coolies, and was wrecked on one of the Maldivian islands. The passengers and crew are said in the first instance to have reached land in safety, but twenty were drowned in an endeavour to swim to a neighbouring island. The survivors have been carried into Galle.

FALSE ECONOMY.—The Englishman notices the wretched pay received by many of the native agents in the Public Works Department. Some of these men are very well educated, and all are able to draw plans, to make bricks, frame estimates, and supervise carpenters and blacksmiths' works, yet they seldom receive more than fifteen rupees a month. It is easy to see that with such a rate of wages no honest man will enter the service of the Public Works Department as an overseer or agent. The dishonest, of course, manage to make large fortunes by peculation; bricks are easily spoiled, and estimates over-estimated.

A HINT TO JUDGE CRESSWELL.—The Rising Sun reports a curious case. A Hindoo widow was delivered of a child, her husband having been dead eighteen months. She was accused of unchastity, but alleged in defence that the baby was a nineteen months' child. A panchayet was assembled, and considered the woman's defence; thirty-three members of the panchayet considered the child legitimate, and seventeen members decided it to be illegitimate. The story reminds us of one told by Ferrier. He met a Rajpoot in Afghanistan. The Rajpoot was from Oude, and had not been home for seven or eight years. Nevertheless he had children, he stated, two and three years of age. Ferrier looked doubtful, but the man said, "Oh, I leave my paejamas behind me, and my wife wears them now and then."

PURNEAH, Oct. 6.—The Nepaulese have not come down upon us, but the hill streams have poured down an immense quantity of water upon the plains. The river that passes through the station (Sourah) has risen higher than it was ever known to have done. It was very high a month ago, and every one thought it had gone down for this season. I expect to hear of many disasters and loss of lives. The Indigo season has been a poor one for Purneah, but prices are expected to be high, and ought to compensate for the deficiency in quantity. Seed prospects, at one time, were rather promising; but heavy rains in August caused a deal of injury; however, I think Purneah will have a pretty fair crop after all. We have had a good deal of rain lately, which has caused a second high rise of the rivers which flow through this district; but beyond the fevers which will surely prevail from this superabundant humidity no other evil is expected from the inundation. You may remember that the Purneah planters applied to Government for arms to defend themselves after the sailors were removed. Government refused the arms unless we subjected ourselves to conditions that we could not accept. A few joined the civilians as volunteers, and to drill them a sergeant has arrived. They have neither arms nor uniforms. The police regiment, formed of Ghorkas, Nepaulese, Lepchas from Darjeeling, Dhanger coolies, and such like stuff, have neither arms nor uniforms.—Englishman.

DACCA BANK.—Mr. Forbes has been dismissed from the office of Secretary to the Dacca Bank. He was dismissed on the following resolution, four of the directors voting for his removal, and two for his retention:—"Proposed by Kajih Abdool Gunny. That as the secretary has always shown himself unwilling to submit to the authority of the Directors, and that as for the future it will be necessary to have more strict rules, he is of opinion that to ensure their being carried out, it will be necessary to appoint some other person as secretary in Mr. Forbes' place. Seconded by Mr. Foley, who added, that Mr. Forbes having other occupations, it is impossible he can carry on efficiently the duties of secretary." His dismissal is a matter of no moment to Mr. Forbes, but the Dacca Bank will lose a very clever and business-like secretary. Subservience and talent are seldom found together. Mr. Carnegie, Director of the Dacca Bank, thought the dismissal of Mr. Forbes would tend to injure the character and credit of the Bank. Is there room for another bank at Dacca, and can the good offices of Kajih Abdool Gunny be dispensed with?—Friend of India.

CAVE CANEM.—The Delhi Gazette recounts the capture of some men of the Bengal mutineers. One man appears to have reached Leia. He there took refuge in a tree, and was fed daily by a native woman. A European by chance came near the tree; he did not see the sepoy, but the latter determined to attack the European. As soon, therefore, as he came within distance, the sepoy hurled his brass lota at his head, and stunned him. The sepoy then descended from the tree, and proceeded deliberately to brain his victim. But he had not observed the dog of the partially murdered man, and as soon as he reached the ground he was seized by the faithful animal, and held till the European recovered sufficiently to drag his captive into Leia, where he was imprisoned, tried, and shot.

"JENKINS" IN CALCUTTA.—The ball given by Rajah Radakant Bahadur on Friday last, in joint commemoration of the re-capture of Delhi, the relief of Lucknow, and the advent of Her Majesty's Government in India, went off with great clat. The several buildings of the raja's Sobha Bazar residence (the largest probably in Calcutta), were splendidly illuminated on this occasion. At the entrance gate was set up a very large and beautiful transparency, with appropriate designs and mottoes. Over the remaining gates, terraces, and balconies shone crowns and stars of exceeding magnitude and resplendency, being made of coloured crystals, and lighted up from frames placed behind them, so as to allow their fullest lustre. On the three sides of a noble portico, the entrance to the ball-room, respectively blaz'd in very large letters the words, Delhi, Lucknow, Cawnpore; and across and over the length of an extensive verandah, Floreat Oriens Auspicio Regina Britannorum. The long lines of colonnades, the temple, the boita-khana, the summer house, garden paths, and bowers, and the steps of the spacious reservoir were well supplied with lights, while the reflection of the whole in the reservoir produced a grand effect upon the observer. The ball room—the chief place of attraction—was magnificently decorated in a style uniting Eastern gorgeousness with European elegance. On the north side of the hall, and under a handsome oriental colonnade, was placed a golden throne, surmounted by the British crown. This throne was fitted up with the richest red velvet, embroidered with gold ornaments; from it fell a screen of the same material, and on the floor, over the steps leading to it, a carpet of the like description with gold and silver borders. Over the throne was draped the royal standard, and over this again were blended the national flags of England, America, and France. Over the entrance on the south side were the flags of England and Prussia; over each other door in the room hung the colours of all European nations in alliance with Great Britain. At the angles, where the flag-staffs (themselves having pointed heads and handsome tassels of silk) vertically crossed each other, were beautifully embroidered velvet circles, with stars in gold and gold edgings. The platform upon which the throne was placed was of marble; lights were so disposed upon and above it as to throw out, with the finest effect, the imposing grandeur of the materials that formed the regal seat. There were, throughout the hall, lustres of the newest and most elegant shapes; devices of bouquets and shrubs completed the getting up of this truly noble spacious apartment. On the right and left of the throne were fountains filled with lavender and rosewater, casting their fragrance on all around. At half-past nine the guests began to assemble, and the room was presently filled by an assembly as select [as] we ever remember to have seen under an Indian roof. Amongst the visitors we observed His Honour the President of the Council and family, Foreign Consuls, Members of Council of H.M.'s Supreme Court of the Bar, of the Civil, Naval, and Military Service, and, in a word, the élite of Calcutta Society. The band of H.M.'s 77th Regt. was in attendance. Dancing commenced at ten; was resumed, after refreshments taken at the usual hour, and gaily continued until one o'clock, when the party broke up, evidently much gratified by its hospitable reception, and alike surprised and pleased at the extensive and costly scale of preparations made for its entertainment. This is the first demonstration of loyalty, in so remote a dependency of the Crown of Great Britain, offered to the public by the feeling and spirit of a native subject: but it is not exactly the first time that the Rajah's halls have responded to the voice of triumph and gratulation. By a rare coincidence, this very Sobha Bazar residence (of a full century gone by) echoed the shouts of victory and honoured the conquerors of Plassey, Clive, and his heroes, by a similar display of fidelity and attachment to the British cause. Proud, indeed, was the remembrance of such a fact in the heart of the good, the venerated old Rajah, on thus finding the roof he was representing hereditary allegiance under which had rung to the descendants of those whom his ancestors 100 years ago and in the same locality, had been equally delighted to honour:—proud to think that in his person should be realised the evidence of family devotion to "Old England" which had been uninterruptedly cherished by his family, from the past to the present period, through all its varying changes and chances; prouder still, to know his life was so prolonged as to allow him to make the first public acknowledgment of native fealty and attachment, on the altered circumstances of the times, and the auspicious dominancy of her most Gracious Majesty, the great, the good, the amiable Queen Victoria. * * * Another mansion also was open on the same evening, that of Rajah Kalee Krishna Bahadur—the brother of Rajah Radhakant Bahadur. The following is an account of the entertainment:—The Rajah's mansion in Sobha Bazar was tastefully decorated with deodar leaves and British flags, and the long range of the building was beautifully illuminated. Several boards with the royal crown, and capital letters "V. R.," with others bearing the appropriate mottoes—"Long live Victoria, the Empress of India," and "Welcome, dear Guests," were fixed in many prominent places of their residence. Madame Lalanne and her two little sons were engaged for the occasion. They played their parts remarkably well on the tight-rope and the platform. Among the principal guests were the Hon. J. P. Grant, B. Pencock, Sir A. Buller, and General Dupuis, as also many civil, military, and naval gentlemen, besides rajahs and wealthy baboos. Every one of them seemed highly gratified with the attention of the hosts, who duly displayed their true loyalty, and set an example to others to imitate. We learn that the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and family, being absent from Belvidere, could not avail themselves of the opportunity of honouring the Rajah's palace with their presence.—Englishman, Oct. 22.

SERAMPORE.—Some persons appear to take great interest in the welfare of Serampore. We seldom have a change of magistrates without a long letter appearing in some one or other of the Calcutta journals. Sometimes it is the Englishman who discovers a mare's nest, and at other times the Hurkaru. The latter journal has thought fit to complain of the roads and of dead jackals. The roads are well enough, they are not quite so good as those in England, but equal to the majority of district roads in Bengal. Dead jackals are just as much and just as little common as of old. Complaints of Serampore administration are, however, of but recent date; a gentleman was removed from the district by the Bengal Government, and since his removal injudicious friends continually attempt to show that our little town and large district are not so well looked after as they ought to be.—Friend of India.

THE 32ND REGIMENT are now only 215 strong, 469 having died since May, 1857; of these 235 were killed in action. The regiment should be sent home.

A HOLY MAN.—On the 21st September the nurse of Mr. Wright civil engineer at Nassick, was attacked by a ruffianly faqueer. The faqueer attempted to strangle the infant in the nurse's arms, but was prevented by two soldiers of H. M.'s 92nd. One of the Highlanders heard the screams of the child, rushed up and threw the faqueer to the ground with such violence that he was taken up for dead. He is now, however, under medical treatment, and recovering. The child, we are glad to say, was not materially injured. His nurse was a European, and we understand that the story may be relied upon. The only motive for the outrage hitherto assigned is "hatred against the English."

KURRACHEE.—The Sind Kossid enumerates the strength of the troops at Kurrachee. The depot it appears contains at present nearly twelve hundred men, a force quite sufficient for the protection of this important station, especially as all are Europeans, and the infantry position are armed with Enfields.

A FINANCIAL QUESTION.—The Columbo Observer has started a very curious question. Is an English shilling legal tender in India? In Ceylon the law was decided in 1851. "Under the impression that British sovereigns and half-sovereigns were not legal tenders in Ceylon, the Chamber of Commerce moved the Government to bring in an ordinance to make them so. On reference to the Home authorities, the following reply was received by the Government:—(Extract from Minute of the 18th October, 1851. Published in the Gazette of the same day.) A local ordinance is not necessary to give legal currency within the island to gold coins of this realm, which, as being issued from her Majesty's mint, under her royal authority, are a legal discharge for the sums they represent throughout her Majesty's dominions." Act XVII. of 1835 enacts that no gold coin shall henceforth be legal tender of payment in India, but a shilling is not a gold coin.

GOVERNMENT LIBRARY.—The Government has sanctioned the formation of a library of rare and valuable works in the North-Western Provinces, from the books confiscated at Lucknow and other places; but books which are not prized are to be sold.

THE RYOTS OF CAWNPORE have complained to the Supreme Government of the severity with which insignificant officials are treated by the civil authorities. The matter is now pending the consideration of the Governor-General.

THE KHEREE AFFAIR.—At 10 o'clock on the night of the 6th October, 100 men of the 54th, 40 Madras rifles and 60 Sikh infantry, embarked on board the little gun-boat Benares; at the same time a troop of the Military Train and another of Madras cavalry started by land, the plan being that we should join our forces together at Dehree on the Karamnassa, and proceed together to Kheree. (In the maps this village is written Khereeka.) Owing to the darkness of the night, and the captain being but imperfectly acquainted with the Karamnassa, he landed us at five A.M. below Soonpa, occasioning us a march of four or five miles more than was intended. At Dehree we were joined by the cavalry, with whom we marched as far as Mikris; there obtained a guide, and the cavalry was ordered to advance and surround Kheree until the infantry came up. From inquiries I (Mr. J. W. Garstin) made at various villages, it appeared that the day before the rebels at Kheree had been joined by those who had been staying at Barounda (eleven or twelve miles west), altogether there were about 800 pucra sepoys. I was also told that very morning these rebels had looted some villages north of Kheree, but had afterwards returned to the last-named place. The cavalry was proceeding towards Kheree when they came near the village of Soonce, out of which the sepoys issued and formed in the open (I think they must have stopped here to cook on their way back to Kheree). As the cavalry advanced, the sepoys began to fall back, and the cavalry charged. The rebels seeing little chance of escape became desperate. They took to some high crops, and some threw themselves on the ground, trying thus to avoid the sabres of our men, whilst they endeavoured to wound the horses with their own. Captain Nason, who, with Major Douglas, gallantly led the charge had already killed one man, and was rushing up to another, when he turned, and, deliberately taking aim, shot poor Nason dead. This man was immediately despatched by Major Douglas, who shortly after was himself mortally wounded by a sepoy he was going to cut down. The loss of their leaders dispirited our Cavalry, and they soon fell back upon the Infantry which was advancing. We never came up to the rebels again. However, they had already left at least sixty of their number dead upon the field. I only passed over a portion of the ground; I myself counted thirty-four dead sepoys, an officer counted forty-seven; but there must have been many who fell in the high crops that escaped our observation. The ground was fearfully heavy and swampy, or greater execution would assuredly have been done. We afterwards proceeded to Kheree, which we burnt, and in which from eight to ten rebels were killed, who were, I believe, simply Budmashes, and not Sepoys. In this village I found a bag containing 980 bullets, all beaten into shape, not moulded. After resting the men a couple of hours (we had been marching across country) we proceeded back to Pipra, where we had left the cooking pots, and where the men got their dinners. We did not reach the steamer until 9 o'clock P.M., and this place till 3½ to 4 A.M. this morning. Our casualties were Captain Nason, Military Train, killed; Major Douglas, 4th Madras Cavalry, mortally wounded. He died, I regret to say, at five o'clock this morning. Three Military Train slightly wounded, one Madras Cavalry wounded, and four or five horses wounded. The heat yesterday (Oct. 7) was very great, and five or six of the 84th were knocked down by sunstroke. They are, however, doing well I believe. The Captain of the Benares deserves great credit for the way in which he took us up and brought us down the Karamnassa. He was indefatigable, and I should be glad to learn that some notice had been taken of his services by Government. His name is Brown.

RAILWAY TO DARJEELING.—From a letter from the Board of Revenue, L.P., to Dr. Campbell, the Superintendent of Darjeeling, dated the 1st October, it appears that "the Board have understood that the question of a railroad to Darjeeling is merely one of time, its construction for military and political purposes alone being matter of necessity."

MERITED THANKS.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General is pleased to direct the publication in General Orders, of his cordial acknowledgment of the services of Lieutenant Prior, Acting Commissary of Ordnance, and of the warrant and non-commissioned officers and men of the ordnance department of the Bengal and Madras presidencies, at Saugor, during the defence of the fort under Brigadier Sage.

THE CHEAP PRESS.—The Indian Empire, a cheap daily started in Calcutta, has ceased to exist. It is about the fifth which has perished in Calcutta during the last ten years.

REWAH, 29th Sept., 1858.—On the 25th September, the Political Agent, Captain Osborne, held a Durbar to meet the Maharajah and other Sirdars of the State. The preparations made for the purpose were the following:—A Shmehannah was placed at the front of the agent's bungalow, with a rich silk carpet laid on the floor, and a platform raised as a throne for the rajah, the agent, the European interpreters, and the higher sirdars of state. Chairs were placed on the throne, as also on the two sides. Two guns and two companies of the Rewah Contingent with muskets were in readiness to receive the loyal rajah in state. At eight A.M. all was noise and bustle in this little city, and every eye was on the look-out for the rajah's arrival. At half-past eight the sound of music and drums was heard, and the procession seen advancing towards the agency. Several elephants and a number of horses richly caparisoned, with their riders no less so, with nearly two or three hundred attendants arrived, and the guns fired a salute for the rajah. His conveyance was a silver tonjon, and his dress was rich to the extreme, nothing but diamonds and pearls bedecked his graceful person. The political agent, Captain Osborne, approached, and received and seated the rajah on the chair allotted for him. All being seated, and nuzzars, &c., offered, the rajah discoursed on matters touching his loyalty to the British Government, and the false reports made against his character. He having perfectly satisfied the agent, conversed on the preparations of the ensuing campaign into the Bundelcund districts, which are partly disturbed by the rebellious sirdars of Rewah. Attur and pawn were then served out by the agency; the former placed in a silver salt-cellar, and the latter in a bread-basket belonging to the political agent as the most convenient vessels he could use for the purpose. After all this, the party broke up with another salute.—Bombay Standard.

ANDAMAN ISLANDS.—Accounts from the new settlements on the Andamans per Alma, which arrived from Port Blair on Sunday last, are, on the whole, favourable. Chatham island has been entirely cleared of jungle, and Ross island opposite in very forward state. The mutineers have found in Dr. Walker a stern disciplinarian, and a man of strong will and determination, and have pent up their evil inclinations, if they have any remaining still, for Dr. Walker to exercise his stern measures upon. Dr. Walker is certainly most energetically employed in making the islands habitable, and productive of every description of tropical produce, and we understand is determined, as far as his exertions can make it, to render the islands profitable. It is his intention, we are given to understand, to recommend to the Government the encouragement of voluntary emigration from the impoverished districts of Bengal, as well as from the Madras coast, to be located on Mouatt Island, which is separated from the Penal settlements by an isthmus, and we are sanguine that the scheme would not only be advantageous, but a great benefit. The convicts on the island now number nearly 3,000.—Madras Advertiser, Sept. 30.

THE FLAYED ALIVE.—Mr. A. Money, the magistrate of Arrah, contradicts the report that appeared some time ago about a man named Bradshaw having been flayed alive by the rebels in Shahabad. Mr. Money writes to the editor of the Phoenix:—"In your paper of the 6th of October appeared a statement that, on the 16th Sept., a private of H.M.'s 10th Regt. was caught by some rebels and skinned alive. The story is false. A private of the regiment did fall into the rebels' hands. He had lingered behind in a village. He was at once cut down and killed. I speak from the experience of some months when I say that the feelings which false stories of this kind excite to madness add to the difficulty of tranquillising the country, and of securing the active co-operation of natives well affected to us."

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 23).—The great annual festival of the Durga Pooja commenced on the 12th with general holidays, which ended on the 23rd inst. We have, therefore, had only three working days since the departure of the last mail, and very little business has been done. Unlike previous years, when just before the Durga Pooja, a large business has been usually done, that of the present year commenced with unusual dullness, and for about a week before the closing of offices, scarcely any fresh transactions were entered into, although holders were anxious sellers of some articles at considerable reductions. In Indigo some more business has been done. Some sales of Rau Silk were made just a couple of days before the holidays, at lower prices. In Sugar hardly anything doing. Saltpetre market closed with an advance again. No further transactions in Corals. In Oil Seeds no change. The same of Jute and other articles.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 23).—The depression mentioned in our last has not continued, and business to a fair extent has been effected during the holidays at an advance of about one anna per piece on most descriptions of Grey Goods. Bleached goods also are in good position, but Fans continue dull, buyers apparently having lost confidence and keeping backward. The market for Pices Goods is expected to open more favourably after the holidays. Melns continue as depressed as ever before, without any immediate prospects of improvement.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A NEW CHURCH.—Government have sanctioned the grant applied for of Rs. 2,617 toward the erection of a new church at Trevandrum. The church is intended for the use of the members of the Church of England, and the design has the Bishop's approval. A similar amount has been subscribed by the residents, but Rs. 1,417 have still to be collected. The grant is payable on the balance being made good. The cost of the church, inclusive of furniture, compound wall, &c., has been estimated at Rs. 6,400.

DOG KILLING.—The number of dogs and bitches killed in Madras during the months of April, May, June, July, August and September was 3,301, and Government has sanctioned the amount Rs. 467 paid by the Commissioner of Police for their slaughter. In 1857, 3,440 dogs were killed, and in 1856, 3,052. In future the Chief Commissioner is to send the bill direct to the civil auditor, who has been authorised to pass it.

RAILWAY TO BANGALORE.—The Court of Directors, in a despatch dated Aug. 18, have sanctioned the request of the directors of the Madras Railway Company to be allowed to proceed with the execution of the branch line to Bangalore, the construction of which was provided for under their original contract with the company. The conditions attached to the permission appear in certain correspondence on the subject, also transmitted, but the correspondence is not on the editor's table. The railway directors proposed appointing six additional engineers to be employed on the line in question, and to this proposal sanction has been accorded.

OBITUARY.—We regret to have to record the death, at Ganjam, on the 7th October, of Dr. D. Hanson, who was drowned while embarking at that port. The lamented decease was one of the alumni of the Madras Medical College who went home to take degrees. Dr. Hanson passed a very creditable examination, and obtained his degrees; but, being above the age for an appointment in the commissioned branch of the service, the Government here, at the recommendation of the Court of Directors, we believe, bestowed on him a civil appointment in the Northern Division, equivalent to an assistant surgeoncy, which he was not long permitted to enjoy.—Examiner.

THE SHIP SUBAHDAH, from the Mauritius to Madras with return emigrants, was totally lost on the night of the 11th Sept., off the Island of Focci, one of the Suvadive group. According to a Ceylon contemporary, after considerable privations and suffering, the surviving crew and emigrants—between thirty and forty of the poor creatures were washed off the reef and drowned—reached the Maldives in safety, when they were hospitably received by the Sultan, who, after feeding and housing them during their stay, provided them with a passage in one of his own vessels, the Mahomed Allie. She arrived at Galle on the 27th ult., having on board Captain Ummerville and four officers, five European sailors, fifteen lascars, and 240 emigrants—all in a very exhausted state. Arrangements are in progress for the transport of the coolies to their destination, while the collector of customs at Galle has taken charge of the lascars as distressed seamen, and hopes soon to be able to provide them with a passage home. It was not known whether anything had been saved from the wreck.

AN EXPLOSION.—We regret to learn that an explosion took place on Saturday last, at St. Thomas's Mount, which might have terminated disastrously. Providentially, however, it only resulted in injury to two natives, one having been slightly, and the other severely, burnt. About ten o'clock in the forenoon the cantonment was startled out of its propriety by a loud cannon-like report, followed up by several others in succession. On looking about, a dense mass of smoke and flame was seen issuing from the Laboratory-room, the men running out of it as hard as they could. Some thirty or forty carcasses and balls were being filled, when all of a sudden, by some means not yet ascertained, the composition ignited. On the alarm being given the fire-engines were brought out, and the soldiers from barracks readily and cheerfully hurried down to the spot, and rendered great assistance, the fire being got under in about an hour. The Laboratory-room and adjoining shed, and nearly all the implements contained in them, have been greatly damaged, and the rafters considerably burned. The only surprise is that, considering that thirty carcasses exploded, no greater loss was occasioned, the almost miraculous preservation of life and limb being further cause for much thankfulness.—Madras Spectator, Oct. 11.

MR. BENJAMIN BROOKS and Mr. George Branson have been enrolled attorneys, solicitors, and proctors of the Supreme Court at Madras.

THE BANEE OF VIZIANAGRAM is coming down to Madras with her two sons, who are to be educated at the Presidency College. Mr. Armour will continue, as heretofore, their private tutor.

BOHILLA FREEBOOTERS.—A correspondent of a Calcutta journal mentions certain strange proceedings of the Rohilla freebooters in the Hyderabad territories. It appears that these freebooters do not just now wish for plunder so much as horses. They have recently attacked the villages of some seven Pathan horse Jemadars, carrying off in every instance from twenty to thirty horses. The only suggestion as to the motive of these Rohillas worthy of credit is that they intend when they have collected a sufficient number of horses to act in the old Pindari fashion as mounted freebooters. It is just possible, however, that Tantia Topce may have deluded some of these men into the belief that he would eventually force his way into the Deccan.

GEOGRAPHY AT A DISCOUNT.—Dr. Caldwell reports on the state of the Edeyenkoody mission in Tinnevely. The inhabitants of the Edeyenkoody district appear to be wretchedly ignorant, even on points in which we should suppose them to be well informed. For instance, Dr. Caldwell was recently asked by a respectable man, "Are the wars in your country finished?" Dr. Caldwell asked what wars? On this the man answered the wars about Delhi and the Sepoys. "But," said Dr. Caldwell, "I come from England; Delhi is not in England, but in this country; England is more than three times as far off." "Oh, indeed," he answered, "is your country still further north than Delhi; it must be very far north, indeed!"

IN STATU PUPILLARI.—The Chief Justice at Madras has recently decided that the authority of the parent over the child continues in full force until the latter, according either to the Hindoo or Mussulman law, is of age. After that time he can reside where he pleases. The decision arose from a case in which a lad of fourteen had taken refuge with the Free Church Mission and was claimed by his parents. The Mission were compelled to deliver the lad in spite of his protestations.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The aggregate expenditure on the Madras Railway from 1st March, 1853, when operations first commenced, to the 30th June, 1858, has been Rs. 1,57,28,921-7. The receipts from the commencement to the 30th June, 1858, have amounted to Rs. 6,64,376-0-10.

A MERCURIAL BLUNDER.—The Bombay Standard suggests that the "lode of pure quicksilver," said to have been found in the fort at Cannanore, came out of a broken barometer. A blunder of the same kind was made, he says, at Aden, in 1842.

FALSE REPORTS.—A correspondent of the Englishman notices three rumours as current at Hyderabad. The subjects of the Nizam are to be disarmed, the Nizam objects to any change in the impression on the coinage issued from the Royal Mint, and a fort is building at Secunderabad. All the rumours are incorrect, the English are not building a fort at Secunderabad, though they are entrenching the cantonment, no proposition has been made to the Nizam to disarm his subjects, and he has not evinced any disinclination to remove the effigies of the King of Delhi from his coinage.

WALKING THROUGH FIRE.—In accordance with an order dated 2nd January, 1857, the magistrate of North Arcot submitted on the 27th September a report on the swinging festival, and the ceremony of walking through fire. During the year there had been no performance of the former kind, but there had been one instance of the latter, which was reported to the magistrate in a letter from Mr. Sullivan, dated the 7th September:—"With reference to your official memo. of the 17th February, 1857, No. 64, and your letter No. 523 of the 31st ultimo, I have the honour to forward copies of Urzees, Nos. 60 and 69, dated 9th and 29th April, 1857, respectively, from the police ameen of Arnee, and a copy of my Takid, No. 71, of the 15th Idem, to him, connected with a ceremony of walking through fire, which was celebrated at Annopooram, in the jaghire of Arnee, on the 18th April, 1857. It will be observed that I adopted the course of endeavouring to dissuade the parties from celebrating the rite agreeably to the views of the authorities, as contained in copy of extract from a letter from the Hon. the Court of Directors, dated Oct. 22, 1856, which accompanied your memo. under reply, but, I regret to say, without the desired effect. It is further reported that the ceremony was performed without any inconvenience to the parties concerned, or to the spectators, and I am inclined to think that the rite, as now performed in this part of the country, is more pro forma than anything else. During the year ending Dec. 31, 1857, no other cases were reported to me as having occurred in the sub-division under my charge." Government, on Oct. 7, ordered the matter to be brought to the notice of the Home authorities.

MR. P. P. HUTCHINS, Junior Civil Servant, has been recommended for the reward of 800 rupees for his advancement in the Hindostani language. Mr. H. arrived in February, 1858, received his first increase on the 26th March, and the second on the 29th June, 1858.

THE DUTCH TRADING COMPANY of Amsterdam find their trade with Java so profitable, that they propose to raise a loan of five millions of guilders. They lend money to the planters of the island, make advances on produce, import wool from Australia and the Cape, and hides from South America.

WELLINGTON SQUARE, CALCUTTA, is to be illuminated by Baboo Oocur Dutt, on the night of the general illumination.

A FACT FOR FREEMASONS.—"The Worshipful Brother Colonel W. P. Macdonald has been constituted Provincial Grand Master on the Coromandel Coast." Colonel Macdonald thus succeeds Brother Williamson.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH TO CEYLON.—We learn from the "Government Records" that the submarine cable between Ceylon and India was laid under the superintendence of Messrs. Wickham and St. Albyn of the telegraph department, and that Mr. Daviot, head Pilot of Paumbem, was in charge of the vessel. The cable was laid without accident, notwithstanding the prevalence of strong gales, and Government has expressed its approbation of the good service rendered by Mr. Daviot.

LIEUT. DRURY'S COURT MARTIAL.—Lieut. James Drury, of the 41st M.N.L., was tried by court martial on the 28th July last, at Rangoon, charged with having been drunk at Masulipatam on the 6th April last, he being at the time Regimental Orderly Officer of the Day. The Court found Lieut. Drury not guilty, and the Commander-in-Chief, on the 25th ult., confirmed the finding, remarking, however—"His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, is unable to accord the finding of the Court his approval, but he trusts that Lieut. Drury will take warning from what has happened."

MAP OF INDIA.—The Director of Public Instruction, on the 23rd ult., forwarded to Government a letter from the Rev. A. Symonds, exhibiting the accounts of the expenses incurred in London in engraving copies of the maps of India and the adjacent countries, which Mr. Symonds prepared for the Educational Department. Government, on the 6th inst., observed that the amount sanctioned for the purpose was 4,350 rupees, and that the actual cost had fallen somewhat below that figure. They resolved to instruct the civil auditor to pass the Bill submitted by the Director (4,296), in order that the advances standing to the Director's debit might be adjusted. "The Director will convey to the Rev. A. Symonds the best acknowledgments of Government for the great and disinterested labours undertaken by him in the preparation of books and maps of Indian geography."

CANARA.—A somewhat extraordinary adventure was met with a few days ago near Mulky, which is about twenty miles north of Mangalore, on the coast. Some fishermen starting out very early in the morning, while it was yet dark, with their hooks and fish-spears, in their boats, remarked something dark in the sea, which it appears was outside the breakers; they made up to it, to make it out in the dark. One of the first boat-loads of five called out a "Cheetah—a cheetah;" but it was soon discovered to be a royal tiger. They rowed close up to it, and the first man drove his fish-spear into it, and then another belaboured it on the head with an oar. But it soon turned on them, put one huge paw on the side of the boat, which capsized it, and with one blow of the other felled the poor man with the oar. Man and tiger disappeared together, at least none of the others saw more of them. They were all shot out by the capsizing boat, and it was some little time before they were picked up by other boats. That evening the tiger's body was washed up by the waves, dead, and the next morning the poor man's corpse, with the unmistakable claw marks on the back of his neck. The others escaped unscathed, with the exception of an awkward blow on the ankle, which one of them got from the boat.—Athenaeum.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A report prevailed some months ago that Dr. Hanson had been murdered while on his way to Sumbulpore. This report turned out to be erroneous, but the unfortunate gentleman has, we very much regret to learn, come to an untimely end. It appears that he, and a Mr., Mrs., and Miss Martin got into a boat at Ganjam to go on board a ship in those roads. This was on the 7th October. The boat broke between the shore and the ship, precipitating its unfortunate occupants into the water. Mr. and Mrs. Martin managed to struggle on until they were picked up by a boat from the ship; but Dr. Hanson and Miss Martin were drowned. The doctor's body was found headless on the morning of the 8th, but that of Miss Martin has not been recovered.—Athenaeum.

PROMOTIONS.—The Governor General has conferred the rank of ensign unattached, on Serj. Dixon, 5th infantry, Hyderabad Contingent; staff Serj. McDonald, 4th company Hyderabad Contingent; and staff Serj. Judgson, 1st company artillery, Hyderabad Contingent, who were specially recommended for the distinction by their commanding officers, and by the Government of Madras. Serj. maj. Richard Westernman, and Qr. mr. Serj. James Kelly, of the 1st Madras fusiliers, and Serj. maj. Thomas Doyle, of the Sirmoor battalion, who distinguished themselves in several actions, have also been raised to the rank of ensign.

THE BASKING SHARK.—A very magnificent specimen of the basking shark, fifty feet in length, has just been cast ashore near Kurrachee. These extraordinary monsters have sometimes been caught, on the shores of Meckran, sixty feet in length, with a gape, when the jaws were fully opened, of about three feet. They are by much the largest of all known fish, the whale and his congeners not being a fish at all, but a mammiferous. The basking shark is, fortunately, comparatively harmless. He floats sluggishly near the surface of the water, living on the lesser-sized fishes, medusæ, sea-slugs, and the like. They are frequently caught, for the sake of their fins and oil, by the fishermen of Kemaree, but are, from their bulk, very troublesome to get properly handled, so that the lesser-sized and more voracious and active variety, caught in nets at the bottom of the sea near the shore, are preferred. Whales are not unfrequently thrown up on our shores all along the Malabar, Kattiawar, and Meckran coasts, but they scarcely bear any resemblance to the shark—none such as to make it possible to mistake the one for the other.—Standard.

THE DAVID SASSOON REFORMATORY INSTITUTION.—Mr. Crawford, the chief magistrate, chairman of this institution, on the 21st October visited this excellent institution, formerly the "School of Industry," designed to reclaim juvenile criminals from the ways of vice, by teaching them some trade by which they can maintain themselves in future. Mr. Crawford spent two hours in visiting the institution, situated in Chunam Kiln-lane, Girgaum, and was well pleased with all the arrangements. The youths, chiefly confirmed vagrants from the streets, were taught various kinds of mechanical arts, being trained up as blacksmiths, tailors, weavers, carpenters, bookbinders, &c., and the proceeds of their work, in which they were remarkably proficient, would no doubt in a short time render the school self-supporting. The boys were well clothed, were healthy and cheerful in their appearance, and had ample accommodation on the premises. Everything, in fact, was in perfect order, and bore evidence of the careful management of the superintendent.

A FOURTH MAGISTRATE.—With reference to the suggestions to Government by the municipal commissioners, that some officer connected with the police office, for such a moderate addition to his present emoluments as might suffice, be appointed to adjudicate on municipal cases, Government have made the following resolution dated the 14th October:—"The municipal commissioners should be furnished with a copy of the government resolution in the judicial department, dated 28th July, 1858, 'that the senior magistrate be informed that under the orders of the Hon. Court recently received from the Government of India directing that no increase of establishments be on any account sanctioned pending the inquiry regarding civil salaries and establishments in consideration of the question of appointing a fourth magistrate for the Presidency, must be postponed,' and informed that on the grounds therein stated, Government are unable to entertain the proposal of erecting the appointment of fourth magistrate of police. The Governor in Council is of opinion that there ought not to be any difficulty with the present number of magistrates in making the services of one of them available for a certain portion of each day for the adjudication of municipal cases, and orders will be issued from the judicial department for giving effect to such an arrangement. With respect to the last paragraph of their letter, the municipal commissioners should be informed that the arrangement which is therein suggested for combining the office of fourth magistrate with that of clerk or interpreter in the chief magistrate's court would be objectionable, and that it is unusual and irregular for any public department to submit uninvited suggestions as to the selection of a person to fill a particular appointment under Government."

BHOOR, Oct., 1858.—Some years ago the Christian community was startled out of their propriety by the phenomenon of blood coming out from a picture of the Holy Virgin. You have not, I hope, forgotten the exposition offered in the Times how to work a miracle. Well, a similar miracle has happened in this dark heathen land. Sixty miles from this there is a place called Matias Murr. A great temple is there dedicated to the goddess Asabapoor. It has been alleged that of late blood had been running from her left side below the breast. This news travelled fast over the country. The Rao of Cutch, a very devout Hindoo, was at a loss what to do. The Mata's wrath (more terrible, perhaps, than the British bayonet) ought to be propitiated. The Brahmins were, of course, consulted. Ceremonies and feasts followed at the expense of his Highness, to the great delight and benefit of the Brahmins and Goanias. At present, to all appearance, the goddess has been propitiated. This miracle was the third performed in the memory of "the oldest inhabitant" in the country. On the first occasion a great famine took place, which compelled a portion of the inhabitants of Cutch and Gujerat to leave their country. A second brought death and slaughter to the Kulloras, the then reigning sect of Scinde.

ATTACK BY A TIGER.—A few days ago, whilst a flock of sheep were on their way from Campoolce to Bombay, a tiger sprang into the midst of them from out of some brushwood bordering the road between Campoolce and Narel, and made a desperate onslaught on the frightened flock, severely mangle some half a dozen, that eventually died, but contenting himself with carrying off only one of them. A party of sporting gents, accompanied by some native shikarees, are on the qui vive, and hope to render a good account of the monster for his temerity and love of mutton.

A PARSEE FESTIVAL.—This day, 25th Sept., is the Pappettee, or new year's day of the Shenshahee Parsees, which, of all the festivals observed by them, is the first and universally celebrated in honour of Yezdeezee, the last king of the Sassanede dynasty. On this day the Parsees rise early, and dress themselves in new suits of clothes; and those piously disposed say their prayers in their private residences, or attend the fire temples, where a large congregation gathers. After prayers, they visit their friends and relations, when the hamu i-jour, or joining on hands is performed (a ceremony dispensed with by Young Bombay). This ceremony is a sort of greeting, corresponding to the European fashion of wishing each other a happy new year. The friends and relations are invited to breakfast. The morning being thus occupied, they spend the rest of the day in their country houses and clubs, where feasting, rejoicing, and nautch parties are generally kept up till a late hour. Alms are given to the poor in the course of the day, and new suits of clothes are presented to servants and dependants.—Bombay Times.

THE ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.—We (Bombay Times) announced about the end of last April that, by an order of Government, the head accountants in the collectorates had been directed to join the Accountant-General's Office in Bombay. This order came into force on the 1st May, 1858, on the introduction of the Bengal system of accounts. Since then, complaints having been made of the inconvenience experienced by the collectors in consequence of the transfer of the head accountants to Bombay, Mr. J. M. Erskine, First Assistant to the Accountant-General, Bombay, and Mr. E. F. Harrison, First Assistant to the Accountant-General of Bengal, were specially appointed to institute inquiries on the subject; and on the recommendations made in their report, Government have, we understand, issued orders for the re-transfer of the head accountants to their respective collectorates. The Commissioners were of opinion that the services of the head accountants are indispensably necessary in the collectors' offices; and Government have further directed that the result of the commission should be intimated to the collectors, and the re-transfer effected as soon as may be.

A QUESTIONABLE LEGAL TRIUMPH.—The law has just had another triumph, and a very brilliant one. We beg to congratulate it, and to congratulate our fellow-citizens generally, on account of the highly honourable achievement we have now to report. The Alibagh insurance fraud was briefly a case in which goods worth Rs. 90 were insured at Rs. 26,000, and sent to sea in a country vessel, the master of which was to receive Rs. 1,000 for sinking her. He made arrangements that he supposed would result in that, and, getting into a small boat with his crew (of two men), he proceeded to the nearest land, and reported that the vessel was entirely lost. But the vessel did not sink, and was found with its trumpery cargo. There was not the slightest doubt about the facts. It remained for the law to help these detected conspirators out of this difficulty. For thirty two years at least it has been the custom of the courts to serve notices in the English language—a bad custom, as we have repeatedly remarked, but still a custom; and because the notices to produce the policy were in English, the Chief Justice, Sir H. Davison, decided that the jury should bring in a verdict of Not Guilty! The prisoners were discharged by proclamation, filled, no doubt, with admiration of English law.—Guardian, Oct. 9.

THE KOORIA MOORIAS.—The Bombay Standard understands that a whole fleet of vessels is about to proceed to the Kooria Moorias to procure guano. The guano of these islands is for the most part worthless, a dry climate being indispensable for its preservation. The Bombay Standard thinks the owners or captains of the ships in want of freight should apply to the commander of the garrison. "As he permits the Banians to lay down a dunghill on Bombay-green for the benefit of the residents in the Fort, perhaps he might suffer an English shipowner to take it up again, provided the feelings of the natives were regarded with sufficient care, and the pigeons put on their allowances while their four feet water round her at high-water mark—hull sold for 1,510 dols., without the copper; Gazelle foundered with all hands. Captain Fox happened to be on shore, and four of her crew were picked up alive the following morning. She had arrived in the afternoon from Amoy, on her way to Hong Kong, and H.M. brig-of-war Acorn guards the wreck till means are adopted to save the treasure; Laura (Oldenburg brig), to be sold by auction to day; Hepscott (British iron-ship, 575 tons), perched upon a pinnacle rock, which has passed through her bottom up the beams; Louisa, with foremast gone, in 4½ feet water—(may possibly be saved); Moulton, (British, 429 tons) to be sold by auction to-day; Louisa Bailey, masts gone, in a paddy-field with two feet water; Thurselda (Danish barque, 450 tons) drifted four miles; Aganita Adriana (Danish brig, 300 tons); Glendoveer (British ship, 480), to be sold to-day, by auction; Alfred the Great (British, 664 tons), on the rocks by Double Island, with a hole through her bottom—some hopes of saving her; Pantolon (British brig, 184), driven over a rock twelve feet dry at high water, into a natural basin behind, where she lies with her masts gone.

The vessels stranded, but since got off, are, Harvest Home, lost her rudder; Dennis Hill and William Frederick, much damaged; Beverley, but little injured; a Bremen barque (Ohio) and Sardinian brig (Giovanina), damaged.

The brig Hazard is all right—the only vessel that rode out the storm.

The gale commenced about eleven P.M. on the 21st, and the barometer was then 29.85. At two, the height of the gale (bar. 28.41), a storm-wave, twenty-five feet perpendicular, came in from seawards, sweeping everything before it, and driving the ships from their anchorage over a long mud-flat, two miles across, with not more than two to three feet water on it. The tide rose from eighteen to twenty feet. It is said that upwards of two hundred junks are wrecked, and the loss of life amongst them is very great. The houses on Double Island are in ruins, and the strength of the wind may be gathered from the fact that godowns on the water-front, with walls two feet and a-half thick, were actually carried away. The bungalows have disappeared! The town of Swatow is much injured, as might have been expected, and the Chinese report much havoc in the interior.

Except the unfortunate officers and crew of the Gazelle, there is but little or no loss of life amongst foreigners.

The hurricane seems to have been local; or if it travelled, it has done so inland. At Amoy there was only a sharp north-easter.—China Mail.

CEYLON.

RICE CULTIVATION.—The Columbo Observer remarks on the cultivation of rice in the southern province of the island. It appears, that so watched is the system of cultivation pursued, that the return is only ten-fold. The same land, moreover, seldom yields a second crop, but is allowed to lie fallow for five months in the year. One hundred acres of land regularly cultivated would yield, in one year, only 2,000 bushels of paddy. The price of paddy is seldom more than three shillings a bushel, thus the maximum yearly return upon one hundred acres of rice land in Ceylon would be £300.

THE WEATHER.—Either the south-west monsoon is going out, or the north-east coming in "like a lion." We cannot remember so fierce an October. Last night we had a series of severe squalls, and this morning, October 29th, rain fell heavily at Colombo. We fear much damage will result from inundation, and that the roads will be rendered difficult just as crop is coming on in abundance. Our only hope is, that after the sponge has been thoroughly squeezed we may look for a long continuance of fine drying weather.—Observer.

DEATH OF THE REV. J. H. DE SARAM.—The above native gentleman, who was for many years Singhaee Colonial Chaplain of Colombo, died on Oct. 28. He was educated in England, took the degree of M.A. at Oxford, and married an English lady, his children by whom fill honourable and useful positions in the Colonial Service.

REVENUE.—The Ceylon Examiner publishes the revenue and expenditure tables of the first six months of the current year. "The revenue has amounted to £339,917, less £4,895 arrears of former years; or giving as the current revenue for the first six months of 1858 a sum of £335,022. At this rate the year's revenue will reach £670,000!!! The expenditure for the same period has been £270,213; besides nearly £20,000 expended of surplus revenue of former years. The balance to the credit of the colony is thus £69,703 for six months, and if continued at the same rate during the rest of the year it will reach the sum of £139,406.

THE STRAITS.

A HURRICANE.—This morning (the 16th Sept.) at a quarter-past eight a most terrific gale swept over Singapore. The real damage occasioned thereby has not yet reached us, but we have heard of boats being capsized; men walking over a bridge being blown over the balustrade and killed; ships in the roads dragging their anchors, some going ashore, others coming into collision with one another; ships carrying away spars, top-masts, &c.; but we have not heard of any loss of life, except the cases referred to above. In the island amongst the plantations, trees have been torn up by the roots, fruit-bearing trees have been prostrated, and in truth every obstacle has had to bow to the tremendous violence of the blast.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our Cabul advices are to the 30th September: On the 15th, a petition was received from Syud Mehmood from Candahar, the contents of which were kept a secret. Syud Mehmood has also written to his brother Syud Ushruf, Kotwal, stating that he had paid a visit to Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan, son of the late Mahomed Ukhur Khan, and delivered to him the letter of Dost Mahomed Khan. He read the letter, and tore it in anger, and also spoke to him (Syud Mahomed) harshly. Next day, however, he was summoned again and presented with a khillut. The contents of the Dost's letter have been sent to Futteh Mahomed Khan, to his brother, Jullalooldeen Khan and Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, ruler of Herat.

On the 16th, Nazir Naeem Khan was summoned and ordered to ascertain what tribe had plundered the Cabul kafilas on the road to Jellalabad, and to keep watch on the same road. The Nazir represented that the Ghilziees had plundered the kafilas. A purwanah was sent to Shah Murv Khan, ruler of Jellalabad, to send in custody to Cabul the Syuh who had plundered the horses of some merchants.

On the 20th, news reached from Herat that 10,000 Sowars, with twenty guns, had arrived at Ghorian from Persia, of which 6,000 Sowars and ten guns had gone to Murf Shah Jehan. The King of Persia has sent orders to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, of Herat, directing him not to oppress his subjects, and to collect provisions.

On the 22nd news was received from Bulkh that some Russian officers had arrived in Oorgunj who had taken up their abode inside the town. One of them was encamped on the river and was surveying the roads and the river. The Ameer ordered that this news should be communicated to the British authorities at Peshawar. On the 24th a petition was received from Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan, ruler of Candahar, representing that all that was said against him was false, and that he was in every way obedient to the Ameer. On the 25th Sirdar Mahomed Uzul Khan wrote from Bulkh that Abdool Kurreem Beg, ruler of Hissar, had come with 20,000 men and 30 guns to Koalab and taken possession of it, and after giving the charge of it to his eldest son, had marched to Krakteen, of which also he has taken possession. On the 27th the nephew of Fsa Khan, late ruler of Herat, who, on his death had taken refuge in Dah-zungee, returned to Cabul, and was honourably received by the Dost. On the 24th Shere Ally Khan ordered all his troops to march to Ghuraznee, whence on his own arrival they will march to Candahar.—Lahore Chronicle.

Affair at Korisauth.

The Adj. gen. of the army, Army Hd. qrs., Allahabad, Dinapore, Aug. 14, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward herewith, for submission to H.E. the C. in C., a report from Lieut. col. Walter, 35th regt., comm. at Arrah, of a successful encounter which the troops under his command had on the 30th ult., with the rebels near the village of Korisauth, in which they sustained a loss of from fifty to sixty men without any casualties on our side.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Brigd., Comdg. in the disturbed districts of Ghazepore and Behar.

To Capt. Stevenson, Brigd. maj., Behar field force Dinapore.

Arrah, July 31, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brigd. Douglas, C.B., that with the detail named in the margin,* I left this station at 2 A.M. yesterday for Judgerajunge, ten miles west of Arrah, on the Buxar road. The bridge over the Bewar at Beebigunge had been destroyed by the rebels. I had a temporary one thrown over during the night, which I crossed.

2. On arriving at Judgerajunge, I found the enemy, who were reported to be in force, had left some hours; the country was too heavy from the rains for me to follow them up with any hope of success, either with cavalry or artillery.

3. I then moved on the village of Korisauth, a rebel stronghold, which I destroyed, and bivouacked in a tope close to it.

4. The rebels approached me in force at 11 A.M.; they were computed at eighty cav. and 800 inf. I attacked them with cav. and clouds of skimi-hers, and drove them through topes and belts of jungles. I then ordered the art. to the front; they opened on them; the cav. now turned the enemy's left flank, observing which, and that they were moving to the right, I changed line to the left, prolonging my skirmishers in that direction.

5. The heat was now intense, the troops much exhausted, several men had fallen from sun-strokes; I therefore gave up the pursuit, and got the men under cover.

6. The loss of the enemy from killed and wounded was between fifty and sixty; twenty-seven dead were left on the field. The enemy were seen carrying off their wounded.

7. All ranks vied in doing their duty. I beg to name Capt. Medhurst, 10th regt.; Capt. Elkington, 35th regt.; Capt. Warren, 60th royal rifles; Lieut. Gibb, art.; and Lieut. Mackeson, Bengal pol. batt, comdg. detach. of corps.

8. Lieut. Beadon, comdg. detach. 3rd Seikh irr. cav., has upon this as upon all occasions when on patrol duty, rendered me the greatest service; he is unwearied in his exertions, and is a most excellent officer.

9. Capt. Baring, staff officer, afforded every assistance.

10. To Asst. surg. L. O. Patterson, H.M.'s 35th regt., I am much indebted; after making his medical arrangements, he joined me at my request. I cannot speak too highly of his zeal and efficiency as an officer.

11. Mr. Brodhurst, the magistrate, accompanied me on this as on every other occasion I have been out, always in the front. The fact of the force falling in with, and engaging the enemy on, so many occasions, speaks for itself as to the value and correctness of the information I have received from him, which is difficult to obtain in the present state of the district.

12. I am happy to say there were no casualties, and the cases of sun-stroke have all recovered.

J. M. WALTER, Lieut. col.,
Comdg. force at Arrah.

BURMESE DAINTIES.—After the King had disappeared, refreshments were brought in, of which we partook. Several of the dishes were very palatable—pancakes filled with spiced meats, jellies of rice-starch tinged with different colours, and so on. But the most notable viand produced consisted of fried locusts. These were brought in hot-and-hot in successive saucers, and I was not sorry to have the opportunity of tasting a dish so famous. They were by no means bad—much like what one might suppose fried shrimps to be. The inside, I believe, is removed, and the cavity stuffed with a little spiced meat.—Ara Mission.

CHIEF ENGINEER WANTED.—The Madras Athe-
naum understands that the Great Southern India Railway Company cannot commence operations for want of a Chief Engineer. Mr. Bruce, formerly Chief Engineer of the Madras and Beypore Railway Company, refuses to come out to this country, having, we believe, been worried either by the Company or the Government till 10,000 a month would not repay him. He was offered only Rs. 2000.

To Correspondents.

EFFECTS OF DECEASED OFFICERS.—In answer to more than one correspondent we may state that, in all cases, the effects of deceased officers, dying intestate, are taken charge of by the officers of the corps to which the deceased belonged, sold by auction, and the proceeds remitted to the Military Secretary to the Government of India. The amount is retained by that functionary for a period of twelve months, when the balance remaining, after the settlement of all claims proved against the estate, is sent home to the Military Secretary, East-India House. In ordinary times lists of such balances are forwarded to this country twice in the year, but owing to the disturbed state of the Upper Provinces no list has been received since June, 1857. The father, or rather the legal representative of the deceased, is entitled to claim the balance. Compensation is not given for the articles mentioned in our correspondent's letter as having been stolen from his murdered son—chargers, pistols, &c.—as they are considered to belong to an officer's military equipment. In the case of houses, furniture, and any strictly speaking unprofessional property, compensation will be granted on the application of the nearest relative, or other legal representative, to the Military Secretary to the Government of India.

 supplying this Paper, communication of the fact to the Publisher will insure a remedy.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, Nov. 29, 1858.

THE MADRAS ARMY.

A VERY seasonable and suggestive letter has lately appeared in one of the Madras papers.
 The object of the writer was to draw public attention to the denuded state of the regiments in that Presidency, with respect to officers. Previous to the mutinies the same deficiency prevailed in the Bengal army, with what lamentable results need not now be mentioned. At this moment the condition of the Madras army is worse than was even that of the sister service. There are, it seems, eight Queen's corps in that Presidency with 268 officers, or seventy-six short of their full complement. This, however, is nothing in comparison with the shortcomings of the three European regiments belonging to the late Company's army. The proper number of officers to each of these corps is forty-nine, or 147 for the three. But at present their regimental duties, when not on field service, are discharged by seventy-nine officers, or about a fraction over twenty-six to each.
 Such a state of things might be thought sufficiently bad, and not easily to be matched —certainly not surpassed. Unfortunately we have not yet touched the real blot. It must be in the memory of our readers that three extra native regiments have lately been added to the cadre of the Madras army, to be officered, however, from the already under-officered corps on that establishment. Now, each native regiment is supposed to require the presence and superintendence of twenty-five European officers, so that the proper complement for the fifty-five regiments would be 1,375 officers. But how stands the case in reality? Nominally, there are 1,300 officers to do the regimental duties of the Madras native army, but of these there are no more than 698 actually available, or an average of thirteen to each corps. It need scarcely be said that even these 698 regimental officers are not equally distributed. The 11th, for instance, has two captains and five lieutenants; the 13th and 14th have each only one captain present; the 17th boasts of two captains, one acting as quartermaster, and three lieutenants; the 18th and 29th can show no more than one captain and two lieutenants each, and in the latter corps the solitary captain is also quartermaster; and the 48th has one captain and six lieutenants. Besides these officers, there are, of course, a few ensigns here and there, but even that rank is quite seventy short of its complement, while many have been unavoidably promoted and intrusted with a certain degree of responsibility which their military experience by no means justified. To sum up, the eight Queen's regiments, at least 6,000 strong, have only 268 officers instead of 344; the late Company's three European regiments to their 2,000 bayonets have seventy-nine officers instead of 147; while the fifty-five native corps, mustering upwards of 50,000 men, have no more than 698 officers instead of 1,375. It is further estimated that of the Queen's officers 3½ per cent. are employed on the staff, 16½ per cent. absent on sick certificate or general leave, and 1½ per cent. not posted. Of the officers of the three European corps, 2½ per cent. are on staff or civil employment, 14 per cent. absent, and 7½ per cent. short of the proper complement. Finally, of the officers of the native army, 29 per cent. are on staff or civil employ, 12 per cent. absent, and 5 per cent. short. In other words, out of 1,300 officers, 374 are on the staff or on civil service, and 158 absent on sick certificate and general leave. It is only fair to suppose that these 374 detached officers are selected for their superior merit, and consequently we are forced to the conclusion that those remaining with their regiments are not only numerically unequal to the work expected of the whole complement, but that, in comparison with their more fortunate comrades, they are also deficient in military qualifications. We are sensible that this would be a very erroneous judgment, though the most natural one; but in any case it is quite impossible that the regimental duties can be adequately discharged by little more than one-half of the number of officers judged necessary for that purpose. The fate of the Bengal army has illustrated in letters of blood the disastrous consequences of drawing too many officers from their corps. It is therefore altogether inexcusable, after such a terrible warning, to incur a similar peril with the army of the Madras Presidency.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

ONE of the first and most serious difficulties to be anticipated by the new Government will arise on the question of the religious education of the natives. Sensible and unprejudiced men are almost unanimous in deprecating any proselytising tendencies on the part of persons in authority, as it is well known that the natives are incapable of distinguishing between individual and official acts. Every civil and military officer is supposed to form an integral portion of the Sircar, or ruling power; and every word and action of such functionaries is held to represent the will and pleasure of the Government. It is not sufficient, therefore, that the President and Council of India and the local authorities abstain from openly taking measures for the diffusion of Christianity. Their subordinates, to the lowest grades of the services, must likewise be kept from intermeddling with the religious creeds of the natives, and thus violating both the letter and the spirit of the most solemn engagements. A perfect and consistent neutrality has hitherto been enforced by the Court of Directors, who rightly deemed that the violation of treaties is not the best means of securing reverence for the pure doctrines of the Redeemer. But, while mindful of the sanctity of oaths, they did not overlook their primary and positive duty of rendering the holy religion they professed accessible and intelligible to all. Not only did they extend their protection to missionaries, but they also granted considerable sums of money for educational purposes. There can be little doubt that the diffusion of sound useful knowledge is the best and safest guide to genuine Christianity. The habit of research is not likely to be confined to mere secular matters; and if once Hindoo or Mahomedan can be brought to inquire into the grounds of their respective creeds, the axe is already laid at the root of the tree. It may be that the first result will be only pure and simple Deism; but even that would be an immense progress from the erroneous and grovelling tenets they have previously held. Much will have been gained when the Koran and the Vedas have become objects of doubt and suspicion, if not of contempt and disgust. It cannot be denied that owing to various circumstances the Court of Directors hesitated too long in affording encouragement to secular education. They were slow to begin operations, and lukewarm in carrying them on when once commenced. Some persons, indeed, point to the disaffection of many rebel leaders who were educated in English schools and colleges in India, and thence infer that the education of the natives is perilous to the stability of our empire. Were this even to be true, it would still be our duty, as the rulers of the country, to offer to all the opportunity for intellectual and social improvement. But all kinds of learning are not equally suitable and desirable, and it is here that the chief error has been committed. It is almost incredible that such little discrimination should have been exercised in selecting works for translation into the vernacular, and as text-books. Were it not that the subject is far too important to be treated lightly, one might be tempted to indulge in no slight ridicule at the expense of the very astute personages who made choice of the "Spectator," "Shakspeare," and "Rasselas," as elementary works for the study of the English language and literature. Perhaps, however, we ought to be thankful that they did not add "Chaucer" and the "Pickwick Papers" to their strangely-selected list. This is not the sort of education calculated to benefit the natives, any more than the treatises on Constitutional Government which are thrust into their hands. What is really wanted is an initiation into the sciences. The philosophy of physics will be far more useful to them than an introduction to Sir Roger de Coverley. The industrial arts might also be taught to advantage, but the laws regulating the phenomena of nature should precede all other branches of learning, though soon to be followed by the sister science of Social Philosophy. By the former they will learn to judge of their position and capabilities as created and rational beings, and by the latter their duty to their fellow-creatures: the next step must inevitably be a desire to know something of the great Creator. But, though we withhold our praise from the educational department of the late Government, we cannot assent to the unjust aspersions that have been cast upon the Court for its alleged hostility to missionary enterprise. There was a time, indeed, when any attempt to make proselytes would have occasioned our immediate expulsion from the peninsula, and in those days self-preservation forbade any countenance being afforded to well-meaning but inconsiderate zealots. No sooner, however, was our position established than all opposition to the self-denying labours of the missionaries was at once withdrawn. The Government, indeed, was still prevented by sacred treaties from allowing its own servants to go about preaching the Gospel of Christ, but it is altogether unfair to accuse it of having sanctioned idolatry, "because connivance was cheaper than intervention." Equally unjust is it to affirm that the English authorities in India have been "over-solicitous to conceal" their faith, which they "even shrouded and suppressed for fear of offending (native) prejudices." Nor is it true that idolatry was "patronised." It was tolerated in conformity with strict engagements, and all that the Government can be accused of is—abstention from exerting its power to rob temples and alienate ancient grants. As for the concealment of faith, it seems to be forgotten that there are no ostentatious ceremonies connected with the service of the Protestant churches. There are no processions in honour of the Virgin and the Saints, no pageantry on the Fête Dieu, no appearing before men to be this or that. Family prayers and public worship are, however, quite as common in India as in England, except where public worship is impossible from want of a church and a European community. Government offices are closed on the Sabbath, and all Government works suspended; and, in other respects, that day is kept far more holy than in the pious metropolis of this Protestant land. Cardinal Wiseman and the Rev. Mr. Poole might possibly succeed in drawing the attention of the natives to their ritual observances in a more marked manner than has hitherto been done; but that this would be any advantage or improvement we are not, for our part, prepared to admit.

SALT TRADE OF CHINA.—From communications received from the Foreign-office by the Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool, with reference to the admission of English salt into the ports of China, we understand that the Earl of Malmesbury purposes giving instructions to the ambassador who will be sent out to Peking from this country shortly, and whose attention will be then directed to the admission of British salt into China, as also the question of Chinese solar salt being now freely admitted at Calcutta. Some new arrangements in these matters may be anticipated.

MAJ.-GEN. HAVELOCK, the brother of the late Gen. Sir H. Havelock, is a candidate for a vacancy in the commandship of the constabulary force of the county of Lancaster.

GENERAL NICHOLSON was at dinner; he is a fine imposing-looking man, who never speaks if he can help it, which is a great gift for a public man. But if we had all been as solemn and taciturn during the last two months I do not think we should have survived. Our genial, jolly mess-dinners have kept up our spirits.—Greathead's Let ters.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ROMANISED HINDUSTANI.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—You have rendered an essential service to the English public in general, and to Hindustani pupils in particular, by pointing out, in a most erudite and convincing leader of the 19th inst., the absurdity of the proposed scheme of Romanizing the Hindustani language. As an article, headed "The Native Languages of India," which appeared in the Times of the 10th inst. in support of that most injudicious and ill-digested proposal, although evidently emanating from some inexperienced and incompetent person, may, notwithstanding, mislead those who have had no opportunity of properly considering the subject, allow me, through your columns, to make a few observations upon the article above alluded to.

Considering the unfounded assertions and gross misrepresentations contained in the above article, I am not at all surprised at the writer not having affixed his name to it. Notwithstanding, however, this attempt at concealment, always suspicious, notwithstanding this desire to shirk responsibility, there is, independently of those assertions and misstatements, sufficient internal evidence in the letter itself to show that the writer has either never been in India at all, or has visited it only for a short time, so as to enable him to pick up here and there a few crude and erroneous ideas respecting the natives and their language, which he afterwards endeavours to palm as facts upon the credulity or ignorance of his countrymen. Thus, for instance, when he says, "Now, if we were to ask where is the great difficulty of learning a native language during a residence of some twenty years—of learning, say, Hindustani, which is throughout India what French is throughout Europe—we should be glad that the difficulty lies at the very threshold of the study; it is in the alphabet." His assertion is so contrary to truth, and to the experience of every competent teacher, that I affirm upon my respectability as an Indian gentleman of considerable experience that a pupil may, with common application, master the initial, medial, and final formations within four-and-twenty hours at most, while he will be able to use his dictionary and read, unaided, printed books after a fortnight's or three weeks' instruction.

But it appears that "Hindoos and Mahomedans, Pundits and Bunyans, are unable to correspond with each other in writing or to make use of each other's books."

The truth of the above assertion will be easily appreciated when it is known, as it is to every person who has resided in India and mixed with the natives, that the mahajuns (native bankers) carry on their correspondence amongst themselves relative to business transactions involving the amount of many lakhs of rupees; that all the Mahomedans correspond with each other in Persian; that every Government record is in the Persian and Urdu language; and that the epistolary correspondence between the Pundits and the Brahmins is kept up in the character of the Sanscrit and Bhakha language with as much facility and expedition as English letters are written in this country.

Upon one point, however, some explanation is necessary, the more so as it appears to have contributed to mislead the writer of the above article. The Bunneahs, or grocers, have certainly some uncouth and barbarous characters of their own, called "mooreah;" but although different from those of the Nagari, and without vowels, their sound is precisely similar. These characters, I admit, are very difficult, even for the Bunneahs themselves to read and understand; so much so, indeed, that it is a common saying, "Likhai Bunneah bachai kartar" (grocer's writing God alone can read). The Times' correspondent is equally veracious in affirming that, "As for reading, it is well known that the natives themselves cannot read them (the current alphabets) fluently. Even the Pundits and Moonshees are continually obliged to stop for the purpose of spelling the words. A fluent reader of any of the native characters is almost unheard of." So contrary is this statement to truth, that there are at present in this country several educated natives (among whom allow me to include myself) who would most cheerfully undertake to read any Persian, Urdu, and Nagari MSS. taken promiscuously from the archives with as much facility and rapidity as you, Mr. Editor, would read a column in Allen's Indian Mail. As to India, thousands of Moonshees may there be found who, for rapidity of writing, may compete with your most practised stenographers, and this upon the very moderate salary of ten rupees per month. To dispose of the Times' correspondent's assertion, "It is impossible to write fast, in the native alphabets, without making so many blunders and omissions that the manuscript becomes an unintelligible scrawl," as well as of his experiment in support of it, I can only say that I have often made the same trial, but on every occasion with totally opposite results; as a proof of which, I would, if the above writer would appear in propria persona, come forward and undertake to write in Persian, at the dictation of a third person, any passages from Indian authors, while he penned the same in English characters, and then, handing our copies respectively to an Englishman and an Indian, let it be determined which of the two transcripts could be read with the greater facility and rapidity.

I have heard in India, from the mouths of old judges, magistrates, and commissioners, that the proceedings of the courts were written in the Persian character with great expedition, and were read with equal ease and rapidity; whereas, had they been taken down in the Roman character, a great loss of time would have been the consequence. And this is an opinion the truth of which every Indian judge of any experience will, I am sure, maintain. I have myself been frequently applied to by English functionaries to write Persian or Urdu letters for them, on which occasions, when I have requested them to note down exactly what they wished to communicate in the Roman character, they have declared it would be a considerable loss of time.

With regard to the Hindustani newspapers being printed in India in the Roman character, the Times' correspondent misrepresents facts in the most unjustifiable manner. I recollect that in 1844 and 1846 a newspaper, styled Khair Khwahi Hind (A Well-wisher of India), was got up by some missionaries at Mirzapore, but was eventually discontinued, for want of subscribers and patronage. A great many Hindoo popular works were printed in the Roman character, and numerous Indian officers tried to learn the language by means of them; but they soon found that the pronunciation they acquired was so erroneous that they could scarcely be understood when they spoke; so that, in consequence, they were compelled to have recourse to the original Persian and Nagari characters.

It has often happened that when military orders intended to be read to the troops have been translated into Hindustani and written in the Roman character, the pronunciation of the interpreter has, in consequence, been so bad that the sepoys could not understand one word he said.

The objection raised on account of the expense of obtaining books will be satisfactorily disposed of when it is known that Forbes's Dictionary, which contains seven thousand more words than Shakespeare's, is sold at the moderate price of £2.7s. 6d., while the Grammar of the same learned gentleman may be bought for 11s., and his Manual, in the Roman character, for 5s.

The greatest difficulty which besets the scheme of Romanizing Hindustani consists in the fact of there being in that language several letters, each of which differs from the others in power, articulation, aspiration, &c., and which would require, in the Romanizing alphabet, innumerable signs for the purpose of expressing their sound, or rather the approximation to it. Thus, there are two A's, three T's, two H's, three S's, two R's, five Z's, and so on.

It is notorious that persons who have been taught Hindustani in England by European teachers, find themselves, upon their arrival in India, almost wholly at a loss to express themselves so as to insure being understood by the natives. The introduction of the Romanizing alphabet would, therefore, only complicate the difficulty, by corrupting the pronunciation, and reducing it at last to nothing more than an unintelligible jargon.

Having thus refuted the Times' anonymous correspondent's gratuitous assertions, I shall leave the public to draw their own conclusions as to the value of a system which can be supported by no better means than those employed by him, and which will be found to have been brought forward for no other purpose than to benefit greedy printers, incompetent teachers, and lazy pupils.—Your most obedient humble servant,

SYED ABDULLAH,
Late Persian, Urdu, Hindee, and English
Translator, and Interpreter to the Board of Administration, Punjab.

November, 1858.

DEAR SIR,—As the topic of Romanised Hindustani is now attracting the attention of many of our Oriental scholars, and as some are apt to be grossly misled by the advocates of this system, I will take the liberty of calling the attention of your readers to a passage in a work published not long ago by Messrs. Allen, namely, "Travels in Persia and other Parts," by Mr. Binning, of the M.C.S., in which the matter at issue is, I think, fully and satisfactorily disposed of.

"One piece of arrant absurdity has of late years obtained in India, namely, the printing of books in the native languages in the Roman characters. Such books are entirely thrown away, for no native will read or look at them. The advocates of this preposterous system contend that it would greatly simplify the study of languages if all were reduced to writing in the same character. So perhaps it would, and it would simplify the matter still more if all the East agreed to adopt the English tongue, and discard their own multifarious languages, but it would hardly be reasonable to expect that they should do so. To the natives nothing can be more distasteful and unintelligible than this system. We might as well expect the English nation to adopt the plan of Chinese symbols, as that the Hindoos should take to this Romanised print.

"Our Roman alphabet is, moreover, badly chosen for the purpose, as it is a very defective one, and by no means competent to the expression of an Eastern language, which contains many sounds unknown in English.

"As for simplifying the study of Eastern tongues by such means, I suspect that the learner who will not take the trouble to acquire the alphabet of an Asiatic language is not likely to make satisfactory progress in any other direction. The upholders of the Romanising system may perhaps compel a few native boys in their schools to read their mother tongue in this queer disguise, but there is little hope that any one else will look at their books."—Vol. II., page 388.

In the above I heartily concur, after ample experience, and I think every unbiased person who really understands the subject will agree with me.—I am, yours, &c., A BENGALER.

A PAPER MONEY FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—When we consider what difficulty the natives have in raising the silver rupees in which to pay the taxes of Government, it may be proper to discuss whether a paper money could not be devised which the Indian Government might themselves issue, and which they would religiously and faithfully receive back again in payment of taxes at par, or at the same value as that in which they were issued. These would, in fact, be an issue of small exchequer bills of two shillings each. The troops might be paid in the same paper; and it is no more likely that these notes could ever be at a discount than Pitt's one-pound notes. There might be a premium on them, but they, being legal tender, could not be at a discount. It seems a most cruel thing to levy taxation on a population in silver, which they have not simply because it is not in existence in sufficient quantities, making them not only subject to taxation to the State, but also to taxation to the sophist, or native money-dealer, in the shape of usury. The inconvenience of carrying so much treasure was exemplified by the looting of treasuries in the late revolt; and an Indian officer assured the writer that our troops are seriously tried in escorting the large sums in so weighty a metal as silver to the army's head-quarters.

Sir Charles Napier in Scinde found it so impossible to demand taxation in silver, of which the Scindians had very small store, that he levied taxation in kind, in corn, and whatever produce they grew.—J. H.

A STAFF CORPS FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Perhaps the following remarks on the question of a Staff Corps in India may be worthy of insertion:—

1st. If officers in non-military appointments, such as civil employ, commissariat, stud, &c., are retained on the strength of their regiments, regimental officers will naturally feel discontented, and the efficiency of the army will be impaired.

2nd. If, on the other hand, such officers, who on treble pay have plenty of work, are remanded to their regiments on reduced allowances, with nothing to do, the majority of them will feel discontented, and the efficiency of the army will be impaired.

3rd. The only remedy is to constitute a staff corps, and give all officers in non-military appointments the option of joining it or of returning to their regiments.

By doing this, regimental and staff officers would be equally satisfied—the service would be benefited, and Government would be gainers.—Yours,

IGNOTUS.

THE GARRISON OF LUCKNOW.

After the cloth had been removed General Inglis rose and spoke as follows:—"Comrades and friends, we have met here to night to commemorate the events of the past in a perfectly private manner, but there is one toast, and the only one, which I must call on you to drink in solemn silence before we part—"The Memory of Henry Lawrence," but for whom every man here would also be sleeping in a bloody grave; with "The Memory of Henry Havelock," who, in the emphatic language of Scripture, "laid down his life for his friends;" and "The Memory of all the honoured Brave who fell beside us in the Defence of Lucknow." In solemn silence, all standing, comrades and friends.

When the silence occasioned by this affecting appeal had been somewhat broken, the gallant General again rose and said:—"Comrades and friends, I have received the thanks of Parliament; I have been invested with the insignia of the Bath by the gracious hand of her Majesty; I have received the thanks of the Government of India; I have received the thanks of the Government of Nova Scotia, my native country, and have been presented with a sword by that body. All these great honours and distinctions I owe to no merit of my own; I owe them all to the matchless courage and endurance of those I see around me, and not to them only, but to our surviving comrades now serving in the East, and to those who fell in the struggle. I have brought the sword with me to-night in the thought that those who earned it for me might like to see the trophy. And for this and for all my honours I thank you from my heart, my friends and comrades. (The gallant General, who appeared powerfully affected, then sat down amid the rapturous applause of his auditors.)

After the cheering had in some measure subsided, Major Dinning, the senior military officer present, rose and said:—"On the part of the garrison I feel bound to disclaim the merit which General Inglis, with that rare self-abnegation which always characterised him, attributes to them, and not to himself. Every man here knows that to the incessant and untiring personal supervision of General Inglis is to be attributed the final success of the defence; and to him, therefore, as much as to any other man he has named, those present are indebted for their lives. I therefore call upon you all to drink the health of our gallant commander, with three times three.

The toast was drunk with the utmost enthusiasm, and General Inglis having briefly responded, the meeting terminated. We understand that the gallant General returns to the East by the steamer of the 4th of December.

THE NORTH OF INDIA TRAMROAD

The directors of this company have just issued their first report. Late events in India have as yet prevented the authorities from coming to an immediate decision on the proposals of the company, which embrace not only the extension throughout Rohilkund and the adjacent territories of such a graduated system of railways, constructed of native iron, and in connection with the iron districts of Kumaon and Gurhwal, as is best adapted for the wants of each district, and most capable of developing its traffic, but also the filling up of the gap in railway communication between Lahore, the north eastern terminus of the Punjab Railway, and Delhi, or Meerut, whichever should be eventually selected as the North-western terminus of the East Indian Railway. Both proposals have been submitted to the consideration of the Governor-General of India, whose reply to the Secretary of State for India in Council may shortly be expected. Letters received from India speak in the highest terms of the value of the scheme, both in a military and commercial point of view. It is proposed to construct the lines of native iron, by which plan alone it is contended in the report that railways can be made in India on the extensive scale demanded by the requirements of the country. The distant cotton fields can be reached, and the cost of the transport of cotton effectually reduced only by long and cheap railways, and the directors, therefore, congratulate the shareholders on the fact that the sanguine expectations as to the production of native iron in the districts of Kumaon and Gurhwal, entertained when the prospectus of the company was issued, have already been realised to a great extent, and that there is no longer any reason to doubt that a sufficient supply of every kind of iron required for railway purposes can be furnished from the native ore at a price much below the present cost of transit to Upper India. Along with the report is printed the correspondence between the chairman of the company, Mr. W. P. Andrew, and the home and Indian authorities; but at present, before sanctioning the proposals of the company, the Secretary of State for India awaits the reply of the Indian authorities to a reference made to them upon the different schemes for railways in Rohilcund.

APPOINTMENT, CEYLON.—The Queen has appointed Major H. C. Bird to be a member of the Legislative Council of the island of Ceylon.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY have notified that the following payments will be recommended at their approaching annual meeting:—A dividend for the half-year at the rate of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., an additional payment at the rate of 1 per cent., and a payment at the rate of 2 per cent. on the proprietors' underwriting account, making, with the  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. dividend at the half-yearly meeting, 11 per cent. for the year.

A NEW HYDRAULIC INVENTION.—Captain Kingsley, H. P. 3rd Dragoons, has submitted to the Indian Government an invention by which he shows that the present steam engine and its fuel may be superseded to a certain extent. An excavation is made in the solid earth adjacent to the mill-dam at the head or current of the river. The vessel consists of brick-work instead of iron, its dome or cover being arched as might effectually resist the weight of the external atmosphere; the whole being made air-tight. Any person may conceive an inverted syphon; the extremity of the short leg may be inserted in the lower region of the receiver; the long leg is provided with a rod and piston. The rod is attached to the wheel in the usual mode. On the sluice being raised, the wheel is impelled by the water. By these means, the dense air of the atmosphere may be withdrawn from the receiver, on a principle similar to that of the air-pump. An air-tube is projected from the river to the railway; one extremity is inserted in the dome of the receiver; the other extremity being fixed in the main tube. Should the railway be situated at the distance of ten miles from the river, the tube must adopt that or other supposititious measurement. This tube is the invention; and by its means the steam-engine may be superseded. The water of a river, aided by a moderate fall, constitutes the motive power of Captain Kingsley's plan; and he points out that the magnificent rivers abounding in India are peculiarly applicable to his invention.

BOOKS.

The Night, the Dawn, and the Day. By the Rev. Richard Croly, M.A. London: James Nisbet and Co.

We have seldom met with a work imbued with such a thoroughly sectarian spirit as Mr. Croly's effusion on the "Reformed Church bringing India to Christ." That the result of the scheme he advocates with such narrow-minded zeal would not be to Christianise India, but to cause the loss of that empire to England, will be the unanimous opinion of all who possess the slightest possible knowledge of the native character. Mr. Croly deprecates the "unpromising and grievous reply" returned by Lord Stanley to the deputation from various Christian communities in England, "entreating a recognition of the Gospel by the Government of India," but his lordship was evidently better acquainted with the real merits of the question than the Incumbent of Dunkeswell happens to be. We sincerely trust that this bigoted and presumptuous little volume may not be the forerunner of others as ignorant and mischievous, for nothing will tend so much to keep alive the suspicions already entertained by the natives as the fact of such appeals being made by the clergy to the weak-minded portion of the British public, who are willing to compound for the weightier matters of the Law by regular offerings of mint, aniseed, and cummin.

England and India. By Baptist Wriothsley Noel, M.A. London: James Nisbet and Co.

Never was there a more unequal work than the bulky volume laboriously compiled by Mr. Noel, to prove that the East-India Company did all they could do to promote the diffusion of Christianity throughout Hindostan, and that consequently they ought to have done more. That really is the substance of his long argumentations. He knocks them down with one hand that he may pick them up with the other, or, rather, perhaps, he sets them up in order to knock them down. He appears to attach equal weight to all writers on the subject of the Indian mutinies, however antagonistic may be their views. Entirely ignorant himself of the question he proposes for discussion, he drifts to and fro at the mercy of the winds and waves, and is more fearful at the sight of land under his lee than of the open and stormy ocean. All sorts of refuted mis-statements are revived and undoubtedly adopted. Nana Sahib, for instance, is represented as a man of cultivated intellect and imbued with English literature, if not with European civilisation. Again, the convert sepoy of 1819 is still spoken of as a martyr to his faith, and a disgrace to the English rulers. Mr. Noel, besides, reproaches the East-India Company with having looked coldly upon the zeal and enterprise of missionaries at the close of the last century, and seems to imagine that their position in India was so secure as to sanction experiments of that perilous nature. He evidently forgets that Hindostan is not a conquered country, in the sense that England was conquered by the Normans. He does not choose to remember that we gained wider territories by treaty than actually by feats of arms, and that in strict honour we are still bound by the engagements we were then so ready to undertake. He acknowledges that of late years no open or direct encouragement has been given to idolatrous creeds and ceremonies, but with the same breath demands why the same spirit of antagonism has not been exhibited in India as in Ceylon—as if there could be any possible analogy between the two cases. Mr. Noel further inveighs against the assumed repugnance of the directors to sanction missionary exertions, but conveniently overlooks the fact that missionaries of every religion enjoyed equal protection, equal opportunities—and that is all that is demanded even in this country by persons who hold his extreme opinions. On other points Mr. Noel is just and impartial, and far more moderate than could be expected from the tone and tenor of his ordinary writings.

Creoles and Coolies; or, Five Years in Mauritius. By the Rev. Patrick Beaton, M.A. London: James Nisbet and Co.

The special character of the Indian Mail prevents us from rendering full justice to this very amusing and interesting work. Mr. Beaton describes in a lively and popular manner the habits, customs, and peculiarities of the mixed population of the Mauritius, and mingles the grave and the gay in such excellent proportions that it is difficult to determine whether his book is more instructive or entertaining. That portion of it, however, which alludes to the condition of the Coolies imported from India alone falls within the legitimate province of this journal. Judging from the economical point of view, the Coolie emigration has been attended with immense advantages, and so far as this island is concerned the experiment has proved incontestably the superiority of free labour to that of slaves. The poor immigrants themselves do not appear to derive so much benefit from their enterprise and toil as they are entitled to expect. From their ignorance of the Creole jargon they are liable to injustice and imposition, and the planters seem to be only too ready to avail themselves of every opportunity to overreach their ignorant and helpless servants. On the other hand, it is gratifying to learn that the seed of a purer faith has germinated under circumstances that give hope of a bounteous harvest, if labourers be found in sufficient numbers to put forth their hand to the good work. The task of conversion is all the more easy that there are few preconceived notions to eradicate, and these by no means inveterate. After a very brief residence in the island, Hindoos and Mahomedans fraternise in the most amiable manner, and participate in one another's religious ceremonies. Thus at the annual festival of the Mohurrim, here called Yamsheh—from a corruption of the cry "Ya, Hosein!" uttered by the worshippers—it would be impossible to distinguish between the followers of Brahma and those of the Arabian Prophet. The procession of the Taziah, or Gouhn, as it is here designated, is admirably depicted by Mr. Beaton; but for that and for many other matters of equal interest, we must refer our readers to his very readable volume on the brightest gem of the Indian seas.

Why is the English Rule Odious to the Natives of India? By Major W. Martin. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co.

It is impossible to deny that the question asked by Major Martin is a momentous one, but he himself does not appear to have undertaken to answer it. His pamphlet chiefly consists of extracts from the Hon. Frederick Shore's "Notes on Indian Affairs," tending to prove that the English rule was unpopular a quarter of a century ago, and that the critical position we occupy in India was thoroughly understood at that time. Some of these extracts, indeed, are almost prophetic, but they certainly do not explain why the Government should be odious to the mass of the people—probably for this reason, that it is not so. Major Martin, like a genuine Englishman, seems to take pleasure in pointing out the shortcomings of his countrymen in the East, but we appeal from his judgment to the frank and eulogistic appreciation of the administration of the East-India Company in the now famous essay of the Count de Montalembert.

"Undoubtedly," observes that eloquent writer, "it (the Company) has committed more than one fault, and, perhaps, more than one crime. It has certainly not done all the good it might have done. But I maintain without hesitation that the East-India Company, now defunct by virtue of the Act of the 2nd August, 1858, is, of all the colonial governments known in history, in the ancient or modern world, that which has achieved the greatest results with the smallest means, and that which, in an equal space of time, has done the least harm and the greatest good to the peoples subject to its sway. I maintain that it has delivered the Indian population from a yoke generally oppressive, to place them under a system incomparably more mild and equitable, though still very imperfect. It has devoted to the amelioration of the conquered race not all the efforts which it certainly ought and could have made, and which the English themselves were constantly demanding, but a hundred times more solicitude and earnest anxiety than any of the native rulers whose place it has taken, or than European nations invested by conquest with an analogous mission."

Letters Written during the Siege of Delhi. By H. H. Greathed, Esq., B.C.S. Edited by his Widow. London: Longman and Co.

Although the siege of Delhi has already passed into the province of history, these letters exhibit as much freshness and vivacity as if they related to the events of the past week. They are evidently what they profess to be, the unreserved communications of a high-spirited English gentleman to an intelligent and sympathetic wife. A more lively and graphic transcript of camp life, under the most unfavourable circumstances, will scarcely be found within the wide range of Anglo-Saxon literature. Invested with most responsible and important duties, the writer is never betrayed into anything approaching to assumption, or an exalted notion of his own dignity. On the contrary, there is an exquisite playfulness in his style, combined with a tenderness and depth of tone, which speak volumes in favour of his gentleness and amiability of disposition. There is something very touching, too, in the singleness and warmth of the attachment which bound together the three brothers brought together by the stern summons of duty under the walls of Delhi. All three greatly distinguished themselves, and deserved right well of their country. It cannot yet be forgotten how Colonel Greathed hung on the rear of a large body of rebels fleeing from the captured city, and again and again defeated them with heavy slaughter. It may be less generally known how eminent were the services of Lieut. Wilberforce Greathed, of the Engineers; but those who witnessed his gallantry and the proofs of his professional skill are unanimous in according to him the highest possible praise. Of Mr. Greathed, the Lieut.-Governor's Political Agent with the army of Delhi, it is impossible to speak in too eulogistic terms. His own letters, indeed, fail altogether to do him justice; for either he wisely abstained from alluding to official matters in his correspondence with his wife, or else that lady has exercised an exemplary discretion in eliminating every line that ought not fairly to be laid before the public. Enough remains, however, to gratify all rational curiosity, and few will lay down the volume until they have perused it to the last line. Very sad and suggestive is the conclusion. On the 18th Mr. Greathed wrote in his usual spirits, rejoicing over the fall of Delhi, though sorrowing for many brave men suddenly snatched away from the joys and duties of life. On the morrow his own career was closed, and his body committed to the earth, almost side by side with the heroic Nicholson. Peace be with him! His letters represent him with such life-like fidelity, that the reader mourns over his untimely death as if he had been an old and much-valued friend.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

UNDERSTANDING that FOUR VACANCIES have occurred in the direction of your affairs by the disqualification of Messrs. MILLS, M. T. SMITH, MACNAGHTEN, and MANGLES, lately elected to the Council of India, I take the liberty to offer myself to your notice to fill one of the above vacancies.

I trust that my long connection with India, and the interest I have always felt in its good government, will warrant my soliciting your support on THURSDAY, 9th DECEMBER, the day fixed for the Election, from Twelve to Six.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

Halleybury, Herts.,
27th November, 1858.

I. W. J. OUSELEY.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

FOUR of your late Directors having disqualified, and the COURT of DIRECTORS having announced that these Vacancies will be filled up in the usual manner, on THURSDAY, the 9th DECEMBER, I beg to offer myself as a Candidate to fill one of them.

In soliciting your suffrages on this occasion, I may add that I was a Candidate for a seat in your Direction some years since, and but for the change which took place in the system of government in 1854, would probably, from the encouragement I then received, have long before this obtained my object.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

DUNCAN SIM,

Major-General Madras Engineers.

11, Craven-hill, Hyde-park, London,
27th November, 1858.

122, Westbourne-terrace,
27th November, 1858.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

I BEG to offer myself respectfully to your notice as a Candidate to fill ONE of the FOUR VACANCIES now declared in your Direction.

For several years prior to the new organisation of the Indian Home Government, I had solicited your favourable consideration, and from the support which I received from you in the course of my canvass, I may venture to express my conviction that had the Constitution of the Court continued as before the more recent change, my labours would ere this have been crowned with success. If selected by your favour for the position which I now solicit, I shall endeavour to prove myself worthy of your confidence by devoting myself to the duties of the office, however diminished in its importance, and conducting them in such a manner as may be most beneficial to your interest.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

L. R. REID.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

FOUR VACANCIES having occurred in the Direction of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY by the retirement of CHARLES MILLS, Esq., MARTIN TUCKER SMITH, Esq., ELLIOT MACNAGHTEN, Esq., and ROSS DONNELLY MANGLES, Esq., and your Directors having notified that such Vacancies will be filled up at a GENERAL COURT to be held at the East-India-house, on THURSDAY, the 9th DECEMBER, between the hours of Twelve and Six, for the Election of FOUR DIRECTORS in the room of the above-named Gentlemen,

I beg leave to state that I have been encouraged by some very influential members of your body to come forward on the present occasion, and accordingly as a Proprietor of long standing who has paid considerable attention to the Company's affairs, I respectfully offer myself as a Candidate for the honour of filling One of these Vacancies, assuring you that if elected to the office of Director of your Honourable Company I shall always be ready to maintain your rights and promote your interests to the best of my ability.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your very obedient servant,

THOMAS WILLIAMS HELPS.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE curtain has descended, the lights are out, the actors who have so long graced the boards have finally retired from the stage. The same drama, however, must again be performed, and we shall be greatly mistaken if the old conventionalisms be not maintained and repeated. By the Bombay Mail of the 9th November we learn that the great act of spoliation has at length been consummated, and that on the first day of that month the extinction of the East India Company as a governing body was publicly notified to the peoples of Hindostan. The terms of the Royal Proclamation are liberal and full of promise, and breathe throughout a spirit of conciliation. No radical changes, indeed, are to be introduced in the existing establishments, for the additional title of viceroy bestowed on the Governor-General amounts to nothing more than an idle waste of words. It is more important that the native princes are assured that all existing treaties and engagements will be scrupulously fulfilled, and their independence respected and upheld. It is also gratifying to perceive that the iniquitous practice of "Resumptions" has received its death blow, and that more regard will henceforth be shown to native usages and customs in questions relating to the possession of land. Perfect toleration is likewise secured to every creed, and Christians, Mahomedans, and Hindoos are to be treated according to their individual merits, and not with respect to their religious professions. An amnesty is likewise offered to all who return to their allegiance by the 1st of January, provided their hands have not been imbrued in Christian blood. Such is the general tenor of the Proclamation which on the 1st of November was read aloud in every great city and military station in our Indian empire. The artillery thundered forth, the assembled thousands rent the air with noisy acclamations, the troops were paraded, and cheered when told to cheer, public and private buildings were illuminated, banquets were spread, and loyal toasts proposed with due declamation; and thus the Company's beneficent Raj was brought to a conclusion, after a century of marvellous and triumphant progress.

The military intelligence brought by this mail is highly satisfactory, so far as it goes, though it relates chiefly to a series of successful skirmishes. A repulse, indeed, had been sustained before a wretched fort in Oude, by which one hundred European soldiers were put hors de combat. The place was finally captured, but no excuse can be made for the blundering temerity that rendered failure possible.

In Central India Gen. Michel continues to pursue his victorious career, and it is reported that Tantia Topee has offered to surrender if his life be guaranteed. Though a rebel, he has displayed such persistent daring under constant disasters that we trust his petition will be granted, if only to inaugurate Her Majesty's immediate government of her Indian possessions.

If the Indian papers are correctly informed, there is some probability of Lord Clyde's early resignation of the chief command; Sir W. R. Mansfield being mentioned as his lordship's successor. The retirement of Sir John Lawrence from the administration of the Punjab likewise gives rise to several contradictory statements, each on the "best authority." Colonel Edwards, Mr. Edmonstone, and Mr. Montgomery, have each their advocates, and no doubt are all eligible for that high and responsible appointment.

The "Official Gazette," it will be seen, contains the postings of 156 ensigns to European and native regiments on the Bengal establishment.

Under the new régime the hours of attendance at the India-house now extend from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. on every day except Saturday, when office work ceases at two o'clock. There is, however, an important and rather frequent exception to this general rule. Lord Stanley himself often remains at his post till past six, and on those occasions it is naturally required that each department shall be adequately represented.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

Gwalior, 21st Oct.

The following just received from General Michel: "The rebels, about 10,000, have been utterly defeated to-day, 19th Oct., by the force under my command at Sindwa. They desired to penetrate to the east, but were pursued close to Bampoor. They will immediately make for Tal-Behut. We took all their guns (4). They fought fiercely.

Gwalior, 23rd Oct.

Received the following from General Michel: "Tantia Topee left Lullutpore on the 16th inst., and making a flank march eastward, arrived at Sindwa on the 18th, thinking General Michel was marching on Lullutpore; but the General, hearing during the night of his move, marched ten miles from Narhut, north of Multaon, and surprised the enemy at 9 A.M. this morning. They stood well for an hour, but were then utterly beaten and dispersed, losing four guns and about 400 killed. The pursuit was continued for nine miles, the force having been for ten hours under arms. Tantia Topee has fled to Bampoor, and will probably be at Tal Behut to-morrow. General Michel's loss in the action of yesterday—H.M.'s 8th Hussars, killed, 2 privates; wounded, Major Chetwode slightly, Lieut. Harding dangerously, 5 privates, 10 horses; missing, 6 horses. From Kurrai, 25th Oct., 1858, via Indore, Wednesday, 3rd Nov., 8 20 P.M.

From General Michel, to Lord Elphinstone and Commander-in-Chief.

The rebel army was surprised on its march by the Mhow column under my command, at Kurrai, as day dawned on the 25th October. The principal chiefs had passed with the greater part of the force towards Basoda. Three thousand were utterly dispersed, throwing away their arms in their pursuit, for nine miles towards the neighbourhood of Kimlassa. The column has marched sixty-two miles in sixty hours, besides the fatigue of pursuit across country. The number of killed on the side of the enemy was upwards of three hundred. No loss on our side.

From Allahabad, 30th Oct.

From G. F. Edmonstone, to H. L. Anderson. Information from Sir R. Napier has just reached us, that on the 25th General Michel intercepted the rebels of Rao's army, about two thousand strong, at Kurrai; they were entirely routed, threw away their arms, and were driven, some to Kimlassa, and the greater part towards Basoda. The general was about to march to Bagrode, about thirty-six miles west of Saugor. Captain Pinkney reports from Jhamsic, under date the 27th, that Tantia Topee, with his able-bodied men, had crossed the Betwa somewhere near Achelong, and is making to the west. Sick, wounded, &c., left in Achaul Bundell. The rebels of the Chundaree district are said to be rather broken up. Colonel Liddell was at Beerput, fifteen miles north-west from Telree, and General Michel was on the march from Chutterpore to Rooot.

Service Message from Commissioner of Patna, dated 23rd Oct., 1858.

The rebels have turned from Koonch, and a party of them made an attempt to enter the jungles, but were repulsed by the troops stationed there. It is now said to be their intention to remain, if they can, in Bhajpore.

Service Message from Commissioner of Patna, dated 24th Oct., 9.30 A.M.

Brigadier Douglas came up with the rebels at Minchoolee in the dusk of the evening, but they fled so rapidly that their loss did not amount to above thirty killed. From Minchoolee (west of Peroo) they fled north, then turned east, then south, and finally went off in a south-west direction. A party of them crossed the Trunk-road Koorkinabad, and made their way to the hills by Chundalie. This party, however, appears to be small. Brigadier Douglas is pursuing the main body most vigorously.

The following intelligence is supplied from Lucknow, dated 23rd Oct.:—

The civil officer at Jhubrowlie reports that five thousand rebels and four guns attacked them this morning. The rebels were repulsed, losing about one hundred and fifty killed, and all their guns. Our cavalry pursued for six miles. Lieutenant Mitford, of Hodson's horse, wounded. Our loss trifling, none killed.

Mr. Cole, with Colonel Turner's column at Jehanabad, writes, dated the 23rd Oct., half-past one afternoon:—A party of rebels, number not mentioned, crossed the Grand Trunk Road last night at Khoormabad, passed near Tilwanee Factory, plundered one or two Bunnahs at Chundaree, and pushed on to the hills. Their number not believed to be large. No further news of Ummer Sing's column obtained.

Mr. Cole writes from Jehanabad, 23rd Oct.: The main body of the rebels crossed the Grand Trunk Road in two columns between this and Sewagor this afternoon. They are supposed to be making for the hills by the Sheoghur pass.

BENGAL.

THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION.

"VICTORIA, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Colonies and Dependencies thereof in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australasia, Queen, Defender of the Faith.

"Whereas, for divers weighty reasons, we have resolved, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, to take upon ourselves the government of the territories in India, heretofore administered in trust for us by the Honourable East India Company:

"Now, therefore, we do by these presents notify and declare that, by the advice and consent aforesaid, we have taken upon ourselves the said government, and we hereby call upon all our subjects within the said territories to be faithful and to bear true allegiance to us, our heirs and successors, and to submit themselves to the authority of those whom we may hereafter from time to time see fit to appoint to administer the government of our said territories in our name and on our behalf.

"And we, reposing especial trust and confidence in the loyalty, ability, and judgment of our right trusty and well-beloved cousin and councillor, Charles John Viscount Canning, do hereby constitute and appoint him, the said Viscount Canning, to be our first Viceroy and Governor-General in and over our said territories, and to administer the government thereof in our name, and generally to act in our name and on our behalf, subject to such orders and regulations as he shall from time to time receive from us through one of our principal Secretaries of State.

"And we do hereby confirm in their several offices, civil and military, all persons now employed in the service of the Hon. East India Company, subject to our future pleasure, and to such laws and regulations as may hereafter be enacted.

"We hereby announce to the native princes of India that all treaties and engagements made with them by or under the authority of the Honourable East India Company are by us accepted, and will be scrupulously maintained; and we look for the like observance on their part.

"We desire no extension of our present territorial possessions; and while we will permit no aggression upon our dominions or our rights to be attempted with impunity, we shall sanction no encroachment on those of others. We shall respect the rights, dignity, and honour of native princes as our own; and we desire that they, as well as our own subjects, should enjoy that prosperity and that social advancement which can only be secured by internal peace and good government.

"We hold ourselves bound to the natives of our Indian territories by the same obligations of duty which bind us to all our other subjects: and those obligations, by the blessings of Almighty God, we shall faithfully and conscientiously fulfil.

"Firmly relying ourselves on the truth of Christianity, and acknowledging with gratitude the solace of religion, we disclaim alike the right and the desire to impose our convictions on any of our subjects. We declare it to be our Royal will and pleasure that none be in anywise favoured, none molested or disquieted, by reason of their religious faith or observances, but that all shall alike enjoy the equal and impartial protection of the law; and we do strictly charge and enjoin all those who may be in authority under us that they abstain from all interference with the religious belief or worship of any of our subjects, on pain of our highest displeasure.

"And it is our further will that, so far as may be, our subjects, of whatever race or creed, be freely and impartially admitted to offices in our service, the duties of which they may be qualified, by their education, ability, and integrity, duly to discharge.

"We know and respect the feelings of attachment with which the natives of India regard the lands inherited by them from their ancestors, and we desire to protect them in all rights connected therewith, subject to the equitable demands of the State; and we will that, generally, in framing and administering the law, due regard be paid to the ancient rights, usages, and customs of India.

"We deeply lament the evils and misery which have been brought upon India by the acts of ambitious men, who have deceived their countrymen by false reports and led them into open rebellion. Our power has been shown by the suppression of that rebellion in the field; we desire to show our mercy by pardoning the offences of those who have thus been misled, but who desire to return to the path of duty.

"Already in one province, with a view to stop the further effusion of blood, and to hasten the pacification of our Indian dominions, our Viceroy and Governor-General has held out the expectation of pardon, on certain terms, to the great majority of those who in the late unhappy disturbances have been guilty of offences against our Government, and has declared the punishment which will be inflicted on those whose crimes place them beyond the reach of forgiveness. We approve and confirm the said act of our Viceroy and Governor-General, and do further announce and proclaim as follows:—

"Our clemency will be extended to all offenders, save and except those who have been or shall be convicted of having directly taken part in the murder of British subjects. With regard to such, the demands of justice forbid the exercise of mercy.

"To those who have willingly given asylum to murderers, knowing them to be such, or who may have acted as leaders or instigators in revolt, their lives alone can be guaranteed; but, in apportioning the penalty due to such persons full consideration will be given to the circumstances under which they have been induced to throw off their allegiance, and large indulgence will be shown to those whose crimes may appear to have originated in a too credulous acceptance of the false reports circulated by designing men.

"To all others in arms against the Government we hereby promise unconditional pardon, amnesty, and oblivion of all offences against ourselves, our Crown and dignity on their return to their homes and peaceful pursuits.

"It is our Royal pleasure that these terms of grace and amnesty should be extended to all those who comply with their conditions before the 1st day of January next.

"When, by the blessing of Providence, internal tranquillity shall be restored, it is our earnest desire to stimulate the peaceful industry of India, to promote works of public utility and improvement, and to administer its government for the benefit of all our subjects resident therein. In their prosperity will be our strength, in their contentment our security, and in their gratitude our best reward. And may the God of all power grant to us, and to those in authority under us, strength to carry out these our wishes for the good of our people."

"PROCLAMATION.

"BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

"FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

"Allahabad, Nov. 1, 1858.

"Her Majesty the Queen having declared that it is her gracious pleasure to take upon herself the government of the British territories in India, the Viceroy and Governor-General hereby notifies that from this day all acts of the Government of India will be done in the name of the Queen alone.

"From this day all men of every race and class who, under the administration of the Honourable East India Company, have joined to uphold the honour and power of England, will be the servants of the Queen alone.

"The Governor-General summons them, one and all, each in his degree, and according to his opportunity, and with his whole heart and strength, to aid in fulfilling the gracious will and pleasure of the Queen, as set forth in her royal proclamation.

"From the many millions of her Majesty's native subjects in India the Governor-General will now, and at all times, exact a loyal obedience to the call which, in words full of benevolence and mercy, their Sovereign has made upon their allegiance and faithfulness.

"By order of the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India,

"G. F. EDMONSTONE,

"Secretary to the Government of India, with the Governor-General."

"Firmly assured as we are that the great principles of moderation, impartiality, and justice, characteristic of your Majesty's government in all parts of the British empire, will henceforth, as ever, be scrupulously recognised, we venture to offer to your Majesty our humble and hearty congratulations on the assumption of your Royal supremacy over this vast country; and we beg leave at the same time to express our cordial hope that the important change of administration which has thus been inaugurated, may have the effect of placing your Majesty's rule in India on a basis still more secure than that upon which it has rested for so many years.

ADDRESS FROM THE BOMBAY ASSOCIATION.

"TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, the undersigned, presidents and members of the Bombay Association, being your Majesty's faithful Hindoo, Mahomedan, and Parsee subjects, natives of the Bombay presidency, duly impressed with the importance of the recent change effected in the government of British India, whereby your Majesty has assumed the government of the territories in India, heretofore administered by the Honourable East India Company, beg, as dutiful subjects, to avail ourselves of the present auspicious occasion, to convey to your Majesty, with sentiments of the deepest humility, the expression of our sincere allegiance, warm attachment, and dutiful devotion.

"Fully impressed as we are with the conviction that the due exercise and strict observance of the same principles of moderation, impartiality, justice, liberality, and toleration will mark your Majesty's Government of the Indian Empire, as have heretofore characterised your Majesty's Government in every other part of your Majesty's dominions, and animated as we are with lively feelings of gratitude and joy, we hail with unfeigned delight the auspicious change of administration, and beg respectfully to tender to your Majesty the humble tribute of our hearty congratulations on your Majesty's assumption of your Royal supremacy over this vast empire, firmly hoping, as we do, that the important change of administration which has thus been inaugurated may tend to establish your Majesty's rule on a firm and lasting basis, and secure the happiness of your Majesty's Indian subjects.

"With sincere and earnest prayers for the welfare of your Majesty, of the Prince, your illustrious Consort, and of your royal family, as well as for the speedy restoration of peace and tranquillity in the disturbed provinces of British India, and for a long continuance of peace and prosperity in your Majesty's dominions,

THE BHOWANIPORE AND DULLUNDA LUNATIC ASYLUMS.

The Bhowanipore Asylum is intended only for Europeans and East Indians, the Dullunda for natives.

We arrived at the former a little before seven o'clock in the morning, and accompanied the superintendent in his usual tour, attended by his staff of subordinate officers. The gate through which we entered faces the west, and we first inspected the western and southern wards. The former were at the time quite empty, the inmates having proceeded to the other parts of the premises; but the southern wards were fully tenanted, the patients being either seated in the wards themselves, or in the verandah which runs down their whole length, and into which all the wards open, or else were walking about the verandah. As we came amongst them there was a glance of recognition. They all seemed to know Dr. Cantor, and he addressed to each a word or two of inquiry as to his health or his wants, a word or two of encouragement, or of gentle though firm remonstrance, as the case might be, just saying in each case what seemed to us most suitable and most applicable. To one who had been violent, and was confined in his cell, the question was put whether he was sorry for what he had done, and would express his regret? He gave an evasive answer, and was left alone for the present. Another, who was suffering from melancholia, and who had resolved to starve himself to death, was reminded of the promise he had made to the superintendent to eat his meals, and was warned that if he did not eat his breakfast he should be compelled to eat two breakfasts, and so with the other meals. This appeared to be the most serious punishment to this particular patient, and he begged hard to be forgiven.

Passing on, we came upon the garden, where the female patients were taking their morning exercise, under the charge of the matron, Mrs. Wilson. Some of the women seemed very quiet and orderly; others had a wild look, and a separate attendant at their backs, following them wherever they went. These patients occupy two sets of wards on the lower floor, which open out on either side of a piece of ground, and a range of wards on the upper floor. Some were engaged in reading books, and others in needle-work and worsted-work, which they appeared to execute with great neatness. The best specimens of work were shown by an Englishwoman, whilst the East Indians invariably seemed to think such labour as degrading and only suitable for the tailor.

Returning to the garden, which is very nicely kept, we entered the main building, the house, which is situated in the centre of the grounds, and came upon other male patients. Here all seemed quiet and tractable, though each had his particular hallucination. One, who was seventy-five years of age, supposed that he was the king, wore a scarlet cap with a gold band, was very careful not to let his sacred person be touched by inferior mortals, and would only answer when addressed as the King or his Majesty. Another considered that he had been sent out by the Court of Directors of the East India Company, to receive the first good appointment that might become vacant, that he had the power of knowing what passed in the heavens, and had lately seen in the clouds Jacob on his visit to Laban pass in procession with a long line of camels; others had their different little fancies, perfectly harmless in themselves. We also saw two patients who were quite convalescent and expected soon to be discharged—they wore, poor fellows, a look of deep humility, mingled, too, with thankfulness at having passed through a great trial. As if they felt that God in his great mercy had allowed them to return to the world, had once more seated Reason on her throne, had once more given them a fair chance of life.

Having surveyed the house, the grounds and all the wards, which are kept in a clean and tidy manner, we tasted the milk fresh from the cow, and examined the provisions which had just been brought from the market for the consumption of the lunatics, and there was nothing to find fault with. The patients are divided into two classes, corresponding as nearly as possible to their station in life before they were admitted into the hospital, and they are fed and clothed (not as regards the quantity but the quality) in relative proportions, but otherwise they are all treated alike.

Every inducement is held out to Reason to resume her sway, for the mind to recover its natural powers, and the success which has attended some of the celebrated asylums in Europe in resuscitating dormant sympathies has fully established the practicability of such curative measures. Dr. Cantor has not only effected a great saving both to Government and the public in his administration of the affairs of the Bhowanipore Asylum, but as far as such a thing can be done, he has, by his uniform kindness, won the confidence of the lunatics. His morning visit seemed to be looked forward to with pleasure; each woke up, as it were, for the moment out of his dream or his fancy, and all appeared pleased with the notice he took of them. The Bhowanipore Asylum contains at present about sixty-one patients, perhaps one-third of which are females, and as accessions are gradually made to the number, the convalescent are from time to time sent to England.

Let us now turn to the Dullunda Asylum. The gateway looks to the north, faces the race-course, and is close to the iron bridge yard. Driving round the grand road we come up to a small pukka building, used, we suppose, as the residence of the European overseer; and passing through a passage where the winter-clothing of the patients was stored up—blankets from the Gya district—we arrived at the back of the building, and on a large square yard, where some of the lunatics were engaged in cleaning the jute fibre, and in the preparation of twine. Amongst these were two new arrivals, and both, as far as we could understand, had been ganja or opium smokers; had, in fact, smoked their senses away. The eastern, southern, and western sides of this square yard contained enclosures, where we found at one side wards raised to a pretty good distance from the ground, and in which the patients are confined during the night, the rest of the enclosure embracing a large compound, in which those of the patients who were not engaged in work were seated in rows in charge of peons. Some of the wards contained separate cells for the solitary confinement of the refractory, and a hospital, which we were glad to find without a tenant.

To the south again of all these buildings there was a large spot of ground, in which the jute was grown of which we have previously spoken, and a fine tank of water. The wards and the whole place were kept scrupulously clean, and the ventilation being most admirable, the health of the patients was fully secured.

At Dullunda the non-restraint system is carefully observed. Those only of the patients who cared to work were put to it, and then they only did just as much or as little as they liked; but the moral condition of the inmates was of a much lower standard, with the minds of course by very many degrees less cultivated than that of the Europeans and East Indians at Bhowanipore, with the animal instinct more at work than the mental. Insanity at Dullunda was presented in a more degrading aspect than at the other place. Here might be seen the raving madman, the gibbering fool, and a great display of the most horrible grimaces and contortions. Some of the patients had very harmless fancies, one believed he was the King of Delhi dressed in regal style, ornamented with tinsel and glass; others again had one conceit or another, but one fellow, who seemed to us rather excited, declared that he had a special mission to Lucknow, and insisted on having a "Scotch Bible." He was seated at the head of the first of three rows, who were on the ground resting on their hams and feet in the native attitude of sitting, in one of the enclosures alluded to. As we turned away to leave that part of the hospital he made a sudden spring at the superintendent, and, but for the vigilance and quickness of a peon who was near, might have caught Dr. Cantor in his arms. The man was immediately led away and confined in a cell, and this was the only thing in the shape of punishment for his violence.

This asylum holds on an average about three hundred patients, of which about one-sixth are females; the female patients were all very quiet, with one exception; this woman confined herself to mere raving at some imaginary wrong, the others wore the look of helpless idiots. One woman had been confined in the jail—her child, a few months old, did not seem to be insane, but another child about two or three years old was a perfect idiot.—Englishman.

NANA SAHIB'S LETTERS.

TO HOLAS SING, COTWAL OF CAWNPORE.

You are hereby ordered to make known within your jurisdiction, that whoever may have in his possession any property plundered from the English, such as chairs and tables, China and metal dishes, arms, buggies, medical apparatus, horses, and wood, or railway officers' property, such as beams, iron, wire, jackets, coats and trousers, goats and sheep—must, within four days, produce such property. Should any one secrete such things, and they be found hereafter in his house when searched, he will be visited with condign chastisement. Should any person have in his house an Englishman or any children (babu logue) he must produce them and will not be questioned; but any person concealing the above will be blown into the path of destruction from the cannon's mouth.

Dated 4th Zikad, or 24th June, 1857.

TO RUGHONATH SING, BHOWANY SING, &c.

Officers of the Regiment at Seetapoor (41st N. I.) and Wahid Ali Khan, Naib Ressalder, 1st Irregular Cavalry, at Sikandra.

GREETING.—Your petition, presented by Meer Punah Ali, has been received. Its contents have become known to me. The report of your bravery and gallantry has given me great pleasure, "much praise be yours, thus should you ever act, thus let me act." Here (Cawnpore) this day 4th Zikad (27th June) the white faces have fought with us. The whole of them, by the grace of God, and the destroying fortune of the king, have entered hell. A salute in honour of this event has been fired as usual. It behoves you also to celebrate this victory with rejoicings and peals of artillery. Moreover, your request for permission to fight with the infidels has given me great satisfaction. In a few days, when order shall have been restored in this district, the victorious force, which has now swelled to a large army, still daily increasing, will cross the Ganges. Continue to hem in the infidels until the arrival of my camp. This event will take place shortly; and then display all your valour. Bear in mind that the people pertain to both faiths. They must be neither molested nor injured in any way. Have a care to protect them. Collect supplies, and keep them in readiness.

Dated 4th Zikad St. 1273, 27th June, 1857.

(N. B.—Day of boat massacre.)

TO HUSHMUT ALI, THANADAR, SIRSOL.

The perusal of your petition, dated 6th Zikad (29th June), reporting the arrival of a boat containing Europeans at Nujufgurh, and giving an account of the attack made on it by Maday Khan, Jemadar of Chowkie Nujufgurh, and of your going in person with your horsemen, and of the good conduct of the troops encamped at Mandah, has afforded me extreme gratification. Send at once a horseman to inform me where fighting with the English is now going on.

Dated 29th June, 1857.

TO HOLAS SING, COTWAL.

Whereas, by the grace of God and fortune of the king, all the English at Poonah and in Punna have been slain and sent to hell, and 5,000 English, who were at Delhi, have been put to the sword by the royal troops, the government is now everywhere victorious. You are, therefore, ordered to proclaim these glad tidings in all cities and villages by beat of drum, that all may rejoice on hearing them. All cause for apprehension is now removed.

Dated 8th Zikad, 1st July, 1857.

TO BABOO RAMBUXSH, TALOOQDAR DHONDIA KHERA, OUDE.

GREETING.—Your petition, dated 6th Zikad (29th June), reporting the slaughter of the English, and the deaths in battle of your brother Sudhainan Sing, with two officers, and also begging for my favour as a reward for your self-devotion, has been perused. You are hereby informed that I also am grieved at your loss, but the will of God must be submitted to. Moreover, this event (the death of his brother) has happened in the cause of government, and you will ever remain the object of my protection. Have no manner of fear, government will certainly befriend you.

Dated 10th Zikad, or 3rd July, 1857.

TO HOLAS SING, KOTWAL.

Whereas sundry persons of the town, on hearing the report of European troops having marched from Allahabad, are abandoning their homes and seeking shelter in villages, you are hereby ordered to have proclaimed throughout the town that Infantry, Cavalry, and Artillery have marched to repel the English. Wherever they may be met, at Futtehpore, Allahabad, or wherever they may be, the revenging force will thoroughly punish them. Let all remain without fear in their homes and pursue their usual avocations.

Dated 12th Zikad, or 5th July.

TO THE OFFICERS OF THE ARMY.

I have been greatly pleased with your zeal, valour and loyalty. Your labours are deserving of the highest praise. The organization and scale of pay and rewards established here will have likewise to be established for you. Let your minds be at rest, all promises made will be fulfilled. Troops of all arms have this day crossed the Ganges en route to Lucknow; you will be aided in every possible way to slay the unbelieving Nazarenes, and despatch them to hell. The greatest reliance is placed on your readiness and bravery to secure victory. On receipt of this order, certify to me, under your hand and seal, that you have learned its contents and are ready to co-operate in the destruction of the infidels. Have no fear as regards ordnance stores. Any amount of ammunition and heavy guns is available. Shurf-ood-Dowlah and Ali Reza Beg, Cotwal of Lucknow, have been ordered to supply provisions. They will do so; but should they fail in this duty, inform me, and a conspicuous example will be made of them. All of you display valour and fortitude. May victory speedily crown your efforts, thus shall I myself be at liberty to proceed towards Allahabad. There can be no hesitation on your part or on mine. After this rapid success, march to Allahabad and conquer there.

Dated 14th Zikad, or 7th July, 1857.

TO KALKAPERSHAD CANOONGOE—OUDE.

GREETING.—Your petition has been received, stating that seven boats containing Europeans were going down the river from Cawnpore, and that two parties of your men who were at the spot joined the government troops and fired on them so unremittingly that they proceeded, slaying the English, the whole way, as far as the villages of Abdool Azees, when the horse artillery and yourself in person joined the rest and sank six of the boats, the seventh escaping through the force of the wind. You have performed a great deed, and I am highly pleased with your conduct. Persevere in your devotion to the government cause. This order is sent you as a mark of favour. Your petition, with which a European was sent in, has also reached me. The European has been sent to hell, thus adding to my satisfaction.

Dated 16th Zikad, or 9th July, 1857.

TO THANADAR SIRSOL.

The victorious army of Government had marched towards Allahabad to oppose the Europeans, and it has now been reported that the latter have deceived the Government troops, attacked and scattered them. Some troops are said to remain there, you are, therefore, ordered to instruct the landholders in your jurisdiction and in Futtehpore, that every brave man should join heart and hand to defend his faith, to put the Europeans to the sword, and send them to hell. Conciliate all ancient influential landholders, and persuade them to unite in the cause of their religion to slay and send to hell all the infidels. Moreover, tell them that Government will give every man his due, and that those who assist it shall be rewarded.

Dated 20th Zikad, 13th July, 1857.

TO THE BAHADOORS AND OFFICERS OF CAVALRY, ARTILLERY, AND INFANTRY, AT LUCKNOW.

GREETING.—A force of about 1,000 British, with several guns, were marching towards Cawnpore from Allahabad. To arrest and slay these men, an army was despatched. The British are advancing rapidly. On both sides men fall wounded or killed. The Europeans are now within seven koss of Cawnpore, and the field of battle is warmly contested. It is reported that Europeans are coming up the river in steamers, and strong defences have consequently been constructed without the town of Cawnpore. Here my troops are prepared, and at a distance the battle rages; you are, therefore, informed that the aforesaid British are opposite the district of Baiswara, on this bank of the river. It is very probable that they may attempt to cross the Ganges. You must, for this reason, send some troops into the Baiswara country, to shut them in on that side. My force will press them from this direction, and by this combined action the slaughter of the infidels may be achieved as is most desirable.

Should these people not be destroyed, there can be no doubt they will press on to Delhi. Between Cawnpore and Delhi there is no one that could stand against them. We must, without fail, combine to destroy them, root and branch.

It is also said that the British may cross the Ganges; some English still remain in the Bailey Guard, and maintain the fight; whereas here there is not a living English person left. Send troops immediately across the river to Sheorajpore to surround and cut up the Europeans.

Dated 23rd Zikad, or 16th July, 1857.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BANSEE, Oct. 20.—About 11 A.M. on the 20th, a report was received from Lieutenant Pullan that a party of rebels from Toolseypore were advancing to attack him, and were then within three miles of his post. In less than half an hour after, Captain Howlett, with the Intwa force, was on the march to assist him, and reached Biskohur, over a bad road, about three o'clock. Here he learned that the rebels, numbering 500 or 600, were still in occupation of a village and tope a mile beyond Biskohur. They had previously attacked Lieutenant Pullan, but had retired on losing two or three of their number; they expected to be reinforced in the evening. Captain Howlett therefore started at once for the rebel post, sending the cavalry round to intercept their retreat. The rebels, as usual, bolted when they found their rear threatened. The cavalry, under the judicious leading of their bold young officer, Lieutenant Faber, prevented the escape of the rebels into the cover they were making for, and kept them to the open country, driving them upon the river Booree Raptsee, two miles off, within the Oude border. Twenty-five rebels were cut down near the river's bank by the cavalry, and the rest driven headlong into the water, where many perished by drowning, and many more were shot by the infantry, whose exertions in the chase were most strenuous. The loss of the rebels in this affair is estimated at 200. Among the slain was their leader, Mhendoo Khan. In this rapid and successful little affair Lieutenant Faber distinguished himself by the style in which he led his men, shooting one rebel, and cutting down two with his own hand, and having his sword severed by a cut from a rebel tulwar.—Delhi Gazette.

SANDEE, Oct. 26.—The brigade consists of four guns; Major Smith's Battery Royal Artillery; one Company Sikhs, with one 24-pounder, two 18-pounders, two 8-inch howitzers; 8th Foot; 8th Irregular Cavalry; Futtyghur Levy. Since leaving Futtyghur on the 18th, our movements have been as follows:—Oodeypore, 4 miles, 18th October; Allehgunge, 9 miles, 19th October; Palee, 11 miles, 20th October, 21st halt; Nuktowra, 8 miles, 22nd October; Sandie, 8 miles, 23rd October. On approaching Palee, a few rebel sowars were descried making off on the other side of the Garra. The village is large and strong, and was found deserted, but the villagers returned in the course of the day. It appears that a good many Baghies belong to Palee. Sandie is separated from our camp by the river. The rebels appear in force on the ramparts, and their sowars are careering underneath. Boats are being brought to form a bridge, and by that time the place will probably be deserted. Meanwhile, they have commenced firing Juzzails, and it has been necessary to withdraw the cavalry pickets out of range. Mr. Berkeley accompanies the force as special commissioner. 26th. We opened fire from our heavy guns on the 24th, which caused the fort and city to be evacuated. The bridge of boats was completed by evening, and the force crossed early next morning, and took quiet possession.—Delhi Gazette.

JHANSI, Oct. 26.—I have been trying to pick up any information that might be of use to you about our friend Tantia Topee down south, but I have not been very successful. From all accounts, however, it appears that he is disgusted by the reception he met with from Michel, and is anxious to shift his quarters; indeed, it is doubtful if he has not slipped away already, leaving his force to shift for itself. They are supposed to be shut into the Doab, between the Betwa and Jamnie rivers, the fords of which are carefully watched by Colonel Liddell at Koerai on the Tehree side, and Colonel Scudamore at Simereeah and Captain Maclean at the Seris ghat to the west. Michel and Smith form the base of the triangle to the south; and it is generally supposed the rebels are trying to slip between them; however, Michel is not the man to let them go without paying heavy toll at any rate. A report came in on Saturday (23rd) that they were crossing at Gooraghat in front of Colonel Scudamore, and a detachment of the third Bombay Europeans was ordered out to reinforce him, but the report was not confirmed, and they were countermanded, though still held in readiness to start. There is a talk of our going out to camp on the 1st November, and handing over the town to civil authority, but Captains Pinckney and Maclean, and a large portion of the police, are away, so it will probably be deferred till they are in a better position to take the charge. We shall none of us be sorry to get out, as our men are still sickly, and the mornings are so cool now that camp life is much to be preferred to the dirty native town.—Delhi Gazette.

CLOTHING BOARD.—A board, composed as follows, will assemble as soon as convenient, at army head quarters, at such hours as the President may appoint, for the purpose of considering the whole question of the clothing and equipment of the European soldier in India, under instructions which will be communicated to the President by the adjutant general of the army: President, Colonel E. R. Wetherall, C.B., acting quartermaster-general of her Majesty's forces. Members—Major T. B. Butt, her Majesty's 79th Highlanders; Surgeon J. F. Beaton, M.D. and A.B., 1st European Light Cavalry; Captain G. Allgood, officiating Assistant Quartermaster-General of the army. The board are authorised to correspond with officers or departments capable of affording them information. The proceedings, when closed, to be forwarded to the Adjutant-General of the army, in duplicate, for submission to the Commander-in-Chief.

BARREILLY, Oct. 28.—Very little news from camp; Colonel Troop is following the enemy into the jungles. He had a fight on Tuesday, and was going at them again yesterday. The affair of the 19th was not very brilliant; the cavalry got round us and dashed in on our baggage in rear, cutting up some forty or fifty camp followers, and among them three women, whom they hacked away just as freely as men. Shahjehanpore, I am told, is denuded of troops, all but 200 of the 82nd. Yesterday we had a grand parade, two men were presented with the Victoria Cross, and the general made a miserable speech.

ALLAHABAD, Oct. 25.—It may interest you to know that the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Clyde, with his staff, are to leave this morning for Soraon, to join the force there assembled. Troops have been passing across the river daily; the Madras Artillery, Major Lennox's Company of Royal Engineers, Major Le Mesurier's Battery, and the 79th Highlanders, marched last week, and on the 22nd the E. Troop Royal Horse Artillery escorting the Commander-in-Chief's camp moved across; it is reported there was an engagement yesterday, as the artillery received orders to proceed on by a forced march. The Governor-General leaves sometime early next month for Lucknow and Agra, escorted by the Body Guard and 250 of the 5th Fusiliers. His lordship is just now laid up with an attack of fever. The 1st and 3rd European Light Cavalry have been under orders to move some time; the former expects to be attached to the 7th Hussars at Sultanpore, and the 3rd to march to Umballah, where the Depot of the 9th Lancers will find drill instructors for them. Sickness is still on the increase, and the barracks at Papanow ought to be vacated, until the ground round them is properly drained. The Cavalry boys are getting on but slowly in their drill, and situated as they are at present, without arms or accoutrements, very little but riding drill can be taught them, and that is difficult on unbroken horses. The Brigadier has received his K.C.B., and, it is said, will shortly be posted to a station in the Punjab. The station is to be garrisoned during the cold weather by the depot to be formed here of all the recruits coming up from Calcutta. The Invalid Depot is overcrowded, the poor fellows having to wait some time ere the steamers are ready to embark them. The 6th Carabineers are expected here the day after tomorrow, to join the Soraon force. I hear there are five brigades to be formed. Sir Hope Grant to command the cavalry brigade. 26th October.—There was an inspection by the Governor-General and Lord Clyde of the troops in garrison last evening; the 5th Fusiliers and 1st and 2d European Light Cavalry were formed up at 5 o'clock, and performed a few movements. The marching part of the cavalry was very good, considering the short time they have been mounted; it is ridiculous, however, to see the way they are armed, having pioneer swords. The Governor-General looked well, but the Chief looked careworn, and the climate, you can see, has taken effect on him. Sir W. Mansfield rode behind with Lady Canning. There is a large draft of recruits here now, for the 53rd, 64th, and other corps. The weather is getting nice and cool, and sickness on the decrease, although I hear the cavalry at Papanow are still suffering a great deal from fever,—their officers are in camp, and the men were ordered also to go into tents, but the superintending surgeon stopped them. You shall hear again shortly, when anything occurs; the bridge of boats over the Ganges to Oude reflects great credit on the Engineers employed on it, as also the road beyond over the sanis.—Delhi Gazette.

A "DIFFICULTY."—The 24th Punjab Infantry, under Ensign John Chalmers, had reached Umballa, and were to leave on the 27th October; they expected to reach Umritsur on the 10th November. Orders are to be received at that station for the corps' ultimate destination, which will, it is expected, be Peshawar. At Mullaince, on march on this side of Umballa, a misunderstanding took place between the men of the regiment and Tommochy's Jez dichees, and they fought it out with swords. Two or three on each side were wounded before they could be separated, but, we are told, it was only "one of those rows that must often occur between men who do not even understand each other's language before they get accustomed to one another." We are assured that not a shot was fired on either side, and that when the European officers got to the spot both regiments at once attended to their commands. Captain Gulliver, of the Engineers, has taken command of the 24th Punjab Infantry.

SULTANPORE, Oct. 23.—On the morning of the 20th October, the following troops marched out of Sultanpore cantonment to punish a body of rebels, which, in the absence of Sir Hope Grant to the eastward, had the impudence to approach within fifteen miles of the station. H.M.'s 32nd Light Infantry (about three hundred strong), Madras Fusiliers (ditto), detachment 5th Punjab Rifles (about two hundred strong), Police Battalion, with two 9-pounders and two Horse Artillery 6-pounders, and a portion of Cavalry. After marching about ten miles, the 32nd and Punjab Rifles were formed in extended order, supported by the Fusiliers and Police Battalion. The Artillery were kept to the rear, and the bulk of the Cavalry were sent to make a défour, and cut off Pandey's retreat. In this order a heavy patch of jungle, in which Pandey's presence was expected, was beaten up. Pandey's harmless pittle-pattle of small arms was soon afterwards heard, and he was discovered in full flight. He was chased out of the jungle by the Infantry, and then Cavalry and Artillery took up the running, and after a very pretty burst, overtook and captured two English guns, completely horsed with English teams, all the ammunition wagons and bullocks (also English) belonging to these guns, three elephants, and some camels. About 70 or 80 Pandies are said to have been killed, whilst we had not a single casualty. The whole affair seems to have been admirably conceived and carried out by Brigadier Horsford, C.B., and was entirely successful. The two guns captured were the only English ones still remaining in the hands of the rebels, and were two of those carried away from Neemuch or Nusseerabad. It is quite clear that the veritable Pandies, i.e. our late sepoys, of which class those beaten on this occasion were almost entirely composed, have no longer any stomach for fighting, and have made up their minds to run at the first shot. The next few weeks will show whether the followers of the Oude Rajahs and Talookdars are composed of any better material. Sir H. Grant returned to Sultanpore this morning, and in a few days more troops will be in motion against Ameeret.—Delhi Gazette.

REGULATIONS FOR PROCLAMATION DAY.—"Monday next, the 1st November, having been fixed by the Right Honourable the Governor-General for proclaiming the assumption, by her Majesty the Queen, of the government of the British territories in India, it is hereby notified that this event will be proclaimed at four P.M. of that day, on the north steps of Government-house. At the same time and place a proclamation of her Most Gracious Majesty to the chiefs, princes and people of India will be read. All civil, military and naval officers of her Majesty and of the East India Company, are directed to attend, and all classes of her Majesty's subjects, are invited to be present on this occasion. All the troops at the presidency will be paraded, and all the ships of war in the river will be dressed in honour of the event. The illumination in honour of the assumption of the government of India by her Majesty the Queen will take place on the evening of Monday, the 1st November next. Directions have already been given for the illumination of all public offices, buildings and ships, and the President in Council again invites all loyal subjects of her Majesty to join in celebrating the event. By order of the honourable the President in Council, CECIL BEADON, Officiating Secretary to the Government of India.

Lucknow, Oct. 25.—I was sorry to hear to-day that our attack on Birwa last week, although successful in the main, was not at all well managed, and resulted in a very heavy loss on our side. Birwa is, comparatively speaking, a small fort. On the last occasion, when attacked, it was very high taken, and only escaped capture through fear of a great loss of life in Captain Dawson's small force, twenty or thirty men having already fallen when the retreat was sounded. On the present occasion we had portions of the 88th Regiment and Rifle Brigade, with military police to aid; and guns to ply the enemy with shot and shell. Notwithstanding all these advantages, you will be surprised to learn that our loss was 100 killed and wounded in Europeans alone, besides about fifty of the police. No other action has taken place since the capture of Birwa and Poorwa. The latter place is to be held by Captain Chamberlain, of the military police, with infantry and cavalry of that force. He has been instructed to place himself under the orders of that fine officer Brigadier Edegh, commanding at Nawabgunge; but is at liberty to undertake any minor attacks, which would tend to his own safety, on his own responsibility. In case he fears that he will be besieged in the entrenchments, which he has been directed to throw up at once, he is to send all his cavalry to Nawabgunge, and wait for an European reinforcement from that quarter. Major Barrow, our special commissioner of revenue, has been ordered to leave this evening for Allahabad with his entire establishment, and to join the forces at Pertabghur as soon as possible. I don't quite understand in what capacity he is to act, whether as a special commissioner of revenue, or a divisional commissioner—but I am inclined to think that he will now assume the latter title. His duties will now lie in the restoring to order the civil administration of the Baijwara country, with which he is so well acquainted, as before the mutinies, he held the post of Deputy Commissioner of Salone. Major Barrow has the repute of being a really good officer—he was much liked by the inhabitants of the district, and greatly respected for the justice of his settlements. These are, no doubt, the reasons which have induced the Chief Commissioner and Lord Canning to select him as the instrument by which order is again to be restored to that most troublesome part of the country. His gallantry in war, and his energy and zeal as a civil officer, combine to render him the most useful member of the old Commission of Oudh. To all the members to that body who returned to Oudh at the capture of Lucknow, the Chief Commissioner no doubt feels indebted for the manner in which they have brought their experience to bear in the resettlement of such portions of the province as have come under our rule; but to none is he more indebted than to Major Barrow, who has directed his best attention to, and given his hearty co-operation in, every measure which Mr. Montgomery has entrusted to his care. There have been very great misapprehensions at the Begum's court in Boondee. Mummoo Khan was the other day convicted of sending a letter to some European officers. A complaint was lodged against him before the Huzrat Mahal (i. e. the Begum), who would not let any private feelings influence her public conduct, and consequently ordered him to be imprisoned. But the Sepoys, after a few days, seeing that no money was to be realised from the Begum, without the assistance of Master Mummoo, released him of their own accord, with a warning that if they ever again found him culpable in any way, they would make short work with him. They, however, requested him very politely to issue pay, which they have not seen or heard of for many months. He, with their aid, thereupon has begun a series of collections or extortions from the neighbouring zemindars, to satisfy their cravings, and replenish the royal treasury. Another report says, that the rebel government does not find it difficult to realise the revenue; that no oppositions are offered, and no force used, and that the kists of 1,266 F.S. have all been collected wherever the agents of the Begum have appeared. Certain it is, that most of the large landed proprietors and talookdars are just now either hand in glove with the Begum, or neutral to our cause; and these no doubt help her to their utmost with means to carry on the war. I hear that the Nusseerabad brigade of rebel Sepoys, that has been hanging about in the Sultanpore district for some time past, was attacked by a force which moved out from that station a few days ago. They were completely routed at a place called Daoodpore; three guns, three elephants, and all else they possessed were captured. Further particulars have not yet transpired. The city of Lucknow continues to remain as quiet as ever, and the police management as effective. Much sickness however prevails in the town, though the station is free from any epidemic. In fact, the weather is so pleasant, that it would indeed be a wonder if anyone who enjoyed the pure air of this part of Lucknow did fall ill in any way.—Delhi Gazette.

ROOYA, IN OUDH.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear that there are about 4,000 rebels and mutineers in the neighbourhood of Rooya. They are described as being in a destitute condition, and receive rations but no pay. There are five guns mounted in the fort, and two in position in a place known by the name of "Burn Bagh." The rebels are scattered in bodies, some in the Lakspora garden at Mullao (so called from its first founder, Rajah Bhugwant Rae, having planted a lakh of trees 150 years ago), others in the fort of Rooya and between this place and Madho Gunj. The writer says of the above men that they are valiant in speech, but in heart like jacksals, whose skill in sneaking away they will emulate on the first opportunity. Golab Sing was at Birwa, near Sandeela, with about 1,500 men and two guns. Near Nankermow there were about 1,000 men, but numbers were constantly coming and going. Lukker Shah occasionally makes his appearance among them. Nurput Sing (not the Rooya man) is said to have 400 men in his service at Nanamow. Others collect there to procure food.

DELHI, Oct. 19.—We hear that parties living in the confiscated houses here are to be charged rent on account of Government, and a committee of valuation is at work with this object. This seems all fair, but a similar course should be pursued at civil stations where public buildings and confiscated houses are occupied by civil and military officers. There will be a precious long bill to pay by-and-bye, and the authorities are justified in drawing the needful into their coffers by any legitimate means. Dr. Hathaway, inspector of jails, is making his official visit here and hereabouts, not before it was required, if all one hears be true. In the way of improvement it may be mentioned that an old building at the Kootab is being converted into a staging bungalow, and that the road is now very good. This is a great boon, and is due to the new and energetic regime, which, to an unprejudiced observer, contrasts very favourably with the former sleepy, do-as-you-like system of the north-west. There has been promotion amongst the officers commanding the police in these parts—two of them have been made "captains" of police—these are good berths worth some 800 or 900 per mensem—there is nothing against the fortunate officers promoted, but the appointments have been the subject of much remark. Nov. 1. The military display attendant on the reading of the royal proclamation came off this morning, and a very imposing spectacle it was. As I stated in my former letter, the ground selected was that outside the Lahore Gate of the city, but a subsequent order directed the assembly to be made at the river side, outside the "Kharatee Gate," and the change was judicious, for with such a concourse of spectators in addition to the movements of such a large body of troops, the former ground would have been one cloud of dust; as it was, the gay scene, from the commencement to the close, was witnessed without the slightest inconvenience to the spectators. The troops were in position soon after daybreak. They consisted of one troop Eur. Horse Art., Walcott's battery, Sikh Cavalry, Hayley's police mounted, H.M.'s 61st Regiment, 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers, the Kumaon battalion, 13th and 23rd Sikh Infantry, forming a very respectable display. About sunrise, Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.S., Commissioner of Delhi, arrived on the ground, and after exchanging salutes with Brigadier Longfield, rode up to the line, and the ceremonies commenced by the royal proclamation being opened and read first in English to the troops, and then in the vernacular by Mr. Saunders, to the natives. This portion of his arduous and important duty was done in a clear, audible voice, so that he must have been distinctly heard at some distance around him. I was not very close, yet I heard every word of the proclamation. When the translation was concluded, the troops deployed into line; a royal salute was fired, the 61st Band played the National Anthem, and three hearty British cheers rang through the clear cold air; nor were these noisy demonstrations permitted to subside; the native troops took up the cheering, and the crowd of native spectators followed their example, cheering, to all appearance, with hearty good-will. The troops then marched past in quick time, to the stirring music of the Fusilier Band, and the ceremony concluded to the satisfaction of all. The weather was most favourable, the arrangements all that could be wished, reflecting the highest credit on all concerned. A royal salute will be fired at twelve noon from the 18-pounder battery at Selimgurh, and the city and private residences will be illuminated this evening. There was a large concourse of native spectators on the ground this morning, and after the proclamation had been read copies of it in the native character were distributed in the crowd. The utmost order prevailed throughout. I am glad to be able to add that the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab has sanctioned the donation of Rs. 1,000 towards the festivities in the public garden to-morrow.—Delhi Gazette.

LIEUTENANT G. G. ROOKE, of the 21st Bengal N.I., was tried by court martial at Peshawur, on the 7th of October last, for having, on the 11th of August, appeared in a state of intoxication at a theatrical performance held in the barracks of the left wing of H.M.'s 81st Regiment, he being at the time on duty as station subaltern officer of the day. He was found guilty of the charge preferred against him, and sentenced to be cashiered; but the court recommended the prisoner to the merciful consideration of the Commander-in-Chief, in consequence of his youth and inexperience. Lord Clyde, however, being of opinion that there were no extenuating circumstances whatever on which to found a plea for mitigation of punishment, directed that the sentence be carried into effect, and Lieutenant Rooke has accordingly been struck off the strength of his regiment.

CAPTAIN J. HUDSON, of H.M.'s 15th Regt. (late of the 64th Foot), has been appointed brigade major at Allahabad, in the room of Captain A. H. Campbell, removed to another situation.

MAJOR J. C. PHILLIPS, of the 3rd Bengal European Regt., second in command of the 18th Irregular Cav., has been appointed commandant of the 1st Regiment Mahratta Horse, now being organised in the Gwalior division. Lieut. A. Cory, of the 16th N.I., Adjutant of the 3rd Irregular Cav., has been appointed second in command.

PROMOTIONS.—The Governor-General has conferred the rank of ensign unattached on the undermentioned non-commissioned officers of the Bengal Artillery, who had distinguished themselves in several actions, and been specially recommended by their commanding officer:—Serg. Major John McNamara; Staff Serg. John McNally; Sergeants Thomas Kinahan, George Masters, and James Milrick; and Staff Serg. Amos Stratton.

SAUGOR, Oct. 27.—Several of the menial servants of the Nawab of Banda gave themselves up, and are at Saugor; they give very willing evidence, and all agree. They say the Banda Nawab never was wounded as thought by us, that Tantia is only the Kadar of the Baw Sahib, who is supreme. That there are about 7,000 mutineers and 8,000 irregular cavalry, the latter under a rissaldar 5th Irregular Cavalry, that there are large bodies of chiefs and their followers, who joined in Bijwarra, and more Bundelash who joined the other day. That they have no guns and no ammunition except in pouch, that they never fight if they can help it. The cavalry horses are rather exhausted, but otherwise this arm is good; the followers are footsore, but there are no deserters except common followers. Having no wheel carriages they travel easy through the jungle roads, and thus slip past our columns occasionally. That a Bareilly Nawab is with them and Adil Mahomed, of Bhopal. That they pay willingly for supplies at high rates, but loot deserted villages, and zemindars, who are reluctant to give food, and that these are few and far between. They have about twenty elephants and some camels, the women travel on ponies, or walk. They estimate the whole bordering at little less than 50,000 souls.—Delhi Gazette.

MR. G. C. BARNES.—It is definitely settled that Mr. G. C. Barnes, now Commissioner Cis-Sutlej Division, will succeed Col. H. Edwards, at Peshawur. It is much to be regretted that the services, as delicate as they were important, rendered to the State by Mr. Barnes, do not appear to have been publicly noticed. One false step by him would have imperilled the British supremacy in India.

ROHILCUND, Oct. 25.—The comet, which has for some time past been gracing the heavens, is now about to make its departing bow to the public. From one of the most conspicuous and brilliant objects, it has sunk into comparative insignificance; to the human eye its glories began to fade as it approached Jupiter, and since passing which, in its course southwards, is still more rapidly becoming scarce. Myself and a friend riding out last evening, a little after dusk, thought of the luminary since it did not attract the eye, and it was not till after many a steady and searching look that we discovered it wrapped in obscurity. On its first appearance speculations were rife respecting it; the native mind had it, that the Jharoo Tarra betokens a still greater crisis than the last; the rebel horde in Oude doubtless took it for their forlorn hope; while our public prints gave us to understand that previous experience of the appearance of such celestial bodies teaches that they are portentous of great events; but a great crisis has preceded our present visitant—the direct Government of India, too, by the Crown was resolved upon, ere it obtruded on our sight, the great event then, of which it is supposed, to be the forerunner is yet to come, let us hope it is the restoration of peace and order throughout the land. The Shahjehanpore brigade has entered Oude, and it cannot be long before we shall hear of operations active, and doings great. Mr. Money, the zealous magistrate and collector of Shahjehanpore, in the meantime, is keeping an eye on the northern frontier of his district, watching for such rebel parties as may make for the Pillibheet jungles. Major Hammond's battery from Moradabad has come in here, two guns have since been sent to Pillibheet, which has now a compact little garrison with that model of a young civilian, Mr. Low, as civil officer. The Sirmoor battalion, engineers and Pontoon train are shortly expected to pass through this en route to Shahjehanpore; they passed through the district of Bijnoor some time last week. The townspeople of Bareilly are just now smarting under the fine of Rs.25,000 inflicted on them, under Act X. of 1858, by our excellent magistrate, Mr. Inglis, for destruction of the church, graveyard, dispensary, offices, &c. Ten men more, convicted of implication in the murder of Mr. Raikes, have been executed, and justice is steadily overtaking the murderers of Kafir Feringhees. Mr. Carmichael, magistrate of Budaon, is out on a tour into the district. Mr. Dunlop's assassin's office at Moradabad has been marked by no very notable circumstance, but I expect he is feeling his way through the people he has to deal with. — Delhi Gazette.

CAMP BUGAON, Oct. 21.—Brigadier Troup's column left Shahjehanpore on Monday morning and proceeded as far as Soorje. The rebels were reported as being entrenched some five miles a-head, that is to say such entrenchments as Pandey can throw up, which are usually of a very kutcha description. On Tuesday morning the 19th we marched again at daybreak. The road lies through a very dense dark jungle, which affords every facility for concealment, and the obstacle to progress or search. It appeared that the enemy were in the village of Muddypoor, and their cavalry were seen in front as we advanced. They opened fire from the village for a short time which was replied to with the guns, and we soon went on, cavalry and some guns on either flank going round the village and clearing the jungle. The 93rd Highlanders took first possession of the place where there was a battery erected on one side of the road and a dismounted gun lying inside. After passing through this and some topos beyond to meet the cavalry and guns which had taken the outside route, it was reported that some of the rebel cavalry had got down among the baggage, on which the Mooltances under Major Cureton galloped back, and the head of the column halted. The fact was, some of the brutes who were concealed in the jungle, further, perhaps, than our cavalry had gone, came down on the road and cut up a number of camp followers, many of them women. Only one European soldier was killed, a man of No. 2 Company 93rd Highlanders, whose head was cut off, and who was horribly mutilated besides. The appearance of the Mooltances, however, very soon cleared the road, and when all the baggage had come up, the column proceeded on to Bugaon, which is only a short distance from Muddypoor, and there we encamped after a pretty long day's work. The number of camp followers that were killed was about twenty, but the Mooltances cut up about thirty of the rebels among the baggage. Their loss otherwise I do not know, for we hardly saw a man, but they had left some dying horses behind. We encamped in the evening at Bugaon. Some of the baggage camels, it turned out, had been killed, and some property plundered, either by the cavalry camp followers or villagers, the latter most probably. — Delhi Gazette.

ETAWAH.—The rebels in the Etawah district have again been showing their heads. News was brought into Suhsan (a small fort between the Ohumbul and Kooaree, where Mr. Allan is stationed with some of the levies), on the morning of the 23rd October, that the rebels under Roop Singh and Gunga Singh, say some 400, where at a ghaut on the Kooaree, and had placed a picket on this side of the river. Mr. Allan did not hesitate for a moment, but with 140 infantry and twenty-five sowars went off at once. When near Kooaree, the rebels were observed loading their camels, and making off as fast as they could. The force was hurried on, and kept up a close pursuit through the ravines and villages in which the rebels sought shelter. The cavalry, though much obstructed by the very bad ground, pursued hard and cut up ten or eleven of the Bhagees; altogether some thirty of the rebels are supposed to have been killed, and three camels and twenty-five baggage ponies with all kinds of property, a number of jingals, swords, matchlocks, &c., &c., were captured. On our side, only one sowar was wounded by a sword cut in single combat, and one horse killed and four wounded.

CAPT. MACHELL'S CARTS.—We (Delhi Gazette) are very glad to learn that the Commander-in-Chief has most distinctly expressed his decided approbation of the platform carts for mortars invented and constructed by Capt. L. Macchell, Commissary of Ordnance at this station. The Adjutant-General of the army has forwarded a letter to the principal Commissary of Ordnance, requesting him to inform Capt. Macchell to proceed at once in the construction of four platform carts, and to have them ready for the approaching campaign. We very heartily congratulate our young and talented Commissary of Ordnance upon this decided recognition of the utility of his invention.

GREAT STORM.—Calcutta was visited by a heavy gale, attended with much rain, during the night of Monday last. We fear that disastrous news will be received of its effects on the shipping in the river and at the Sand Heads. Its doings in Calcutta were principally confined to mischievous tricks upon the bamboo and beer-box architecture of the erections intended for the approaching pyrotechnic display and illuminations. The gigantic bird trap and artificial rocheries on the maidan have nearly melted from the eyes of beholders. A peculiarly knowing cock on one side has been given to the Crown on the top of the Government House dome; and the insignia of royalty, which had lately appeared on the front of the Treasury and of the Supreme Court, have vanished. One death in Calcutta from the falling of a house is recorded, many dinghies were damaged, and nine or ten country boats, loaded with rice, jute, gunny cloth, &c., were seen upset, and all the rice and other things are floating on the river. Casualties, it is feared, of a still more serious kind, remain to be reported. Nor have we yet ascertained what injury the storm has done to our scanty crop of rice. If the rain has been general, no doubt it would be better for the crops, but the gale must have done great injury. We have heard besides, that two or three ships are ashore not much below town. We must assign this same hurricane as the indirect cause also of another and still more serious disaster,—we mean the fatal collision last night upon the railway. The up-passenger train, which ought to have arrived at Howrah at 5 p. m., was unable to travel at a greater speed than that of ten miles an hour in the face of the tempest, which, although in town it had not reached its highest fury till nearly twelve hours later, was, in the upper part of the province, blowing with terrific violence even at that time. The consequence was that the passenger train was belated. In addition to this element of risk, the guards had neglected to light the warning lamp in front of the train. Meanwhile, a goods' train was proceeding down, and as the hour was not that at which the passenger train was expected to be where in fact it was, the goods train, much heavier, of course, and travelling twenty-five miles an hour, seeing no light to admonish it, ran full into the carriages of the passengers. Two unfortunate persons were killed on the spot, a greater number more or less seriously injured, and much damage and "degal" occasioned. Four trees were blown down in the compound of the Roman Catholic College in Park-street. — Hurkuru, Oct. 27.

"ORDER OF MERIT."—The Honourable the President of the Council of India in Council has been pleased to admit Duffadar Shaik Hossain, Ressaldar Sirdar Khan, and Sowar Shaik Abdoola, of the Southern Mahratta Irregular Horse, to the third class of the "Order of Merit," in consideration of their conspicuous gallantry in the field in action at Nurgood, the two first named on the 1st, and the last named on the 2nd June, 1858.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—The bridge of boats at Attock was completed and opened for traffic on the 22nd October, under the supervision of Captain Henderson, of Engineers; the Indus is broad this year, and two separate areas of the river have had to be bridged. The Chief Commissioner's camp has crossed the bridge. The Supreme Government have granted to Sirdar Khan Singh Bosah, in addition to the Jagheers already conferred upon him for services rendered during the mutiny, the confiscated house of Mahboob Ali Khan at Delhi, valued at Rs. 4,000. Mr. J. Thornton, Assistant Commissioner, has been transferred from Umritsur to Goojrat. Captain Maxwell, Assistant Commissioner, has been transferred from Kusowlie to Umritsur. Mr. Donald, extra Assistant Commissioner, Sirsa, has obtained six months' leave of absence.

RECRUITING IN THE PUNJAB.—Under instructions from the Right Honourable the Governor General, the enlistment of recruits in any district under the government of the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, has been strictly prohibited by the Commander-in-Chief, until sanction shall have been obtained through the head quarters of the army. Officers commanding divisions are requested to attend particularly to the observance of this order.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—With the sanction of Government, the Commander-in-Chief in India directs that officers commanding European corps will, without delay, provide their men with wicker helmets, covered with dyed cotton cloth, of the approved pattern, the cost of which is to be drawn for in contingent bills. The price of the helmet and cover, together with a turban of the same colour as the cover, is not to exceed two rupees.

CALCUTTA "GUP."—The Lieutenant Governor will positively resign his office in May next, and the changes and promotions in consequence of his retirement will be as follows: Mr. Grant becomes Lieutenant Governor, and the vacancy thereby caused in Council is to be filled up by Mr. Montgomery, who will immediately be appointed a provisional member of Council. The appointments in the North Western Provinces, we are told, will be somewhat different from those we have already mentioned. Mr. Edmonstone is to be Lieutenant Governor of the North West, including Oude, and will be succeeded in the office of Foreign Secretary by Mr. Muir. Colonel Edwards will officiate as Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, in succession to Sir John Lawrence, on the departure of the latter for Europe, which is likely to take place in the ensuing month. — Englishman.

DEHRA ISMAEL KHAN.—On the morning of the 9th October, at Dehra Ismael Khan, "Akbur Shah," native commandant of the 6th Police Battalion, was cut down while at his morning prayers, by his native adjutant, Peer Buxsh. The murderer walked stealthily up behind his victim, and inflicted on him, as he rose from a kneeling position, two sword wounds, which proved instantaneously fatal. The wretch was immediately seized and tried. He declared that he had no accomplices, that he had been faithful to his salt, and that he murdered the commandant, supposing him to be his enemy. He was blown from a gun before the assembled troops on parade within half an hour. The affair has created some sensation, the troops behaved perfectly well at the execution. There seems to be a universal feeling of indignation against the murderer. The commandant was an excellent man, and his death will be a loss to the service. He will probably be succeeded by "Oli Werdi Khan," Ressaldar of the 17th Irregular Cavalry, a distinguished native officer, who signalled himself when the 9th Irregular Cavalry partially mutinied in the Leia district last year. We also hear that Peer Buxsh was considered a harmless old man, not a very good officer, liked, but not much respected by the men; of weak mind, and easily led by others. There was no friendship between him and the native commandant, and it is said that he was employed by the Brigadier General as a spy, for which his previous training (he was formerly a spy in our service) fitted him.

SHARP PRACTICE.—Under instructions from Government, the Commander-in-Chief in India has been pleased to intimate that officers who have had an undue proportion of leave, and who may be proceeding to Europe on sick certificate, via Bombay or Madras, will, when requisite, be subjected at those presidencies to examination as to their fitness for further service, under the operation of general orders of the 15th June, 1858. Officers quitting their appointments or corps, in anticipation of the grant of preparatory leave, are warned that they will not be allowed to quit India until it shall have been clearly ascertained by the authorities at the port of embarkation, on a reference to Calcutta, whether or not it be necessary to subject them to the above examination.

SASSERAM, Oct. 26.—Brigadier Douglas has quite cleared the Shahabad district of the rebels, has killed about a thousand of them, and driven the remainder into the Rhotas hills, and parties are now being organised to go after them there. Umeer Sing and his party crossed into the hills a few days back; they tried to cross the Soane, but were turned by Colonel Turner's force. Col. Dunsford commands at Jugdespore, and posts are stationed along the trunk road, and in various parts of the district, to prevent the rebels getting back. The Brigadier pursued them at from twenty to thirty miles daily, but only came up with them with the infantry and guns once. Havelock, with the cavalry and some other flying brigades, have had several fights with them, and killed, report says, five or six hundred. The different parties under the Brigadier's orders, under Col. Dunsford, Major Carr, Col. Walter, and others, have had several engagements with the rebels, and cut up a great number of them.

MAJOR LAUGHTON.—We learn, from the Punjabee, that Major Laughton, superintending engineer, 1st circle Punjab, has been placed under arrest, and that a court of inquiry has been appointed for the investigation of certain charges brought against him by Colonel Ommanney, chief engineer of the Punjab. There has been an old quarrel between these officers, and it may be supposed that it will be settled at last.

CAPTAIN S. C. JACKSON, of H.M.'s 70th Foot, has been appointed commandant of the Lahore Light Horse, composed of East Indian soldiers, vice Captain Balmain, resigned.

SURGEON CHARLES DOUGLAS, M.D., of the Bengal medical service, has been appointed to the charge of the medical duties of the civil station of Futtehpore.

COLONEL E. R. WETHERALL, C.B., Officiating Quartermaster-General of her Majesty's forces in India, has been appointed to the command of a column to be formed near Soron, for service in Oude, with the rank of a Brigadier of the second class; and Lieut. T. Acton, her Majesty's 58th foot, is appointed Major of Brigade to the column.

EURASIAN ARTILLERY.—The Governor-General has authorised the formation of a company of artillery, composed of Eurasians and native Christians, at Agra, under the command of one captain and one lieutenant.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR PATRICK GRANT, G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, may be expected in Bombay shortly, by the Feroze, to proceed on a tour of inspection of the Madras troops in Central India. His excellency will embark at Calicut on or about the 6th Nov., and will visit Jaulnah, Nagpore, Secunderabad, Masulipatam, and the Northern Division, returning to Madras in March, 1859. He will be accompanied by the following staff:—The Quarter Master General of the Army; the Officer Commanding the Engineers; the Inspector General of Hospitals; the Military Secretary, and an Aide-de-Camp.—Bombay Times.

BREVET MAJOR DE RENZIE J. BRETT, of the 3rd Madras European Regiment, has been appointed Commandant of the 2nd Regiment of Beaton's Horse.

ERASMUS W. R. SHAKESPEAR, of the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, has been appointed 1st Assistant to the Governor-General's Agent in Central India, and Deputy Opium Agent in Malwa, vice E. H. Anson.

NABOB OF THE CARNATIC.—The Supreme Court was occupied on Friday, Saturday, and Tuesday last in investigating the claim of the Messrs. Richardson against the late Nabob of the Carnatic. The claim was founded on a bond given by the Nabob for Rs. 4,91,000. Verdict was given on Tuesday in favour of the claimants, with six per cent. interest; costs were not allowed, as the judges were of opinion that the inquiry was necessary, in consequence of proper records of the various transactions not having been kept.—Athenæum, Oct. 28.

THE ROHILLAS.—From a friend's letter we gather that a great number of Rohillas left the Nizam's dominions during the late disturbances for the purpose of taking service with the rebel leaders in Central India, the inducement held out to them being liberal wages. Of the fact there can be no doubt several of the sowers of the Hyderabad Contingent when on Jhansi dour having recognised their old enemies among the Ranees' troops. The minister Solar Jung is said to have sent off expresses to the several Soobas of districts, warning them to be on their guard, as about two thousand more of these mercenaries had lately taken their discharge from the Nizam, ostensibly for the purpose of returning to their country, but there was reason to believe that this was a mere blind, their real object being to remain in the Deccan, and seize every opportunity that offered itself for plunder and rapine. These desperadoes have, indeed, by later accounts, commenced their work, having collected in great numbers and begun looting right and left between Goelburgh and Moorg.—Spectator.

A CONVINCING ARGUMENT.—We hear that Captain Umfreville, of the wrecked ship Soubahdar, has arrived at Madras, bringing with him seven thousand pounds in sovereigns which were saved from the ship. The savages on the island (one of the Soedives), when the vessel was wrecked, intimated to the captain that they thought the best way of disposing of the precious metal would be to hand it over to them. But the captain, by exhibiting his skill with a revolver, not, however, upon the bodies of the islanders, but upon an envelope which he affixed to a tree—and by expressing his readiness to convince anyone who dared to touch the gold that he would have a bullet put through him, managed to dissuade the covetous gentry from all idea of appropriating the money.

CAPTAIN ROSE CAMPBELL, of the 28th Madras N.I., has resigned his appointment as 2nd Assistant to the Resident at Hyderabad, in the Deccan, and his services have been placed at the disposal of the government of Fort St. George.

LORD HARRIS.—We regret to hear that an accident happened to Lord Harris on the 29th Oct. It appears that his lordship was riding with the Commander-in-Chief and some other gentlemen after dark, when the horse his lordship was mounted on made a false step, swerved off the road, and fell into a ditch. We are rejoiced, however, to say that no serious consequences ensued from the accident, his lordship having only received a few bruises and a slight cut on his face. We are glad to hear that the Governor's health has been lately excellent, and that his lordship proposes leaving the Hills shortly on a tour through some of the districts.—Bangalore Herald.

PROCLAMATION OF HER MAJESTY AS QUEEN OF INDIA.

The booming of cannon, the strains of martial and national music, and the cheers of the multitude, after the reading of the Royal Proclamation on Monday, the 1st Nov., showed unmistakably that an event of deep interest to our community had just been consummated. These were signals that the sceptre of Indian Government had been taken from the lifeless hand of the Company, after a long and famous career, and consigned to that of Her Most Gracious Majesty, the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland. Notwithstanding the brevity of the notice given—for which, we understand, the Bombay Government was in no way responsible—the official arrangements for promulgating in the town-hall the new reign of things with dignity and eclat, were highly creditable to all concerned. The "powers that be" were represented in the persons of the governor, high naval and military officers and legal functionaries; and the sanction of religion, learning, and commerce was given to the proceedings by the presence of several spiritual pastors, members of the polite professions and the mercantile community. The natives far outstripped the Europeans in demonstrative enthusiasm.

They mustered in great force at the town-hall, but their loyal manifestations were observable everywhere from an early hour of the day, in the shape of preparations for the decoration and illumination of their houses. The illuminations altogether were much more general and effective, even among the European houses, than we could have anticipated from the shortness of time permitted for making arrangements, and the fabulous prices charged for oil and glasses by the vendors of these indispensables. After the proclamation had been made, the motley stream of people was directed to the great centre of attraction—the Esplanade. No stranger who has once seen this pride of Bombay, under even ordinary circumstances, will soon forget it. Few towns in the world can boast anything grander than the view of the Fort from the Money School at sunrise, noon, or sunset. Let the distant reader then imagine how much this magnificent spectacle must have been enhanced when the entire range of diversified architecture, from point to point, was lit up with millions of lights, and an endless succession of rockets, Roman candles, and other triumphs of the pyrotechnic art. The garrison engineer and the other gentlemen associated with him in illuminating the fort, are worthy of all praise for the taste and enterprise displayed in their task.

People have different ways of showing their feelings, and this very diversity added much to the spectacle of Monday. The men-of-war of the quondam "Indian Navy," now to be incorporated with the Royal Navy, were decorated in their best, "from morn till dewy eve," and at times gave out from the iron throats of their guns intimation of their joy at the change, and in the evening they were illuminated from stem to stern, and from deck to high top-gallant mast. We do not for a moment imagine that the chiefs, the officers, and the men of the Indian navy, forgot their late paymasters, the Company, but we cannot help noticing an original idea carried out by the fine class of iron ships in our harbour belonging to the firm of Messrs. Edward Bates & Co. Up to the hour of Proclamation they had their colours only half mast high, but the moment the signal announced that the ceremonial transfer of Government had taken place, high up went the ensigns, and a gun from each vessel roared out a welcome to the intelligence. We think that by this course an appropriate tribute was paid to the memory of the deceased—in whose pay some of the ships had been up the Persian Gulf—and a graceful recognition given to the new Raj. In the evening, next to the men-of-war, the illuminated ships, Fearnought, and Ellen Bates, were the great sources of attraction in the Bay.

To an advanced hour of the night the throng of carriages and pedestrians on the Esplanade, and the other favoured spots for witnessing the sights, proved how universal and lasting was the interest taken by all classes of the community, rich and poor, of every shade of complexion and creed, in the great incident of the day. We have reason to know that the Proclamation festivities were not confined to entertainments for the eye. From the moment that the day selected was unequivocally announced in our columns, invitations to dinner parties were despatched in profusion both by European and native citizens, and "Long Life to the Queen of India" was toasted in many a flowing bumper on Monday night before the "Feast of Lanterns" was over.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. IMLACH.—We deeply regret to announce the death of Assistant-Surgeon C. J. F. Imlach, M.D., of the Southern Mahratta Irregular Horse, at Vingoria, on Saturday, the 6th November, of fever, while en route to the Presidency, on medical certificate to Europe.

COLONEL BERKLEY, who was going home sick in the Simla, died at sea on the 25th October, two days before the vessel arrived at Aden; his remains were taken on shore there, and interred in the naval bureau ground.

FATAL EXPLOSION AT THE KURRACHEE ARSENAL.—About two o'clock yesterday afternoon, two sudden explosions, following one another, shook the walls of every house in Kurrachee. Immediately a bright flame and volumes of smoke were observed ascending from the arsenal. From what we have been able to learn, it appears the accident occurred from a rocket exploding when being driven, the flame of which reached some ammunition boxes next. The whole of the ball ammunition in the arsenal has been blown up, with the portfires and fuses, but the magazine and the rest of the arsenal are safe. Luckily there is other ammunition in the harbour. The whole of the left front of the arsenal, an upper-roomed building, is a mass of ruins. The fire is confined to this portion of the building. Fatigue parties from the different regiments in garrison and the police were promptly on the spot. Bheesties were brought in from every direction, in fact, everything that human ingenuity could invent was done, but the fire has not been thoroughly put down. Fortunately there was not a very high wind at the time the accident occurred; still the heat of the fire was so intense, that those who were engaged in the task of preventing its progress were almost suffocated. Still they worked on cheerfully, pulling down the roof, walls, and everything that was in their way, until they had cleared one angle of the building, and thus prevented the fire from communicating with the rest of the arsenal, where a great quantity of combustible matter is stored. The whole of the authorities, civil and military, were promptly on the spot, and rendered all the assistance in their power, some with their advice, and others by handling the buckets and removing the debris. So great was the explosion, that the debris was thrown several hundred yards from the arsenal, extending to the centre of the bazaar. The body of a native was thrown about 40 yards distance, scorched and stiff; and the toe of another, with some flesh adhering to it, was found in the arsenal compound, supposed to belong to a native in the troop hospital, whose leg is about to be amputated. The greatest excitement prevailed throughout the camp and town of Kurrachee during the whole evening, but the praiseworthy exertions of the officers and men, who so nobly put forth their exertions to stay the progress of the fire, restored confidence. Mr. Frere, during the hottest part of the conflagration, was seen to place himself often where shells burst and extensive explosions occurred. Several private individuals also were conspicuous in using the pickaxe and extinguishing the fire. Amongst those who suffered by this dreadful accident we have learned the names of the following:—Laboratoryman Cate, killed; sub-Conductor McCabe, slightly wounded; Sergeants Kelly, dangerously wounded; Marsh, slightly wounded; Wells, slightly wounded; and Brady, slightly wounded. Sub-Conductor Laughlan, not found, supposed to be buried in the ruins. Of natives, there were two killed, two severely wounded, and two slightly. We trust no time will be lost in raising a subscription for the families of those who have lost their lives, and the wounded.—Sindian, Oct. 20.

POONA.—We, Poona Observer, understand that a number of concealed arms has, through the vigilance and energy of the Foudjar, Mr. Framjee Nasserwanjee, been discovered in or near the village of Chicklee, fourteen miles from Poona. Some of these weapons are of a formidable kind, being jinjalls carrying a one pound ball. The village has a strong "ghuree" or fortalice attached to it, which could be readily fortified. The patell of the village is suspected of entertaining inimical feelings towards the Government, and we are informed that some of the concealed arms are known to have belonged to him. The idea of such a place holding out against British troops even for an hour is, of course, simply absurd; but, nevertheless, valuable lives might be lost in reducing it, which would be saved if Government caused the place to be destroyed, which we hope will be done. The Foudjar deserves praise for his vigilance, and all the more so because Chicklee is beyond his jurisdiction, for it shows that he possesses sources of information superior to those of the authorities of the district to which it pertains.

WILLIAM HART, Esq., Secretary to Government in the General, Ecclesiastical, and Public Works Departments, has obtained fifteen months' sick leave to proceed to Europe.

SIR HUGH ROSM and Staff arrived at Mahabuleswar on Wednesday, the 27th October.

MR. J. H. STANDEN.—We announce with the deepest regret the death of Mr. J. H. Standen. The melancholy event took place on the 12th of October, at Penang, whither Mr. Standen had been taken from Singapore, in the vain hope that the atmosphere of the hills would restore him to his wonted vigour. But the fatal disease under which he laboured was not one which change of air could cure. After languishing a few days he died of abscess on the liver. The loss of this accomplished gentleman is a source of mourning not to us only, but to European society in India. Mr. Standen was beloved in the circles which he frequented, because of his unalterable kindness, his admirable good temper, his taste for letters and art. Of a wonderfully tenacious memory, he was an oracle whom none consulted in vain. The depth and variety of his reading were wonderful, whilst the cheerfulness with which he imparted it, the illustration which it gave to his conversation, were charming. Five years have hardly elapsed since Mr. Standen came to Bombay. After a short career at the bar he was promoted to the office of Administrator General and Registrar of the diocese, by which he was entirely withdrawn from the active duties of a barrister. His health began to fail about three months ago, and our regret is great that he should have preferred seeking its re-establishment in the tropics rather than in Europe. Had he chosen the latter course we might not perhaps have had to mourn his death in the very prime of his years.—Standard.

KURRACHEE.—The price of every article of consumption in Kurrachee is rising day by day, and yet we cannot find the least excuse for it; we have had no drought in Scind, no burning of corn-fields by mutineers, no great accession of troops; in fact, there is nothing to warrant the gross imposition that is now practised under the mask of free trade. The only excuse that can justly be pleaded, is by the sellers of grass, who are taxed with a vengeance by the municipality. During Sir Charles Napier's time, with nearly 10,000 troops and their thousands of followers, no roads for bringing in supplies, and scarcely any trade, everything was sold at a reasonable rate, and labourers were contented with two annas a day. But now that cultivation has increased four-fold, ships arriving daily in our harbour, with a flourishing trade, good roads, and the number of shops doubled, we see no reason why a few grasping B-nians should have it in their power to rob the public with impunity.—Scindian, Oct. 20.

A LAUNCH.—On Saturday the last of the four new steamers that have been put together at Kemaree, was successfully launched from the dockyard. The attendance on this occasion was very meagre, the novelty of the spectacle evidently having subsided. Shortly after 10 o'clock the young lady selected to name the vessel arrived, accompanied by the Commissioner in Sind. There were also on the platform, Captain Daniells, Mr. Ellis, Mr. Bellasis, and several other officials, together with a few ladies. Everything being ready, Miss Hogg took up the post of honour, and wishing "success to the Outram," broke the bottle of claret on the bows of the vessel. In a second afterwards the steamer glided beautifully into the water, and the ceremony was over, after the Commissioner had introduced Mr. Ford, the builder, and Mr. Morris superintending engineer, to Miss Hogg.—Sind Kossid Oct. 26.

The fire of the right attack on the first day of the opening of the fire, the 28th ult., cleared the mound of the workmen and the enemy. The mortars, in consequence of information I had received, shelled and set on fire long rows of hay-ricks in the south of the city, which created an almost general conflagration in that quarter.

The enemy had been firing actively from the white turret, the tree tower battery in the fort, and the wheel tower, Saugor and Lutchmen-gate batteries in the town about midday. Their fire ceased almost completely, but recommenced the next day with increased vigour.

The chief of the rebel art. was a first-rate art.-man; he had under him two companies of Golundauze. The manner in which the rebels served their guns, repaired their defences, and re-opened fire from batteries and guns, repeatedly shut up, was remarkable. From some batteries they returned shot for shot. The women were seen working in the batteries and carrying ammunition. The garden battery was fought under the black flag of the Sikhs.

Everything indicated a general and determined resistance; this was not surprising, as the inhabitants, from the Ranees downwards, were more or less concerned in the murder and plunder of the English. There was hardly a house in Jhansi which did not contain some article of English plunder, and politically speaking, the rebel confederacy knew well that, if Jhansi, the richest Hindoo city, and most important fortress in Central India, fell, the cause of the insurgents in this part of India fell also.

To silence the city wall batteries to the south, and cannonade more effectually the town, two 24-pr. guns were placed in battery between the eight-inch howitz. and the two eight-inch mortars, and opened fire on the 25th ult. They produced a good effect, but not to the extent of silencing the town batteries. Unfortunately on this day the eight-inch howitz. was disabled by the breaking of its trunnion.

On the 24th ult. I caused the rocky ridge, the left attack, to be occupied by a strong picket under Capt. Hare, with two five and a half inch mortars, which played on the mound and the houses adjacent to it.

On the 25th ult. the siege train of the 1st brig. having arrived, batteries were constructed and opened fire from the 26th to the 29th ult. on the rocky ridge, as follows, forming the left attack:—

Two 18-prs. to dismantle the defences of the fort; two ten-inch mortars to destroy the fort; two eight-inch mortars and one eight-inch howitz. to act on the mound and adjacent wall and city.

One 18-pr. to breach the wall near the bastion of the mound, which was thus exposed to a vertical and horizontal fire on its right face and left rear, the 18-prs. were changed from travelling to garrison carriages.

In order to prevent delay and confusion, I gave names to all the enemy's batteries in the town as well as in the fort; they were thirteen in number.

The fire of the two 18-prs. was so efficient that towards sunset the parapets of the white turret, the black tower, and the tree tower which faced our attack, were nearly destroyed.

The two 10-inch mortars created great havoc in the fort, and having pointed out to Lieut. Pettman, By.H.A., the position of a powder magazine respecting which I had information, he blew it up in the third shot, keeping up a well-directed fire on the fort, for which good service I beg to recommend him to H.E.

The breaching gun, so solid was the wall, and so hard the masonry, did not produce the result contemplated on the first or even on the second day, but on the 30th the breach was practicable. The enemy retrenched the breach with a double row of palisades filled with earth, on which I ordered every description of fire, including red-hot shot, to be directed upon it, and the result was a considerable portion of the stockade was destroyed by fire.

Riflemen to fire at the parapets and the embrasures, and loopholes were placed in all the batteries, with sandbag loopholes, and posts of riflemen were distributed in the temples and garden of the E. and S. sides of the city. I occupied also the Jokun Bagh, nearly opposite the mound, with a picket of rifles. The riflemen caused numerous casualties amongst the rebels in the town as well as in the parapets.

Two of the enemy's defences which annoyed the left attack the most, were the wheel tower on the S. and the garden battery on a rock in rear of the W. wall of the city. To silence the former, a new battery, called the Kahoo Tehree or east battery, was established on a ridge to the E. of the rocky ridge with two 5½-inch mortars, which, not proving sufficient, I substituted for them two 8-inch mortars and a 9-pr. I afterwards added a 24-pr. howitz. to enfilade the wall running eastwards from the mound.

Before the sandbag battery could be made for the 9-pr., actg. Bombdr. Brenna, of Capt. Ommaney's co. R.A., quite a lad, commanded and pointed the 9-pr. in the open, and silenced the enemy's gun in battery in the bastion, destroying besides its defences. I praised him for his good service on the ground, and promoted him.

The two 8-inch mortars, and occasionally the two 10-inch mortars of the left attack, answered the garden battery, shelling also the Nia Bustie, and five wells where the Sepoys had taken up their quarters on account of the good water.

After the capture of Jhansi we had proof of havoc caused by the shelling and cannonade in the fort and city. Beside the damage done to the houses and buildings, the rebels acknowledge to have lost from sixty to seventy men a day killed.

Our batteries had by the 30th dismantled the defences of the fort and city, or disabled their guns. It is true the rebels had made on the white turret an excellent parapet of large sandbags, which they kept always wet, and still run up fresh in lieu of disabled guns; but their best guns had been disabled, and their best art.-men killed; their fire was therefore no longer serious. However, the obstinate defence of the enemy, the breach, and the extent fired on, had caused a great consumption of ammunition, so much so, that it was evident there would not be sufficient to multiply breaches in the town wall, or to establish a main breach in the south double wall of the fort.

Under these circumstances, the officers comdg. the art. and engns., called to my notice the necessity of having recourse to escalade, to which I gave my consent, requiring, however, that the breach should form an important and principal point of attack. Both of these officers entertained a mistrust of the breach, thinking that it was mined, or not practicable.

Knowing the risk which generally attends escalades, I had recourse to every means in my power for facilitating an entry by the breach. In order to widen it, and destroy still more effectually the retrenchment and stockade which the enemy had constructed in rear of the breach, I kept up a fire day and night on it from the 18-pr. and the eight-inch howitz.; and with the view to prevent the enemy working, and to render the mound too hot for them, I shelled it and the adjoining houses day and night from the various batteries in the centre and left attacks. Lieut. Stuart, By.A., made excellent practice, throwing the shells on the spots occupied by the guards of the city walls.

I had made arrangements on the 30th for storming, but the general action on the 1st inst. with the so-called army of the Peshwa, which advanced across the Betwa to relieve it, caused the assault to be deferred.

With the view to acquire rapid information respecting the enemy's movements, I established a telegraph on a hill commanding Jhansi and the surrounding country. It was of great use telegraphing the Ranees' flight, the approach of the enemy from the Betwa, &c.

On the 2nd inst. Maj. Bouleau reported to me that he had made all the necessary preparations for the escalade, and that a 24-pr. howitz. had been placed in battery in front of the Jokun Bagh, for the purpose of enfilading and clearing during the night the wall from the mound to the fort, and the rocket bastion which is on it.

I issued a division order for the assault of the defences of the city wall, of which a copy, with a plan of attack, was furnished to the officers in command.

I have the honour to enclose copies of reports from Brig. Stuart, comdg. my 1st brig., and Brig. Steuart, comdg. my 2nd brig., of the operations of their respective columns against Jhansi.

The left attack, ably and gallantly conducted by Brig. Stuart, succeeded perfectly, its right column passing without loss or difficulty through the breach, which turned out as well as I thought it would; and the left effecting, with some casualties, the escalade of the rocket bastion. Col. Louth, comdg. H.M.'s 86th regt., acted with cool judgment, and I witnessed with lively pleasure the devotion and gallantry of his regt.

The 3rd Europ., under Lieut. col. Liddell, did their duty, as they always have done; but they could not control adverse circumstances, arising from bad ladders and a mistake in the road. They returned to the assault with alacrity, and fought their way through the town manfully.

I beg leave to support earnestly the recommendations of officers contained in these reports of the brig., particularly of Captain Darby, wounded; Lieut. Dartnell, severely wounded in three places, who led the assault of the rocket bastion; and Lieut. Fox, severely wounded. It will be a gratification also to the relatives of Lieuts. Micklejohn and Dick, of the By. Engns., to know that these two young officers had gained my esteem by the intelligence and coolness which they evinced as engineer officers during the siege. I should have recommended both for promotion, if they had not died in their country's cause, for conspicuous gallantry in leading the way up two scaling ladders.

The 86th on the road to the palace from the mound sustained many casualties, from their left flank being exposed, as they passed through an open space to a flanking musketry fire from an outwork of the fort, and from houses, and the palace itself to their front. I directed loopholes for riflemen to be made through houses, which brought a fire to bear on the outwork of the fort, a large house to be occupied close to the palace, and covered communication to be made to the mound.

The skirmishers of the regt. penetrated gallantly into the palace. The few men who still held it made an obstinate resistance, setting fire to trains of gunpowder, from which several of the 86th received fatal injuries.

Having received no reports from the right attack, composed of the 3rd Europ. and Hyderabad Contingent, I made my way to them in the south-east quarter of the city. I found them engaged with the enemy, and making their way to the palace; the rebels were firing at them from the houses, which the troops were breaking open, and clearing of their defenders.

I found Lieut. col. Turnbull, comdg. the arty. here, wounded mortally. I deeply regret to say, by a musket shot from a house.

He had followed me through the breach into the streets, and having received directions from me to bring guns into the city to batter houses in which rebels held out, he had gone round by the right to the east quarter of the city to fix the road by which they were to enter. The Ambagat was the best for guns, but it was so barricaded by masses of stones that it could not be opened for several hours.

In the despatches I have recorded the excellent service performed by Lieut. col. Turnbull, particularly in the general action of the 31st, always exposing himself to the fire of the enemy in order to choose the best positions for his guns. This devoted officer was as useful to me as commandant of arty. as capt. of a troop of H. A.

His premature fall prevented his receiving the reward which was his due. I can now only earnestly recommend that his numerous family may inherit their father's claims on his country.

The right and left attacks being now concentrated in the palace, I gained possession of a large portion of the city by advancing the 3rd Eur. to the N.E. and occupying the Barahong gate, on which I rested their right flank, forming an oblique line from the gate to the palace with the 3d Eur., and the 86th in the palace; the two regiments occupying with pickets commanding houses to their front. This line was a prolongation of the second line leading from the mound under the front to the palace. This done, it was necessary to clear the large portion of the city in rear of this oblique line of the numerous armed rebels who remained in the houses, and who were firing on the troops. This was not effected without bloody, often hand-to-hand combats; one of the most remarkable of them was between detachments of H.M.'s 85th Regt. and 3rd Eur., and thirty or forty Velatie Sowars, the body guard of the Ranees, in the palace stables under the fire of the fort. The Sowars, full of opium, defended their stables, firing with muskets and pistols from the windows and loopholes, and cutting with their tulwars, and from behind the doors. When driven in they retreated behind their horses, still firing or fighting with their swords in both hands till they were shot or bayoneted, struggling even when dying on the ground to strike again. A party of them remained in a room off the stables, which was on fire, till they were half burnt; their clothes in flames, they rushed out hacking at their assailants, and guarding their heads with their shields.

Capt. Rose, A. de C., saved the life of a man of the 86th, who was down, by bayoneting his assailant.

All the Sowars were killed, but not without several casualties on our side. The gallant soldiers captured in the quarters of the Sowars, the Ranees' standards, three kettle drums and horses, and an English union jack of silk, which Sir R. Hamilton tells me Lord W. Bentinck had given the grandfather of the husband of the Ranees, with the permission to have it carried before him, as a reward for his fidelity, a privilege granted to no other Indian prince. I granted the soldiers their request to hoist on the Palace the flag of their country, which they had so bravely won. Capt. Sandwith, who was wounded, commanded with spirit the Europeans on this occasion, and Serg. Brown, of the commiss. depar., was the first to dash boldly into the stables.

Numerous incidents marked the desperate feeling which animated the defenders. A retainer of the Ranees tried to blow up himself and his wife; failing in the attempt, he endeavoured to cut her to pieces, and then killed himself. Two Vilaities, attacked by the Videttes, threw a woman who was with them into a well, and then jumped down themselves.

Whilst engaged in the town, I received a report from the officer comdg. one of the Hyderabad cav. flying camps, that a large body of the enemy, flying from the town, had tried to force his picquet; that few had succeeded, but that the main body, from 350 to 500 strong, had been driven back, and had occupied a high and rocky hill to the west of the fort; that he had surrounded the hill with cav. till reinforcements were sent. I immediately ordered out from the camps of the two brigades, the available troops of all arms against the hill. The enclosed report from Maj. Gall shows how satisfactorily these rebels were disposed of. Lieut. Park was killed whilst gallantly leading on a party of the 24th By. N.I. along the ridge of the hill. The Ranees' father, Mamoo Salib, was amongst the rebels; he was wounded on the hill, and captured some days afterwards, and hanged at the Jokun Bagh.

After having cleared the quarter of the town in our possession of the enemy, I had intended attacking the remainder of it, but deferred doing so till the next day, on Brigdr. Stuart's representation, that the men were too much exhausted for any further operations that day.

Towards sunset it was telegraphed from the Observatory that the enemy were approaching from the east. I had, therefore, to re-occupy with all the force I could collect the field of action of the Betwa, the devoted troops marching to a fresh combat after thirteen hours' fighting in a burning sun with as much spirit as if they had not been engaged at all.

The alarm proved to be a false one, troops from Tehree having been mistaken for the enemy.

Next day Brigdr. Stuart and myself occupied the rest of the city by a combined movement, assisted by Maj. Gall, who spiritedly scaled the bastion at the Onow gate from his flying camp, and capturing the gun that was there, threw it down the rampart.

The following morning a wounded Mahratta, retainer of the Ranees, was sent into me from Capt. Abbott's flying camp. He stated that the Ranees, accompanied by 300 Vilaities and twenty-five Sowars, fled that night from the fort; that after leaving it they had been headed back by one of the picquets, where the Ranees and her party separated, she herself taking to the right with a few Sowars in the direction of her intended flight to Bandiri. The Observatory also telegraphed "Enemy escaping to the N.E." I immediately sent off strong detachments of H.M.'s 14th Lt. Dragns., 3rd Lt. Cav. and Hyderabad Cav. to pursue, with guns to support them, as it was said that Tantia Topce had sent a force to meet her. I also sent Brigdr. Stuart with cav. to watch the fords of the Betwa.

In the meantime detachments of the 86th and 3rd Europe. took possession of the fortress.

In sight of Bandiri, twenty-one miles from Jhansi, the Cav. came in sight of the Irr. Horse, sent to meet the Ranees, which separated, probably with the view to mislead her pursuers as to her real course. Lieut. Dowker, Hyderabad Cav., was sent by Capt. Forbes through the town of Bandiri, whilst he with the 3rd Lt. Cav. and 14th Lt. Dragns. passed it by the left. In the town Lieut. Dowker saw traces of the Ranees' hasty flight, and her tent, in which was an unfinished breakfast. On the other side of the town he came up with and cut up forty of the enemy, consisting of Rohillas and Ben. Irr. Cav. Lieutenant Dowker was gaining fast on the Ranees, who, with four attendants, was seen escaping on a grey horse, when he was dismounted by a severe wound, and obliged to give up the pursuit.

From the time the troops took the palace the rebels lost heart, and began to leave the town and fort. Nothing could prove more the efficiency of the investment than the number of them cut up by the picquets of the flying camps; the woods, gardens, and roads round the town were strewn with the corpses of fugitive rebels. The Ranees' flight was the signal for a general retreat. Early in the morning I caused the outskirts of the city to be scoured with cav. and inf.; it will give some idea of the destruction of insurgents which ensued when a party of the 14th drag. alone killed two hundred in one patrol. The rebels, who were chi fly Vilaities and Pathans, generally sold their lives as dearly as they could, fighting to the last with their usual dexterity and firmness. A band of forty of these desperadoes barricaded themselves in a spacious house with a court yard, vaults, &c. Before they were aware of its strength, it was attacked by a detachment of Hyderabad inf. under Capt. Hare, with the loss of Capt. Sinclair, of whose conduct it is my duty again to make honourable mention. Reinforcements and several pieces of siege art. were brought up by Maj. Orr, who commanded the attack against the house; but even when it had been breached and knocked to pieces the rebels continued to resist in the ruined passages and vaults. They were all as usual destroyed, but not without several casualties on our part. Maj. Orr expresses his obligations to Capt. Woolcombe and Douglas, of the By. and Beng. arty. Lieut. Lewis, and Ensign Fowler, of H.M.'s 86th regt., the first very severely wounded, who led the men, and also Lieut. Simpson, 23rd regt. B.N.I., wounded.

Capt. Abbott, Hyder. cav., speaks highly of the gallantry with which Lieut. Dunn and detachments of the 1st and 4th Hyder. cav. stormed, dismounted, a house and garden held obstinately by the fugitives.

It was not till Jhansi was taken that its great strength was known.

There was only one part of the fortress, the south curtain, which was considered practicable for breaching. But, when inside, we saw this was a mistake, there being at some distance in rear of the curtain a massive wall fifteen or twenty feet thick, and immediately in rear of this a deep tank cut out of the live rock.

I beg leave to bring to the favourable notice of the C. in C. the conduct of the troops under my command in the siege investment and capture of Jhansi.

They had to contend against an enemy more than double their numbers, behind formidable fortifications, who defended themselves afterwards from house to house, in a spacious city, often under the fire of the fort; afterwards in the suburbs, and in very difficult ground outside the walls. The investing cav. force were day and night, for seventeen days, on arduous duty, the men not taking their clothes off, the horses saddled and bridled up at night. The nature of the defence and the strictness of the investment gave rise to continued and fierce combats; for the rebels, having no hope, sought to sell their lives as dearly as they could. But the discipline and gallant spirit of the troops enabled them to overcome difficulties and opposition of every sort, to take the fortified city of Jhansi by storm, subduing the strongest fortress in Central India, and killing 5,000 of its rebel garrison.

According to the first reports which I received, only 3,000 rebels were killed, but those received since the withdrawal of the seven flying camps make the loss of the enemy amount to above 5,000 killed. Native accounts received by Brigdr. Wheeler at Saugor make the loss of rebels to amount to more than 5,000.

I beg to recommend to H. B. for gallant and good service in investing the fortress and city of Jhansi—Maj. Scudamore, H.M.'s 14th Lt. dragns., the sen. off. in command of the flying camps; Maj. Gall, H.M.'s 14th Lt. dragns.; Maj. Forbes, c.b., comdg. 3rd Bom. Lt. cav.; Capt. Abbott, and Lieut. Dowe, Hyder. cav.

The C. in C. will learn with pleasure that the troops under my command treated with great humanity the women and children of Jhansi; neither the desperate resistance of the rebels, nor the recollections of Jhansi of last year could make them forget that in an English soldier's eyes women and children are spared; so far from hunting, the troops were seen sharing their rations with them. I gave orders also that destitute women and children of Jhansi should be fed out of the prize grain.

I have the honour to enclose a list of the guns and ordnance stores captured in the city and fort of Jhansi, and of the casualties of the force during the siege. I regret much that our loss should have been so considerable, but it was caused in a great measure by the strict investment which proved so fatal to the enemy, and loss of my force is out of all proportion smaller than that of the enemy.

They lost fifty to my one killed, not counting the wounded on our side.

I beg leave to state the obligations I am under to the following officers for the services which they have rendered to me during the siege operations and capture of Jhansi:—

Brig. Stuart, comdg. 1st brig.; Brig. Stuart, c.b., comdg. 2nd brig.; Lieut. col. Louth, comdg. H.M.'s 86th regt.; Lieut. col. Liddell, comdg. 3rd By. Eur. regt.; Maj. Scudamore, comdg. HUGH ROSE, maj. gen.,
Comdg. Central India field force.

No. 101.

From Brigadier C. S. Stuart, Comdg. 1st Brigade,
C. I. F. F., to the Asst. Adj. Gen., C. I. F. F.

Camp, Jhansi, 13th April, 1858.

Sir,—In compliance with Field Force Orders, No. 7, of yesterday's date, I have the honour to transmit herewith a return of casualties in the 1st Brig. C. I. F. F., during the siege and storming of Jhansi, and with reference to the latter beg to place on record the part taken in it by the brig under my command.

2. As directed in F. F. Orders, dated 2nd April, the assaulting column of the 1st Brig. was formed up at daybreak of the 3rd April, ready to move on the two points of attack which had been indicated, viz., the breach at the mound and the rocket tower, and the low curtain immediately to the right of it. Lieut.-Col. Lowth, H.M.'s 86th Regt., commanded the former, Maj. Stuart, M.M.'s 86th Regt., the latter, attack. On the signal being given, both parties moved steadily to the point, under a smart fire from the enemy. Capt. Dasher, H.M.'s 86th Regt., led the stormers up the breach in the most gallant manner, and the enemy were driven before them at all points, while at the same time Maj. Stuart's attack by escalade at the rocket tower succeeded admirably, though hotly opposed. On gaining the town, Lieut.-Col. Lowth, with great judgment, moved part of his men to his right, and thus took the enemy in flank and rear, when they were meeting the right attack of the 2nd Brig. with great vigour. All the troops then of the 1st Brig. concentrated in the Ranees' Palace, which was taken possession of by Lieut.-Col. Lowth and his men in the most gallant manner. As the Maj.-Gen. himself was witness of greater part of the operations at this, and at a subsequent period, I do not enter into further details.

I beg in conclusion to bring to the notice of the Maj.-Genl. the excellent and gallant behaviour of both officers and men of the 1st Brig. on the occasion; the energy and judgment displayed by Lieut.-Col. Lowth, H.M.'s 86th Regt., proved of the greatest service, and much contributed to the success of our attack. Maj. Stuart, H.M.'s 86th Regt., carried out the duties confided to him in the most satisfactory manner, and led the escalading party with the greatest gallantry; he was assisted by Lieut. Dartnell, and Ensigns Sewell and Flower, of H.M.'s 86th Regt., who were all wounded, the first two officers severely; also by Lieut. Webber, R.E., Comdg. the ladder party of the Royal Sappers, who most ably performed their duty. On this occasion Lieut. Dartnell greatly distinguished himself, as also Serg. Allyn Wolfe and Private Roger Mathews, both of H.M.'s 86th Regt. The conduct of Lieut. Jerome and Private Burns, H.M.'s 86th Regt., has also been brought to my notice. Under a murderous fire they carried off Ens. Sewell, who had fallen severely wounded, and who would otherwise have been cut up. I lament to say that Surg. Stock, H.M.'s 86th Regt., was killed near the Palace, whilst most nobly and courageously attending the wounded under a hot fire. I beg also to record an act of daring on the part of Havildar Shaick Dawood, Lt. Cy. 25th Regt. N.I., brought to my notice by Capt. Little, comdg. that regt. After an entrance had been effected into the city, a number of rebels were found to have taken refuge in the recesses of a large well, the only approach to which was by narrow and steep stairs having a sharp turning, at which one resolute man could have kept off any number. Whilst measures were being arranged for seizing these rebels, Havildar Shaick Dawood volunteered to capture them, so fixing his bayonet he boldly descended the well, and being followed by others, brought up thirteen of the enemy.

C. S. STUART, Brigdr.,
Comd. 1st Brig. C.I.F.F.

No. 236.

From Brigdr. C. Stuart, C.B., Comdg. 2nd Brig. C. I. F. F., to the Asst. Adj. Gen., C. I. F. F.
Camp, Jhansi, April 29, 1858.

Sir,—In obedience to orders received through you, the brig. under my command moved in two columns on the morning of the 3rd of April to the assault of the town of Jhansi.

The left column, led by Capt. Robison, 3rd By. Eur. regt., the right by Lieut. col. Liddell, advanced with great steadiness through a very heavy fire of musketry and wall pieces towards the ladders, on reaching which they were assailed with rockets, earthen pots filled with powder, and in fact every sort of missile.

On arriving at the temple, where the reserve of which I was in command was to take up its position, Maj. Boileau, Madras engr., came to me and reported that the ladders were without protection, and requested me to give him some Eurs. to protect them. I therefore gave him the hundred men of the 3rd By. Eur. regt. that were with the reserve; Lieuts. Meiklejohn and Dick, of the By. engs., led the way up the ladders of the right column, both of whom were wounded, the latter severely. The ladders were found in some instances too short, in others too weak, breaking under the men, who were withdrawn from the heavy fire to which they were thus unnecessarily exposed, and the movement was made with great precision and coolness.

Shortly after this, Capt. Robison, 3rd By. Eur. regt., was informed by Capt. Darby, exec. engr., that some of the 86th regt. had entered by the breach to his left, and he doubled some of his party round to that point, at which he effected an entry and cleared the ramparts so as to enable the remainder to mount the ladders unopposed. Lieut. col. Liddell, on finding his ladders of no use, ordered Lieut. Goodfellow, of the By. engs., to try a bag of powder at a postern, but from being built up inside, no entry could be effected; however, by this time Capt. Robison had made good his lodgment, and was followed by the right column, when all proceeded towards the palace, which, as the maj. gen. is aware, was taken after a desperate resistance.

Both columns behaved with great coolness and gallantry, and I trust I may be pardoned for bringing their leaders to the notice of the Maj. gen., as also Capt. Sandwith and Lieut. Park, 3rd By. Eur. Regt.; Lieut. Goodfellow, By. Engns., and also Privates Few and Whirlpool, 3rd By. Eur. Regt., of whom Lieut. col. Liddell speaks in the highest terms. Capt. Robison's conduct in doubling round with some of his men to the breach speaks for itself; but he has brought to my notice Corporal Hard, Privates Roger and Archibald, all of the Grenadier Co., and Private Drummond No. 1, and Private Doran No. 3 Co., of the 3rd By. Eur. Regt., all of whom fought most gallantly at the head of the ladders till they gave way. Ensign Newport and Private Gillman, of No. 1 Co., 3rd By. Eur. Regt., assisted by Corporal Hard, of the Grenadiers, carried off the body of Lieut. Fox, of the Madras Sappers and Miners, through the hottest of the fire, after Capt. Robison had ordered the troops to retire; Lieut. Bonus, By. Engns., has also been specially brought to my notice for the gallant manner in which he led up and maintained his position on the ladders, until disabled and knocked over by the blow of a stone.

Capt. Todd, brig. maj., and Capt. Leckie, dep. ass. gr. mr. gen., of the 2nd Brig., on this, as on every previous opportunity, have afforded me every assistance, and it is only to the circumstance of all former operations in which they have been engaged being conducted so entirely under the Maj. gen. as to render any special report from me unnecessary, that I have failed in earlier bringing my sense of their worth to his notice; a circumstance which I feel sure will not act to their detriment.

C. STUART, Comdg. 2nd Brig. C.I.F.F.

Saugor Field Force.

To Maj. Gen. Sir W. R. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff, Allahabad.

Sir,—I feel much gratification in forwarding the accompanying report from Brigdr. M'Duff, comdg. the 2nd inf. brig. Saugor field div., of an action fought with the rebels posted in the village of Sahao, and their complete defeat with great loss, and which I have the honour to beg may be submitted to H.E. the C. in C.

Brigdr. M'Duff has brought to my notice the officers noted in the margin*, with a request that I would recommend them to the favourable notice of H.E.; I do so with great satisfaction, trusting the C. in C. will be pleased to extend to them his most favourable consideration.

G. C. WHITLOCK, Maj. gen.
Comdg. Saugor field div.

Camp Syrenugger, Sept. 9, 1858.

Camp, near Rajpore, Sept. 5, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Maj. gen. Whitlock, comdg. Saugor field div., as follows:—Having received reliable information that the rebels, who have lately been plundering this district up to the neighbourhood of even Calpie, were under different rebel leaders, to the number of 500 mutineer Sepoys, and about 3,000 matchlockmen, strongly posted in village "Sahao," four miles north of Jaloun, I this morning moved with the force as per margin† to attack them. On nearing the village of Sahao, the rebels, sounding the "Assembly," appeared in great strength on a rising ground crowned by the ruins of an old fort.

Their right was protected by houses and walled gardens, their left by the village of Sahao itself.

From the centre of their position they opened their guns at a distance of 500 yards, and appeared determined to dispute fiercely the ground they held.

My little force was immediately formed up, the guns in the centre under Capt. Ommaney, R.A.; H.M.'s 43rd L.I. on the right of the guns, under Lieut. col. Primrose; a party of Metges' Sikh horse under Lieut. Dick, took ground well to the right, to act as opportunity offered; the remainder of Metges' Sikh horse under Maj. Davis, took ground to the extreme left with orders to sweep round the right of the enemy, and cut off their retreat; a party of 8th irr. cav., under Rissaldar Min Hoossain Ali, remained in support of the guns.

The enemy's fire from their centre was immediately answered by our four guns, the fire from which was excellent, and soon made the enemy abandon, with the loss of a gun, the strong ground he had so well chosen.

The rebel Sepoys of the right wing retired with remarkable steadiness, and in close order; but the left wing retired in great disorder, and in that state were charged in flank by Lieut. Dick, who, under my own eyes, cut up a great number; here this excellent young officer was severely wounded by a sabre cut, but notwithstanding he again charged the mutineers repeatedly, sustaining, I regret to say, two more severe wounds.

I beg leave to bring the dashing soldier-like conduct of this officer to the favourable notice of H.E. the C. in C.

My whole line then advanced, the cav. charging the rebels repeatedly on both flanks, the guns being well to the front, supported by H.M.'s 43rd.

The rebels, now closely pressed, took up a second position on a ridge, but upon our guns again opening with great precision, they again retreated, taking advantage of any cover the ground offered, and defending themselves stoutly in buildings, gardens, &c., on the outskirts of the different villages.

Maj. Davis continued the pursuit for about six miles; that officer's report is attached.

Some mutineers having taken post in village "Rajporeah," Lieut. col. Primrose entered the village with his gallant corps, and destroyed the whole of the rebels concealed there.

The country, from three days' incessant heavy rain, had become nearly impassable for art'y., and that arm deserve great credit for the rapidity with which it advanced; also the inf., which had to march through ploughed fields the day before entirely under water.

From the number of bodies seen on the field, I should estimate the loss of the enemy at between two and three hundred, and twenty-one rebels captured; our loss, I am happy to say, was comparatively small. The defeat of this rebel body was most complete, and will have, I am sure, excellent effect in this part of the country.

Rissaldar—Min Hoossain Ali, 8th irr. cav.
† Staff, 2 officers; Royal art., 3 officers, 89 men, 4 guns; 8th irr. cav., 51 men; Metges' Sikh horse, 2 officers, 169 men; Jhansi Mounted Police, 2 officers, 58 men; H.M.'s 43rd R.I., 13 officers, 235 men; Jhansi Mil. Foot Police, 2 officers, 354 men. Total, 24 officers, 956 men, 4 guns.

I beg in conclusion to express my obligations to the following officers, and to request that you will be pleased to recommend them to the favourable notice of H.E. the C. in C.

Lieut. col. Primrose, comdg. H.M.'s 43rd L.I., who gave me every aid and assistance in his power.

Capt. Dovehill, my brig. maj., with whose zeal and attention to the duty of his department I am fully satisfied, more especially in carrying my orders in the field.

Capt. Ommaney, R.A., for the rapid manner in which he brought his battery to the front, and the steadiness with which the guns were served.

Dr. Barclay, sent. surg., in charge of the troops, whose attention to the wounded and sick deserves much praise.

Maj. Davis, comdg. the cav. of the field force, for the able manner in which he conducted the pursuit of the enemy.

Capt. Terman, dep'ty. comr., who kindly placed his services at my disposal, and acted as my A. de C. on the occasion, and who has given me much valuable assistance in procuring information relative to the positions occupied by the rebels.

Min Hoossain Ali, an old and faithful soldier, maintained the high character he already enjoys.

J. MACDUFF, brigdr. comdg. 2nd brig.,
Saugor field div.

No. 18.

From Maj. W. Davis, Comdg. Cav. 2nd brig., Saugor div., to Capt. Dovehill, maj. of brig., 2nd brig. Saugor div.

Camp Rajapore, 5th September, 1858.

Sir,—Under instructions received, I have the honour to report, for the information of Brigdr. Macduff, comdg. the field force, the operations of the cav. placed under my command; strength as per margin.*

On arrival at the enemy's position this morning, at the village of "Sahao," on the action commencing, agreeably to orders, I took post on the left of the line, with half of the Sikh horse, to cut off the enemy's retreat, Lieut. Dick, with the remaining portion, taking post on the extreme right.

On the enemy retiring from their position, I sent Lieut. McInroy, 19th regt. Madras N.I., doing duty with the Sikh horse, to the left, with the civil and mil. mtd. police, to turn the rebels back to the centre of our line; this duty was well performed, some of the enemy being cut up, it enabled me to charge them with great effect.

I was well supported by Metges' Sikhs, who suffered severely in the hand-to-hand encounter which ensued.

Of Lieut. Dick's operations on the right, it is unnecessary for me to speak, the brigdr. having personally witnessed his dauntless and glorious charge into a body of some three or four hundred Sepoys. I have only to regret his being severely wounded in four places by sword cuts, not, however, before he had cut down some five men with his own hand.

I beg to mention the support and assistance I received from Lieut. Sowers, comdt. of the Humeerpore district police. On Lieut. Dick being wounded he assumed command, and charged several bodies of the rebels with great success. His horse was shot and bayoneted under him.

On the advance of the cav., he and Lieut. McInroy accompanied me in the pursuit, which was carried far beyond Gohun, and throughout we cut up the rebels in the most satisfactory manner. The old Sepoys were easily distinguished by their keeping well and doggedly together, and of course were marked out accordingly. Our pursuit was brought to a close by our horses being fairly fagged out, and the rebels getting into entrenched gardens and topes, whence cav. could not have dislodged them.

I believe at least two hundred rebels have been killed on the field.

On our way back we visited Gohun—a strong post held an hour before by the rebels, but we found it deserted.

At the request of Lieut. Dick, I have much pleasure in bringing to notice the gallant conduct of Native Dr. Hurree Kishun, attached to the Sikh cav., who received four wounds in the discharge of his duty attending on Lieut. Dick.

Also of Rissaldars Mena Sing and Rajah Pirthee Sing, of Kangra, and Naib Duffadar Dawa Sing, all of the Sikh horse.

W. DAVIS, Maj. comdg. cav. 2nd
brig. Saugor div.

Allahabad Police Battalion.

No. 347 of 1858.—The Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India has much pleasure in directing the publication of the accompanying letter from Capt. T. Dennehy, comdnt. Allahabad div. police batt., No. 107, dated 1st Aug. 1858, and from F. Thompson, Esq., offic. magistrate, Allahabad, dated 2nd Aug., 1858.

They describe an important service admirably performed by a detach. of the Allahabad police batt. under Capt. Dennehy, aided by a small force of Bengal art.

The Gov. Gen. congratulates the officers and men of the Allahabad police force upon the spirit and effect with which their duty was discharged.

From Capt. Dennehy, comdnt. Allahabad div. police batt., to C. B. Thornhill, offg. commisr., 4th div., Allahabad.

SIR,—I have the honour to report, that in obedience to the orders received by me on the 27th ult., directing me to proceed up the Ganges with Mr. Thompson, mag. and collr. of Allahabad, for the purpose of seizing and destroying any boats that might be in the possession of the rebels on the north side of the river opposite this district, I embarked on the 28th ult. on board the H. C.'s str. Berhampooter, in command of the force detailed in the margin.*

In accordance with the wishes of Mr. Thompson, magistrate of Allahabad, we steamed up the river to observe the positions of the boats on the Oude side, of which we had already pretty accurate information, and on the morning of the 30th arrived below Manickpore, where we found that the rebels under Madho Sing, a brother of Benec Madho of Shunkerpore, were assembled to the number of 800 or 1,000 men, and had erected a battery to oppose the further progress of the steamer.

As their arrangements appeared to be made principally with a view to the defences of the front, or river face of their position, I determined to land and attack them in rear, while the guns from the steamer shelled them in front.

I landed a little below Manickpore with Lieut. and Adj. Shaw, and ninety men of the Allahabad mil. police, and Capt. Golab Sing, Attariwallah, and forty men of his Sikh police corps. As we advanced, we found the rebels strongly posted in and below the fort of Manickpore, and in the villages of Manickpore, Meerghurwah, and Shahabad, from whence they opened upon us and upon the steamer with round shot and musketry.

We drove them from each of these positions in succession, killing several as they endeavoured to make a stand at each place, and took possession of their fort, which we had no means of destroying, as it is an old gurree, strongly built of pucca bricks.

They had, however, got their guns away before we got into this place, and on our perceiving a large body of men, many of whom were apparently old Sepoys, formed up with 2 guns in a tope of trees on a rising ground about half a mile to the north-west. I again advanced to attack them, and, thanks to the gallantry of the officers and men who were with me, notwithstanding that their guns opened upon us at two hundred yards, we again drove them out of this position, and followed their guns up to within two miles of Kalleekunker; but my men were then too much exhausted to run any distance, and we could not overtake them, although we got close to them several times; they were drawn by horses, and were pressed on with all speed.

During all this time nothing could be better than the practice from the two 12-pr. howzrs., which had remained on board the Berhampooter with Mr. Thompson; they were served by Serj. J. Carroll, and four gunners of the 3rd co. 5th batt. B.A., and continued throwing shell and shrapnell, mostly at ranges of 500 and 600 yards, among the rebels in our front, as Capt. Dixon, the commander of the steamer, brought his vessel steadily up the river by the battery on the bank, until within sight of the Fort of Kalleekunker; and now having accomplished the object for which we landed, and finding that a large force was coming down from the direction of Kalleekunker, I returned on board, and we proceeded down the river again to Kurra.

I cannot give an accurate estimate of the loss which the enemy may have sustained in killed and wounded, as although I personally can only speak with certainty to twenty men on their side having been killed, I should say that their real loss, from our fire and that of the steamer, was very much greater. Native spies who have since been at Manickpore, report 150 killed and wounded.

We had altogether seven men wounded, of whom two very severely.

Capt. Golab Sing was in the front the whole time with his men, and behaved with gallantry and courage; many of his men are old soldiers. But I would wish particularly to bring to your notice the conduct of the men of the new Sikh levies of this division, who were during the first advance kept in the rear as a reserve, until finding the second village we attacked (Meerghurwah) rather obstinately defended, I ordered them up to the front; they were led by Lieut. Shaw. under the fire from this village for more than eighty yards before they were allowed to cap; nor did they show any disposition to waver, although two of their number were shot down, but delivered their fire by word of command as steadily as if on parade, and took the village with a rush.

On our return downwards towards Allahabad, we landed and destroyed or took away boats at the following places:—

At Guttee we destroyed one boat, and took away two more.

At Karaytee we took away three boats.

At Sumejore we expected to be opposed, as the boats at that place were closed under the Gurree, which is held by Chutterpal Sing, with about 600 men and three small guns. On our landing, however, he evacuated the fort and retired, allowing us to burn, without opposition, the seven boats we found there.

At Jehanabad we burnt eight boats, and about two miles below Jehanabad another boat was destroyed, making altogether twenty-two boats taken away or destroyed during the expedition.

We returned to Allahabad this morning, Aug. 1, 1858.

T. DENNEHY, Capt.,
Comdnt. Allahabad Div. Mil. Police.

No. 261, 1858.

From F. Thompson, Esq., Offg. Magis. of Allahabad, to C. B. Thornhill, Esq., Offg. Commis. Allahabad Div.

Dated Allahabad, Aug. 2, 1858.

SIR,—I have the honour to report for the information of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. that the expedition sent under my charge, for the seizure of the boats on the Oude side of the river Ganges, returned yesterday morning, having taken and burnt the boats noted in the margin.*

The expedition met with no opposition till its arrival at Manickpore, four miles on the east or this side of Kalleekunker. Here we found two guns with some 800 men posted in the villages surrounding the fort ready to oppose us. Capt. Dennehy, in command of the police battalions, will give you an account of the dislodgement of rebels from the various posts, and of the successful issue of the fight.

I was enabled, while Capt. Dennehy was occupying the rebels on shore, to examine the river, but could find no boats. Two had been reported to me as being near the fort, but these must have been removed up to Kalleekunker, or sunk in deep water, as no trace could be found of them.

The fort of Manickpore is situated on a mound some 300 feet high, and rising abruptly from the river, and is surrounded by houses, with broken ground on the north or land side. The work, therefore, to be performed by Capt. Dennehy's small force was no light one. The rebels, with 600 matchlockmen, 200 regular Sepoys and two guns, disputed every inch of ground, and it was not till they found their guns were on the point of being captured, that they eventually retreated across the open country. The fight had, however, lasted for two hours and a half, and Capt. Dennehy's small force was too much fatigued (even if it had been advisable) to follow up the fugitives.

I have mentioned these few facts of the nature of the engagement, in hopes that you will prominently bring forward to the notice of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. the cool and steady conduct of this newly raised corps.

In conclusion, I beg to testify to the willingness and alacrity with which Capt. Dixon, in command of the steamer, and the rest of his crew assisted us on every occasion.

F. THOMPSON, Offg. Magistrate.

AN AMAZON.—A Joan of Arc was made prisoner yesterday (July 18); she is said to have shot one of our men, and to have fought desperately. She is a "Jehadin," a religious fanatic, and sports a green turban, and was, probably, thought to be inspired. She is to be sent prisoner to Umballa.—Greatest's Letters.

* Brought away, 5; destroyed, 4; burnt, 13.—Total, 22.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, Dec. 6, 1858.

LORD DERBY AND RAJAH BROOKE.

A HIGHLY respectable and influential deputation waited upon Lord Derby on Tuesday last with a view to impress upon her Majesty's Government the importance of securing to this country the cession of the territory at present governed by Sir James Brooke. Sarawak, as our readers are doubtless aware, is a slip of fertile land on the coast of Borneo, nearly opposite to Singapore. It extends some sixty miles in length and fifty in breadth, and is described as singularly productive of all kinds of tropical fruits and vegetables. Antimony and coal of good quality likewise occur in considerable abundance, and there is some reason to believe that lead and copper may be found at a short distance in the interior. Previous to the year 1841, this pleasant district was administered by Raja Muda Hassim, in the name of his nephew the Sultan of Borneo. In that year an English adventurer, named James Brooke, made himself busy with the quarrels of the different native tribes, and in the ostensible pursuit of commerce inter-meddled with the political relations of the barbarous inhabitants of the island. Being a man of a resolute and energetic character he soon became a personage of some importance, and gained a complete ascendancy over the mind of the more feeble Muda Hassim. This moral influence he strengthened by pecuniary obligations, until he held the unfortunate Raja firmly in his toils. He then turned upon his friend, and threatened to excite a revolution unless the government of Sarawak was formally ceded to himself. Resistance being impossible, Muda Hassim yielded to superior force, and appointed this Englishman an officer of the Sultan of Borneo. The territory itself was never ceded, for the simple reason that Muda Hassim had no authority to alienate a single acre of land. Himself a servant of the ruling power, he could do no more than appoint a subordinate to himself. That Mr. Brooke was perfectly aware that such was his actual position, is manifest from the great anxiety he displayed to obtain the Sultan's ratification of his appointment. Some time elapsed before he succeeded in gratifying this desire, but on no occasion did the Sultan make over to him the territory of Sarawak as an independent principality. And yet this pirate-governor—for his first proceedings were rather those of a buccanier than of a legitimate trader—now proposes to cede in perpetuity the district intrusted to his administration, either to his own Government or to that of some other nation. We need not pause to stigmatise the lightly-worn patriotism that is ready to betray the interests of his country for a little gold, but we insist that Sir James Brooke has no power to do more than dispose of the government of Sarawak for the remainder of his own life. Even such a proceeding as this is repugnant to European usages and opinions, though not inconsistent with Oriental customs and political notions. Strange to say, Sir James has contrived to play with such good effect upon the ignorance and cupidity of the mercantile community of this country, that three hundred merchants and men of wealth have affixed their signatures to a petition requiring her Majesty's Government to commit an act of violence and spoliation. They have called upon the Prime Minister of a Protestant Sovereign in the nineteenth century to stretch forth his arm and wrest from a helpless barbarian an integral portion of his dominions. Their arguments are as loose as the political morality they are intended to recommend. In the first place, it is attempted to be shown that the plunder is worth having, and that it will pay to do wrong. Having thus baited the hook, they insinuate that if this country does not secure the tempting prize, it will be seized by some other Power less scrupulous or more discerning. It is the interest of England, they go on to say, to monopolise the Eastern Archipelago, and to keep out all other nations by every means whatsoever.

It is no great wonder that such reasoning as this failed to convince a Peer of England that might could ever constitute right, or that an act of robbery may be justified by the temptation. Lord Derby refused to bend the knee to success unsanctified in the means, or to exalt an enterprising adventurer into a hero. His lordship further expressed his belief that it was impolitic to extend the British Empire beyond its present bounds, for each new accession of territory is a point of weakness. Of the wisdom of this statement there can be little doubt. In the event of a war with a maritime Power, every dependency, however insignificant, would look to this country for support, and thus the resources of the empire would be frittered away all over the world. Strictly speaking, neither France, nor Holland, nor America, has any right to take possession of Sarawak; but, in any case, it is not for Great Britain to act unjustly under the plea of preventing others from doing so. Some would-be politicians seem to imagine that the British flag has a prescriptive right to wave wherever a bed of coal is suspected to exist, and that it little matters what territories we annex, provided they contain mineral resources. But no nation ever flourished where gold was preferred to honour, and where principles were postponed to commercial advantages. To follow out this new doctrine in its logical sequences, it will become the duty of the British Government to appropriate every island in "the ocean-stream," and every sea-board that lies between Gibraltar and Hong Kong. Nor may we delay, lest, perchance, the Russians, the French, or the Americans, should anticipate us, and take the lead in the spoliation of defenceless chiefs and barbarian potentates. But why is it necessary that Sarawak should be occupied by a Christian Power in order to "develop its resources?" Without any such occupation of the territory, the coal-beds can be worked and the veins of antimony explored, while armed steamers sweep the sea of pirates and protect the peaceful trader. Of this, at least, we may be assured, that if the time ever come when our prestige in the East shall depend upon the possession of Sarawak, that prestige will have already departed, and our power be crumbling into the dust. If the empire of England be doomed to decay, the evil hour will not be put off a single moment by unjust, rapacious, violent, and dishonourable measures.

M. DE MONTALEMBERT ON THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY.

THE opinion of an intelligent and impartial foreigner, whether favourable or otherwise, is ever received with interest, and usually quoted as a valuable testimony, notwithstanding the errors which may naturally be expected to impair its authority. If this remark holds good in ordinary cases, it becomes tenfold more applicable when the sentiments expressed are those of a practical statesman, an historical inquirer, and an eloquent orator. The Count de Montalembert is not only all this—but he combines the double advantage of being thoroughly acquainted with the habits, usages, and conduct of the people he criticises, and of being able to judge them without partiality or restraint. The testimony of such a man cannot be too highly estimated, and the East-India Company have reason to congratulate themselves on obtaining the support of such a puissant champion. He is not, indeed, their blind admirer and partisan. He denounces their shortcomings as fearlessly as he applauds their good deeds and the general wisdom of their policy. But, on the whole, he strikes a handsome balance in their favour, and claims for them the merit of having done more good and less harm to the races subject to their sway, than any nation similarly situated, whether belonging to ancient or to modern times. He recognises the smallness of their means, and is proportionately astonished at the great results they have achieved. They have not done, perhaps, all that they ought to have done, but, at least, they have substituted a mild and equitable rule for an oppressive and capricious tyranny. The commencement of their brilliant career may have been stained with the selfishness characteristic of all mercantile corporations, but during the last fifty years, at least, their agents and representatives have strenuously sought to expiate the faults of their predecessors, and to render the British supremacy at once a blessing and a necessity for the inhabitants of Hindostan. It was not in the power of the Court of Directors to eradicate the haughtiness, the cold reserve, the insolent deportment, which are supposed to be incidental to the English temperament, but they ever struggled to modify the consequences of the mingled egotism and energy of the Anglo-Saxon race, so apt to degenerate into coarseness and brutality, as may be seen in the United States. Besides, there can be no doubt as to the real and positive benefits bestowed upon the territories subject to their government. Slavery and forced labour have been abolished, and the greatest respect, carried even too far, has been exhibited for all rights and privileges enjoyed by the natives previous to the British conquest. It was owing to this praiseworthy reluctance to interfere with the minor details of the administration, that native subordinates were so long enabled to carry on their evil practices with impunity, but the English magistrates have rarely, if ever, themselves been guilty of cruelty and corruption. The utmost care has been taken to prevent the proprietors of the soil from being unfairly dispossessed, though, it must be confessed, that in this respect their intelligence was not on a par with the goodness of their intentions, and that consequently the measures they adopted were ill calculated to attain the desired object.

With regard to annexation, M. de Montalembert is inclined to condemn the Court of Directors for their tardiness and hesitation, rather than for their alleged rapacity and lust of aggrandisement. He maintains that the British Government has not laid sufficient stress upon the moral responsibility attached to its position as the paramount power in India, and that it was bound either to enforce good order and the administration of justice throughout the Peninsula, or to abstain entirely from all interference with the internal administration of semi-independent states. Unhappily, the Company halted between these two decided lines of conduct, and compromised its own character by countenancing in some degree the malversation and tyranny that prevail at most native courts. The Count likewise finds much fault with the proceedings of the Law Courts, and with the revenue system generally, and on these points it is impossible to deny that a radical reform is urgently required.

On the subject of Christianity, M. de Montalembert takes the part of the Company against its detractors and opponents. "It never pretended," he says, "after the manner of the Spanish and Portuguese conquerors, to labour for the greater glory of God," nor did it ever undertake to impose true religion by force on nations fanatically attached to their own errors, but, on the other hand, no race subjected to its laws has disappeared or been extinguished. Slowly and surely were the social crimes suppressed, which had come to be identified with the religion of the Hindoos, such as Suttee, Female Infanticide, and Thuggee. At the same time, all rash and imprudent attempts at proselytism have been discountenanced, which could only have tended to increase the natural antipathy between the two races, and might have terminated in the horrible atrocities too justly imputed to the Spaniards in Mexico and Peru. No obstacles, however, were placed in the way of missionaries, whether Catholic or Protestant, and the most perfect toleration of all sects and creeds is maintained from one end of the empire to the other. Perhaps, sarcastically adds this eloquent writer, those who make periodical apologies for the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and who praise Charlemagne for having condemned to death the Saxons who presumed to escape from baptism by flight, would think it far better to slaughter the natives while baptising them, as did the Spaniards in America; but the majority of Christians in these days are likely to be of a different opinion, and little disposed to blame the East-India Company for having adopted a system which is followed by the French in Algeria, and the introduction of which into China has been the object of the joint action of the two great Western Powers. The Count further approves of Lord Stanley's answer to the delegates of the Protestant Missionary Societies, but regrets that so much deference should have been paid to the caste prejudices of the natives. In conclusion, while he warmly eulogises the heroic conduct of the English, both men and women, during the late mutinies, he protests against the continuance of wholesale executions, and urges the necessity of henceforth tempering justice with mercy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

UNPOPULARITY OF THE ENGLISH RAJ. TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—In your issue of the 29th November, in noticing my pamphlet, "Why is the English Rule odious to the Natives of India?" you seem to indicate your opinion, that though Mr. Shore wrote a quarter of a century ago that the English rule was unpopular in India, yet that at any rate such is not the case at the present day.

In the existing state of affairs in India, no subject can be of greater importance than a correct understanding of the feelings of the natives towards us. Without such understanding there is no hope of a policy the object of which shall be to promote the amalgamation of the races. People may say that things have changed since Mr. Shore wrote his papers, and that, if the existing servants of Government were appealed to, the verdict would now be very different.

I acknowledge that I have not very much positive evidence to refer to, but still I have a little, and that little is confirmatory to a most extraordinary degree of Mr. Shore's statements.

Mr. Raikes, no undistinguished member of the Bengal Civil Service, Judge of the Sudder Court at Agra, and late Civil Commissioner with Sir Colin Campbell, has recently published "Notes on the Revolt in the North-Western Provinces." He enjoyed from his position in the service, and the appointments which he has filled, ample means of learning with what feelings the natives regard us and our administration; and the whole tendency of his book demonstrates him to be an impartial witness when truth compels him to write that which is unfavourable to the system which his life has been spent in administering.

At page 22 he gives a letter from the late Mr. George Jackson Christian, Commissioner of Secapore in Oude, written at the commencement of the disturbances. Mr. Christian writes:—"The village system, which makes all men equal in their poverty, is now fairly on its trial in the disturbed districts, and government has hardly a single man of influence to look to in them."

At page 6 of his work Mr. Raikes writes, when speaking of Mr. Colvin, late Lieutenant governor in the North-West:—"It was no fault of Mr. Colvin's that our civil courts were still nearly as unpopular as ever. He had done what he could to reform them."

At page 35 he gives the opinion of Sir Henry Lawrence, that our "courts were hard of approach, technical in operation, and expensive even in their happiest issues."

At page 170 Mr. Raikes speaks of the fatal error which we have committed in attempting to force the policy of Europe on the people of Asia, which, he justly observes, must be corrected in future.

In these few short sentences, embodying opinions by such men as Sir Henry Lawrence, Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Raikes, there are grounds enough shown for the unpopularity of our rule with the natives. Can it possibly be otherwise if their statements regarding our courts be correct? and that they are so, is vouched by heaps of letters in every mail which arrives from the East. If you would have us to believe that the natives are in love with our rule, you must convince us that the alleged evils and unpopularity of our courts are unfounded. If it be true that they are as represented, it is not in human nature that the people subjected to their operation can view them, or the Government which enforces them, otherwise than with abhorrence.

In your issue of the 9th Nov. you gave the following extract from a leading Calcutta newspaper:—"In fact the country is against us, and solely owing to the courts. They have worked havoc with all the old landed proprietors; and these ruined men and our sepoys are the malcontents, and command the entire sympathy of the people."

The Times newspaper, besides its ordinary correspondents at Calcutta and Bombay, has its Special Correspondent in the North-West. The letters of all these gentlemen teem with assertions of the unpopularity of our rule and the hatred of the people towards us, which is mainly attributed by them to the detestation in which our courts are everywhere held. Those letters are too universally read to require that I should seek to encumber your space with extracts from them. I hold them to be the more worthy of note, because in opposition to the views advocated by the Times itself; for it is not many days since I read a long article in that journal dilating upon the blessings conferred by our rule upon the natives of India, and drawing a comparison of the miseries which would await them if it should be their misfortune again to come under the power of their own countrymen. Whilst upon this topic I can hardly do better than conclude my letter with a brief extract from Mr. Raikes' work, from which the reader may perhaps infer with me that the experienced Bengal civilian does not look upon native rule in quite so depreciatory a light as does the Times.

At page 87 he narrates a visit which he made, when on his way to join Sir Colin Campbell's camp, to the powerful independent chief of Putialee. He says:—

"After a visit of some days to Putialee, I can more than ever enter into the feelings of aversion with which our ablest officers regard any further annexation of native States. I can conceive no greater crime, nor any more extravagant political blunder, than it would be to annex such a principality as this of Putialee. To say that the subjects of this State are as contented and happy as those in our own contiguous districts is not enough. They get, I believe, cheaper and speedier justice than their near neighbours at Paniput did under the late Agra regimes. They are, if anything, better fed, clothed, and housed than our own subjects."

The foregoing are almost the identical words in which Mr. Shore, twenty-five years previously, described the condition of the people of Oude when not subjected to our interference; and he gives the testimony of Lord Cornwallis, the Court of Directors, and Major Sutherland, the Resident, to show that a large part of the disorders in that country were attributable to our pernicious meddling there.—I am, sir, yours,

W. MARTIN.

[We never for a moment disputed the unpopularity of our law courts in India. They are, in truth, the "damning blot" in our system of administration. Still, we maintain that as a whole the English rule is generally appreciated by the natives, and in support of our position we appeal to the conduct of the vast majority of the population since the commencement of the mutinies. A conquered race is never very desperately enamoured of its conquerors, and it is, at the best, a very modified popularity the latter can hope to enjoy.—Ed. Allen's Indian Mail.]

HINDOO ASTRONOMY.—According to the Shaasters, the earth is circular and flat, like the flower of the water-lily. Its circumference is four billions of miles; in its centre is Mount Sbo-mero, ascending 600,000 miles from its surface; and at the base of this are four other mountains, on each of which grows a tree 8,800 miles high. The part of the earth which we inhabit is several hundred thousand miles in diameter, and the salt sea which surrounds it is of the same breadth. Round this are six other concentric circular islands, each of which is surrounded by its own sea. The six seas are of sugar-cane juice, spirituous liquors, clarified butter, curds, milk, and sweet water, each being of one of these; and outside the sweet water sea is a continent of gold as big as all the rest of the earth. These sacred books further teach that the sun is 800,000 miles distant from the earth, the moon 800,000 miles further distant, and the fixed stars 800,000 miles further; the planet Mercury is 1,600,000 from the fixed stars, or 4,000,000 from the earth; and the other planets more distant. They assert that a water-spout is spit out from the trunk of Indra's elephant; that eclipses are occasioned by the monster Rihoo; that the water of the Ganges is essential purity; and many other things as false and fabulous.—Noel's England and India.

We confess to having felt somewhat prejudiced against this really excellent and impartial volume of travels, before we had completed the first page of the preface. How is it possible, we thought, for any man, however observant and reflective he may be, to know anything of India after only six months' wanderings through certain provinces? We had, besides, a lively recollection of the absurdities perpetrated by Mr. Layard, and we naturally, though illogically, inferred that a Transatlantic writer would not be more just towards the struggling handful of Englishmen in India than one of their own countrymen had been. It is, however, a pleasing duty to acknowledge that in every respect we have been most agreeably disappointed. It was scarcely possible, indeed, that Mr. Minturn could impart the charm of novelty to a narrative of wanderings through regions so often and thoroughly explored, but he is evidently gifted with no ordinary powers of observation and perception, and his descriptive passages are accordingly both picturesque in their general effect and exact in details. He has taken great and painsworthy pains to make himself acquainted with the real position of the English in India, and of the mutual relations of the Asiatic and European races. There is nothing extenuated, nothing exaggerated. His impartiality is apparent in every page, and the testimony he bears to the mingled justice and clemency of the British rule, and the general zeal and ability of the European officials, is as creditable to his own discernment as to those whom he eulogises. It was not likely, perhaps, that, as an American, he would feel any maudlin sympathy for the coloured population, or be much shocked at hearing them spoken of as "niggers," but we were not equally prepared to find the conduct of the "pale faces" estimated in such a liberal and equitable spirit.

"I was informed," he says, "that the natives learned the trade (manufacture of iron) very much more quickly and easily than Europeans, but that they never could be depended on to perform their task with faithful care and accuracy, if their labour was not conducted under the vigilant supervision of Europeans. Here (Roorkee), as elsewhere, they (the Europeans) find it impossible to intrust the supervising to natives, of whom an intensely narrow-minded selfishness, which cannot see the advantage of adopting another's interest as its own, seems to be an almost universal characteristic. I think this feature in their character, and the universal absence of truth and honesty, goes far to explain the want of sympathy between the English and native races—a want of sympathy compared to which our feeling towards negroes in America is a warm affection. In fact, the two sentiments are quite different. The mass of the people in this country (America) entertain a sort of contempt, nearly akin to physical disgust, towards the African race. We will not sit down with them, eat with them, or admit them to our society. There is no such feeling towards a native in India. The repulsion between the two races is almost entirely moral, and arises in great part from the scorn felt by the blunt, brave, open, and truth-loving Englishman for the cringing servility, the abject cowardice, the unfathomable duplicity, lying, and hypocrisy of the native character."

The five concluding chapters on the climate and history of India, the English Government, the native army, the revenue and wealth of the country, and the late revolt, though more especially written for the benefit of the writer's own countrymen, may be studied with advantage by all who take an interest in the affairs of our Eastern Empire. Mr. Minturn has not only derived his materials from the best sources, but has arranged them with care, judgment, and impartiality. Occasionally a few trifling errors may be detected, but far too insignificant to detract from the real value of his labours. We have, in short, no hesitation in saying that this is one of the most readable as well as instructive books on India with which we are acquainted, and can honestly recommend it to all who desire to form their opinions upon a knowledge of facts.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, No. DXVIII. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

In another part of the present number of the Indian Mail will be found a very able and interesting letter from Major Martin, insisting upon the unpopularity of the English rule, and assigning certain reasons for the assumed fact. That gallant officer's views coincide very closely with those enunciated by a writer in Blackwood's Magazine for the current month. The article in question is professedly a critical notice of Mr. Edwards' "Personal Adventures" and Mr. Gubbins' "Mutinies in Oude," but in reality it is a concise review of the unjust treatment which the native landed proprietors have experienced at the hands of the British authorities. It is not denied that the latter acted in perfect good faith, and with excellent intentions, though in utter ignorance of the true state of the case, and of time-honoured feelings and usages. The terrible abuse that crept in in the form of resurreptions is correctly stated to be one of the chief causes which induced the ancient aristocracy of the land to take part with the mutinous Sepoys against the Sircar; and a curious anecdote is related to illustrate the sentiments entertained towards us by the higher classes. "Towards the end of 1833, on the day when the tidings reached Calcutta of the King of Persia having raised the siege and retired from Herat, a friend of ours received a visit from a Mussulman gentleman of his acquaintance. In the course of conversation our friend, forgetting how cruelly disappointing it was to the raised expectations of his visitor's co-religionists, communicated the news of this event. Notwithstanding that command over their feelings which all Asiatics possess, the Mussulman was quite taken aback by the intelligence, and, unable to conceal his mortification, tried to qualify it by saying, 'Everybody would pray for the continuance of the Company's Raj, if it were not for the resurreptions."

We fear that it is impossible to deny that grievous injury has been "done to the landed gentry, and even to the village communities, by our wrong-headed benevolence in subjecting them to courts of justice, fashioned on the English model, and invested with the mischievous power of selling land to realise the amount of their decrees." The writer strengthens his position by apt quotations from Mr. Edwards' excellent and impartial work, and shows only too clearly how completely the British rulers have misapprehended the character of the people subject to their sway. The article, though brief, is singularly cogent and apposite, and will amply repay the trouble of perusal.

There is likewise an amusing and sketchy paper, the first of a series, entitled "A Cruise in the Japanese Waters," which, while pleasant reading in itself, holds out a promise of still better things hereafter.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

HAVING observed in the Times of this Morning an Address from Colonel UNDERWOOD, I beg thus early to offer myself respectfully to your notice as a CANDIDATE to fill one of the VACANCIES which will soon be declared in your Direction.

Having passed many years in the Maritime Service of the East-India Company, and latterly commanded one of their Ships, I have acquired experience which may enable me to prove myself worthy of the trust which I now solicit.

If you do me the honour to elect me, I shall endeavour to deserve your confidence by devoting myself to the duties of the office, and endeavoring to conduct them as may be most beneficial to your interests.

I have the honour to remain,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

J. D. H. ELPHINSTONE.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been informed that further VACANCIES (in addition to the Four to be filled up on the 9th INSTANT) are likely soon to occur in the Direction of your affairs, I most respectfully beg to offer myself to your notice as a CANDIDATE for your suffrages when the period arrives.

I am induced to solicit your support from my long service in India, having held important situations under the Presidency of Bombay, as Member of the Military Board and Military Auditor-General, that should I have the honour to be elected to a seat in the Direction, my best attention shall be given to the interests confided to me.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your very obedient servant,

GEO. MOORE,

Major-General Bombay Army.

40, Eastbourne-terrace, Hyde-park,
1st December, 1858.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN & CO., in addition to their business as Publishers and Booksellers, beg to remind their Friends and Correspondents in India, that they continue to undertake AGENCY of every description, as well as the execution of Orders from Regimental Messes, Book Clubs, &c.

Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co., from their long experience in the East-India Trade, and the confidence of residents in India, feel confidence in executing all commissions intrusted to them; and as their mode of business is to give personal attention to all orders, and to charge the same at the lowest remunerative prices, they must request to be favoured with a remittance (or reference for payment in London) from those parties who may desire to avail themselves of their services, and who have not, at present, accounts with the house.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles.

By J. H. STOQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stoquer's former works, and his well known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stoquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPIRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC

PILLS. Price 1s. 1jd. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for, during the first two years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unsonicated testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age.

These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS,

is a certain cure for scurvy, leprosy, and all diseases of the skin. The heaviness, weariness, and dejection of spirits usually attendant on those who suffer from diseases of the skin, are speedily removed by the use of Holloway's Ointment and Pills. Their efficacy in correcting the bad habit of the body, and in curing complaints of the class above mentioned, stands unvalued; and in places abroad, where the malady is so prevalent, the cures are wonderful. The purifying properties of the Pills, and the peculiar effect the Ointment has on the skin, render them superior to any other remedy. In all cutaneous affections these remedies stand unrivalled; and, as a cosmetic, this Ointment is in very general repute.

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established

DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 13th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandrin, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

ANY interest that might have attached to the Calcutta Mail of the 9th November has vanished before the later intelligence from Bombay, forwarded from Malta by the electric telegraph. This news comes down to the 25th of last month, being thus barely twenty-four days old. The principal information, however, relates to the reception of the Royal Proclamation, which has everywhere been greeted with apparent confidence in its spirit of conciliation. At the same time we are disposed to think that the unfailing success of the British arms, together with the military preparations of the Commander-in-Chief, have contributed even more than the Queen's gracious promises of pardon, to bring about the submission of the rebels. Not only has the Rajah of Amaithee surrendered his fort without offering the shadow of resistance, but even the Nawab of Banda is reported to have proceeded to General Michel's camp to claim the protection of the amnesty. Tantia Topce is thus abandoned to his own resources, which have long since been exhausted, and is now a hopeless fugitive in a hilly waste, inaccessible to cavalry. In Sawunt Waree also the rebel Desnaes have laid down their arms and submitted to Government, while in Oude the Talookdars are anticipating the movements of the troops by throwing open the gates of their fortresses. It is well for them that they have learned to bow to necessity. The proclamation issued by the Chief Commissioner, which will be found elsewhere, threatens terrible penalties against all who persist in rebellion,—confiscation of land, pecuniary fines, and flogging. Arms and ammunition of every kind are to be delivered up at the nearest police station within a limited period, and all forts are to be dismantled and converted into ordinary habitations. To prove that these menaces are not idle words, Lord Clyde has again taken the field in person, and early on the morning of the 2nd November crossed the Ganges at Allahabad by the new bridge of boats. It is probable, however, that there will be no more severe fighting, and that his Lordship's labours will be confined to the less brilliant, though more gratifying task of restoring peace and good order.

The pacification of Behar is advancing most satisfactorily. The rebels are everywhere in full flight, and utterly disheartened. Brigadier Douglas and Major Havelock have, indeed, given them but little time to rally their broken forces, and now their lately impenetrable retreats are to be laid open for the movements of regular troops. The well-known railway contractors, Messrs. Burn and Co., have not only entered into a contract to clear away the Jugdespore jungle, but have actually commenced operations. After this there will be no hiding place in Behar for Ummer Sing or his followers.

The telegraph communications along the seaboard of the peninsula are rapidly approaching to completion. The submarine cable from Galle to Madras is already in full operation, but between the latter Presidency town and Calcutta there are several interruptions. Thus it happened that the Overland Mail of the 9th October was signalled to Calcutta by way of Madras and Bombay, causing a delay of many hours.

The China mails bring news from Hong Kong to the 29th October. On the 22nd of that month Lord Elgin was still at Shanghai, awaiting the imperial decision on a question that had been referred to Peking. The difference between his Excellency and the Chinese Commissioners related to the duty on opium, the former requiring it to be fixed at 30 taels per chest, the latter at 40. At Canton intercourse had been resumed on amicable terms between the natives and the "outside barbarians." Captain Edgell, the senior naval officer at that port, has been appointed Commodore on the East India Station.

In reply to various correspondents, we have again to state that the postings of the 156 ensigns on the Bengal establishment appeared in our last issue, that of the 6th inst.

It will be seen in our advertisement columns that the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company have obtained the Government guarantee of a perpetual minimum interest of five per cent. Applications for shares must be made before the close of the present week.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

To James C. Melvill, Esq., Assistant-Under-Secretary of State, India-office, London, from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 16.
OUDE.

On the 29th of Oct. Beni Madho, with 20,000 men, made a determined attack on our force at Poorwa. The rebels were beaten off, and lost two guns. No casualty among the Europeans. On the 30th of Oct. the rebels, under Mehndee Hoossein, were defeated near Sufdurgunge, losing five guns and one elephant. No loss on our side. On the 3rd of November Brigdr. Wetherall took the fort of Rampore Kupia by assault, and found five guns in it. He lost thirty men; the loss of the rebels was severe. On the 9th of Nov. Brigdr. Eveleigh took the fort of Jamree. Two Europeans were killed. The fort of Amethee was surrendered by Lall Madhoo Singh on the 9th of Nov., and on the 11th of Nov. was occupied by our troops. Sixteen guns found; more believed to be in the fort.

CENTRAL INDIA.

On the 31st of October and 1st of November Tantia Topee and his followers, without guns, but with a number of elephants, crossed the Nerbudda, forty miles up stream from Hoshungabad, and are believed to be making towards the Deccan. They were last heard of as crossing the Chundwara hills. They have plenty of money, but are short of ammunition. General Michel was at Hoshungabad on the 7th, and Brigadier Parke expected there on the 8th. The resident at Hyderabad and the commissioner of Nagpore are watching the rebels, and are prepared.

BENGAL.

Nothing particular has occurred during the last fortnight. The rebels, it is expected, will try to break away, and make in the direction of Mirzapore. A mutiny is said to have occurred in the rebel camp. Ummur Singh is reported to have fled, and Durkishan Singh to have been killed.

G. F. EDMONSTONE,
Secretary to the Government of India,
With the Governor General.

Supplement to Mr. Secretary Edmonstone's Message dated the 16th November.

CENTRAL INDIA.

The rebel force under Tantia Topee remained in the Sindwara districts of the Nagpore province for four or five days. On the 8th of November they passed twenty-five miles south-east of Baitool, and continued their course via Sautnair and Meil Ghaut towards Boorhaumpoor. On the 14th they crossed the Taptee River, and proceeded in the direction of Manirod and Dhar to the Nerbudda. They reached Acarpore, on the south bank of the Nerbudda, on the 21st. All the forts on the north bank of this river are guarded. The British forces are in close pursuit. Troops have been concentrated at Sindwa and Chupra to prevent the enemy entering Candeish.

The Banda Nawab has left the rebel camp, and is on his way to Major-General Michel.

Adil Mahomed and his party have separated from Tantia Topee, and are now with Maun Singh near Seronge, pursued by the columns under Brigadiers Lockhart and Smith.

Maun Singh was surprised on the 14th at Koondige by Brigadier Smith, and defeated with a loss of 600 men.

SAWUNT WARREE.

The rebel leaders Baba and Dunmunt Desraesee have surrendered to the Goa Government. The Bombay Presidency is quiet.

Intelligence just received from the magistrate of Candeish that Tantia Topee had left Kurgan yesterday morning, and taken the road to Chupra, via the Dowlabaree Pass. This place is guarded by 1,200 men of all arms. The Poona Horse and Horse Artillery will be at Chupra to-morrow. Captain Abbott will be there this day with the two regiments of Beatson's horse. The Bheel chiefs are harassing Tantia Topee's flank. The feelings of the population of Candeish are excellent.

Secretary to Government.

BENGAL.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

In the last week in April, 200 prisoners, exclusively sepoys, made their escape on to the main island of the Andaman, with the avowed intention of seeking the rajah or king of the country, representing to him the tyranny which the Feringhees had practised in their land, Hindostan, and to give him timely warning of their intentions being similar with respect to his country and people. Part of their scheme was also to offer him their services to drive out the white men and prevent the establishment of the different stations. They were, however, much disappointed; the savages beckoned them on into ambuscades and poured deadly volleys of poisoned arrows amongst them. Only eighty-one of them returned and gave themselves up, and there is every reason to believe that the rest perished by hunger and at the hands of the unconciliatory savages. After patient investigation of the cases of the eighty-one men who returned, sufficient proof came out that this was no mere attempt to escape from confinement, but an escape carried out with the most blood-thirsty intentions towards the small band of Europeans at present in the island, and the superintendent accordingly, with his wonted decision and firmness, condemned eighty of them to be hanged, and carried the sentence into effect.

From that time, for a period of three months, all went on well and smoothly in the little colony; no further attempts at escape occurred; the clearing of the jungle was carried on apace, and the cultivation of the cleared lands commenced. About the middle of August, however, fifteen others made their escape; they were all Mahrattas. The remaining Mahrattas were immediately put in irons, but notwithstanding this precaution, and the fact that the guard-ship and an extra guard-boat were stationed in the channel between Ross Island and the Mainland, thirteen more Mahrattas made their escape. The channel between the islands is more than 800 yards wide, and it shows considerable determination and ingenuity in men loaded with irons effecting a passage across it; it seems that they formed a raft with planks, and, clinging to this, swam across during the night. They have suffered the same privations as the first lot who went in search of a land flowing with milk and honey; four or five of them have returned, reporting the deaths of many of their companions, some killed by the natives, some chased into the sea and drowned. They say that the country inland is thickly peopled; they saw numbers of men, women, children, and pigs, but no houses. There is no doubt that ultimately the convicts will become convinced that their only safety consists in sticking close to the established stations, and the fact that there alone food can be found, will be a more powerful chain to bind them to their labour than one of iron or steel. The principle pursued with them appears to be excellent; the establishment of a certain scale of wages for labour performed, the setting up of bunnahs from whom alone the food dependent on their own exertions can be obtained, coupled with the savage jungle surrounding them, and the still more savage and implacable aborigines, will do very much to consolidate the different communities into which it seems purposed to divide them.

There seems to be a strange unapproachable savagery in the nature of the Andamanese. Most tribes are timid and cautious on the approach of the white man, but it is contrary to all experience to find such a determined shrinking from communication with strangers, and an ever wakeful, prowling eagerness to shed their blood. A boat's crew cannot push off to a sandy point or headland, but they are liable to be saluted with a shower of arrows from some dark corner of the jungle, and the experience of those convicts who have returned from their wanderings in the jungle has been the same as that of our seamen on the shores.

We hear that it has been determined by Government to try and induce the families of the convicts to join them; this is a very desirable arrangement, if it is a possible one. Without some such arrangement, we have no doubt of the result as to the mortality that will occur amongst the convicts; the moral depression, coupled with the change from wheaten food to the rice of those latitudes, will rapidly do their work, and we should not be surprised if a yearly mortality of 30 to 40 per cent. was recorded in the penal settlement. A late order of Government provides for such a contingency very efficiently, by instructing all magistrates to send any prisoner convicted of mutiny or rebellion, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, across the seas. We shall watch anxiously the movements of the colony, and let our readers know how things progress; in the meantime, we are sure that all the arrangements will be conducted with all the intelligence and zeal that Government could wish, and that the experiment will not fail from want of head and hands to carry it out.—Delhi Gazette.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP.

It is, we believe, certain that Mr. J. P. Grant will be the next Lieut. Governor of Bengal. His designation at so early a period, six months before any vacancy will occur, has been rendered imperative by a rule of the Civil Service Annuity Fund. Any civilian who intends to resign must signify his intention in November of the previous year, under a penalty of a fine of a thousand pounds.

The appointment will, we think, be received by the public without surprise, and without either displeasure or enthusiasm. Mr. Grant has long been the most prominent of the candidates for the office, and is qualified as well by reputed ability as by standing and services. At the same time, despite a long and distinguished career, the last five years of which have brought him repeatedly before the public, Mr. Grant is emphatically a "dark horse." No one outside the circle of his immediate friends has any definite idea either as to his policy or his views. In the matter of the mutinies, the one test now applied to Indian statesmen, half the Indian world believes him to have failed, to have been at one time the advocate of concession, at another of the reconstruction of the native army. They point to the little effected during his tenure of power in Allahabad, and repeat all kinds of stories, most of them, like the story of the dress-coat, based on a mystification. The other half who occasionally read Blue Books, while acknowledging the fog which seems to envelope all these transactions, believe him the advocate of a stern and consistent policy, of breaking up the Sepoy army, and of a line of action in Behar which would have made that province a base of operations instead of a weak point in our defence.

It is the same with questions of more permanent interest though of less immediate importance than the mutinies. No man can say to which of the two great Indian parties Mr. Grant belongs. He has officially recorded his dislike of the grant-in-aid system, in phrases which certainly read like sympathy with the retrogressive policy of Sir George Clerk. Yet he was a most efficient Member of the Council of Education, and has recently most warmly censured suggestions for abandoning the Government Colleges. So with regard to the conflict between the old civilians and the colonists. Mr. Grant has repeatedly supported the Black Act,—looks, we presume, with hope to the day when Englishmen shall be judged by untrained judges, sitting far from any English opinion, and administering a law radically different from the only one to which Englishmen can, without degradation, submit. Yet Mr. Grant is the strongest of those who prefer the English to the oriental system of administration, resists the union of the magistracy and collectorate, would disunite at once and for ever the thieftaking and the judicial functions. It was Mr. Grant also who introduced the tenure bill, the greatest boon ever yet offered in India to settlers, and who has proposed to extinguish appeals, by creating courts worthy of the name.

Mr. Grant is, in short, still unknown; and the fact, while it checks pleasure at his appointment, will in many respects facilitate his action. It remains to be seen if he possesses the energy to end that delay from above which, with Mr. Grant's own opposition, has neutralised the efforts and the real capacity of his predecessor. Whatever the merits of the separate administration, it has produced a delay of business which in any other country would have destroyed the Government. While every project occupies five years, and the Proconsul has only a five years' tenure of power, progress is impossible. If Mr. Halliday understands one subject thoroughly, it is the Bengal police. If he has fought hard and well for one improvement, it is police reform. No time was lost after his appointment in bringing up the question. His report is still quoted on all hands as the most accurate description of the evil. Yet the orders conceding the reform have but just been issued, and Mr. Halliday will quit India with his first reform still unaccomplished. It is this eternal delay which Mr. Grant has helped to create, and by his success in defeating which his future administration will be judged.—Friend of India.

COLONEL RAMSAY AND JUNG BAHADOOR.

We have heard a more minute account of the transactions which have ended in the removal of Lieutenant-Colonel Ramsay from Katmandoo than the one contained in our recent article. That account, however, expands without modifying the previous statements, and although in justice to the officer who has suffered so severely we recapitulate the facts, they do not change the conviction we expressed.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ramsay desired of course to accompany the Goorka force into the plains. The Nepalese Government refused its consent to the proposition, alleging that the Resident's long and thorough knowledge of the manners and customs of Nepal was essential to the maintenance of a warm cordiality between the two Powers. Against so flattering a refusal nothing could be said, and Lieutenant Colonel Ramsay remained at his post.

Time passed on, Lucknow fell, and Jung Bahadoor, commander-in-chief of the Nepalese forces, sought an interview with Lord Canning. He had formally declared that the aid of his troops was unconditional, that he sought nothing beyond a proof patent to all men of the warm and sincere regard of the Nepalese Durbar to the British Government. At the interview, however, he either referred to or produced some thirty charges against Colonel Ramsay, and demanded his removal. The charges were generally of discourtesy, and insults to Nepalese religious feeling. The Governor-General informed him that it was impossible to remove a high officer in disgrace without giving him an opportunity of reply. His lordship, however, asked him whether the appointment of another officer, whom he named, would be acceptable to the Nepalese Durbar. The conversation passed, of course, through an interpreter—General Macgregor. Jung Bahadoor, misled either by this query, or by some expression of the interpreter, considered his object achieved and departed.

This impression was strengthened when Lieut.-Col. Ramsay was summoned from Katmandoo to Allahabad to explain his conduct. Every Asiatic considers a summons equivalent to the execution. Jung, therefore, boasted that he had dismissed the Resident, the greatest proof he could give of influence with the British Government. Lieut.-Col. Ramsay, however, arrived at Allahabad, at once answered all charges, was exonerated of all blame, and set out for Katmandoo. The Nepalese Durbar peremptorily refused to receive him, asserted that the Gov.-Gen. had retracted a distinct promise given through Gen. Macgregor, and even affected to see in the refusal of so slight a request a hostile menace.

In answer to this unexpected sally, the Governor-General once more reiterated his disbelief in the charges, his regret that the Durbar and its Commander-in-Chief should have been deceived, and his distinct affirmation that no such promise had been given. His Lordship could not consider the demand slight, and repudiated—as he well might—all intentions save those most friendly towards Nepal. It did not, however, consist with the dignity of the Empire to concede the withdrawal of a high officer on an erroneous charge, and he must therefore be received. Once received, the Governor-General would not continue to force on a friendly Government an envoy obviously so unacceptable.

This decision has been widely condemned as weak and unjust towards a high officer of unimpeached character and ability. Undoubtedly it falls heavily upon the Resident. Undoubtedly, also, that Resident is entitled to the fullest reparation, to an office at least equal in dignity and emolument to the one which he has lost. We may allow also that it was a grave mistake to have named his probable successor, a graver misfortune that the employment of an interpreter should have allowed a shade of doubt as to the words actually spoken. But, as a question of State policy we hold the Governor-General absolutely in the right. The Durbar obviously was resolute not to receive Col. Ramsay permanently unless compelled. The employment of compulsion to a State which had just, from whatever motives, armed in our behalf would have been as unwise as ungrateful. Lord Canning accepted the only possible compromise, a temporary restoration, and deeply as we may regret that such an event should have occurred at all, and still more deeply as we regret the apparent injury to a most excellent officer, we cannot perceive that the true dignity of the empire has been lowered by its representative.

Our journal is read, or at least paid for, at Katmandoo, and we would ask Jung Bahadoor to beware how he cancels by his future acts the strong feeling of friendship now entertained towards him by all Englishmen. It is not after such a year as 1857 that Englishmen forget those who have served them, but at the same time, while we may hold that service to justify an attitude of independence or even of pride, it will not excuse the slightest real aggression on the honour of Great Britain.—Friend of India, Oct. 28.

MR. MONTGOMERY.

Mr. Montgomery is, we believe, the new Provisional Member of Council. There will be no vacancy till May, when Mr. Grant's tour of office expires, and long before that time the arrangements for the pacification of Oude will have been complete. Lord Stanley has shown a sound appreciation of merit in this selection, but Mr. Montgomery has, perhaps, greater cause for complaint than any officer in India. He seems to have been most unjustly forgotten. No honour has been given him, and though repeatedly mentioned in both Houses, and acknowledged on all hands to be one of the men to whom we owe the safety of the empire, he is not even a K.C.B. It was he who in the absence of Sir John Lawrence superintended and urged on the disarming at Meean Meer, and throughout the Punjab difficulties it remains a question whether he or Sir John Lawrence effected most towards maintaining the loyalty of the Sikhs. It has been doubtless an official rule to reward the chief of a province for all services, as he is held responsible for all mischances; but in the case of merit so conspicuous, no reward to Mr. Montgomery could have detracted from the just honour of his superior.

Between this and May next almost all the great appointments in India must be filled with new men. The departure of Sir John Lawrence in February leaves the Punjab vacant. The North West is vacant already. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has applied for his pension, as he is compelled to do by the rules of the Fund, and Lord Elphinstone we are told finally quits office in February next. Their successors are still probably undecided. Events, too, move too rapidly to render speculation safe, but the best authenticated rumour points to something like the following list:—

|--------------------|--------------------|
| Punjab,            | Mr. Edmonstone.    |
| N. W. P. and Oude, | Mr. Montgomery.    |
| Bombay,            | Sir J. Outram.     |
| Bengal,            | { Mr. C. Beadon.   |
|                    | { Mr. J. P. Grant. |
| Foreign Secretary, | Mr. Muir.          |

The thirty-five years' rule also will begin in 1859 to clear out many of the old men, and it seems more than probable that we may have new blood to meet the mutiny of 1860. If Lord Stanley is well advised, the Council will by that time have become a Cabinet, and the Punjab, the fourth Presidency of India.—Friend of India, Oct. 28.

THE OUDE PROCLAMATION.

By direction of the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India, the Chief Commissioner of Oude hereby calls upon all Talookdars, Zemindars, inhabitants and residents in Oude, of every grade and class, with the exceptions herein enumerated, to deliver up to the servants of Government at the nearest police station, within one month from the date of this Proclamation, all cannon, fire-arms, swords, bows, arrows, spears, or other description of weapons whatever; also all gunpowder, shot, shell, sulphur, saltpetre, and munitions of war of every kind.

lands shall be liable to be confiscated, in addition to such other punishments as may be awarded.

V. Any person giving information which may lead to the discovery of concealed weapons, gunpowder or munitions of war, shall be entitled to a moiety of the fine, or if no fine be imposed, to a reward.

VIII. Any infringement of the licence will be punished by the penalties above specified.

IX. The classes exempted from the penalties of this Proclamation are European British subjects, British soldiers while present with their regiments or on service, and Government officials employed on Civil duties.

(Signed) F. D. FORSYTH,
Sec. to the Chief Commissioner, Oude.

OUDE MEMORANDA.

Copies of the following circulars have been issued to all commissioners and civil officers in Oude:—

No. I.

LUCKNOW, 14th Oct.—During the next few months the operations of the military will be carried out on a very extensive scale throughout Oude, and the Chief Commissioner conveys his earnest hope that all civil officers will render the most complete and hearty co-operation with the military authorities.

Occasions may arise when it will be impossible or inconvenient for the military officers to adhere strictly to all the rules of routine and usual etiquette, but the Chief Commissioner feels sure that civil officers will waive all such considerations, and will give their hearty co-operation in the common work of subjugating and pacifying Oude. Hereafter it will be the pleasing duty of the Chief Commissioner to bring to the favourable notice of Government the names of those officers who have been foremost in rendering aid.

Valuable assistance can be given by civil officers, though not with columns, in procuring and forwarding supplies and carriage, carefully providing for the speedy transmission of dawks, and furnishing information.

No. II.

For the guidance of civil officers taking part in the military operations in Oude.

All military operations are designed and executed by the military authorities, and the civil officers will aim at giving the utmost assistance to these operations.

Each officer should make it a part of his duty to prepare a map of his own district, showing prominently all points which appear to him desirable the military commandant should be well informed upon.

This map should show all forts, foris, large jheels, principal villages, roads, and chief bazars where supplies may be found.

A statement under each of the above headings should accompany the map, thus:—

FORTS.—Describe the position; is it surrounded by jungle, or only partially? If so, on what side, and to what extent? Describe the height and size of its bastions, and all other works it may have calculated to give flanking defence.

Notice its ditch, if it has one, wet or dry; if not, whether any obstacle between the foot of its walls and an attacking party; all dimensions that can be had are valuable.

On what side is its usual entrance, which is the most open side, and on what side would a fugitive enemy endeavour to escape; where is the nearest cover he would run to? Describe, if possible, its internal arrangements. Almost all the forts in Oude are pretty much alike as to their round towers and ditches, but they all have different routes and modes by which to escape out of them, and by which to approach them.

FORDS.—Greatest depth, quicksands or not, breadth of the ford in the direction of the stream across nature of its bottom, firm or soft or shifting, and which is the highest bank. Is there jungle around these approaches, or near them? If so, obtain all possible information about them.

JUNGLE.—Its nature; is there much underwood, is it much cut up by streams or jheels, can you march any way, say by compass for instance, or must you keep to the beaten track? State its average height.

JHEELS.—Extent, greatest depth; are they fordable east and west, north and south; notice jungle if near them.

PRINCIPAL VILLAGES.—Position, high or low for an enemy flying out of it; where is the nearest cover he would fly to? Any supplies in it? Name of the headman; notice the most open side.

ROADS.—Their soil, firm or soft, hard or sandy, what stream it crosses, and how; if a ford describe as above, if a bridge describe its breadth and length, how many men could march abreast across it? Masonry or wooden; will it bear heavily laden carts or not?

Notice the approaches to it, all jungle, &c. If the approaches are steep, do carts go easily up or down on either side?

Is the bridge commanded by any ground from which an enemy can fire on troops crossing?

BAZARS.—Describe the principal places where supplies are, it is well known, stored up.

So much for the map and its statement. The Chief Commissioner has merely here briefly sketched out a general idea of the sort of information likely to prove useful to the military authorities, and to which the civil officers are to give their first and zealous attention.

The next subject demanding their care will be intelligence of the enemy's movements; this, the Chief Commissioner observes, needs the utmost discrimination and caution. Whilst it is necessary that the most correct information is speedily conveyed to the military authorities, so the hasty sending of a heterogeneous mass of information, without due sifting and reflection, will be only an impediment instead of aid. The civil officer must have such sources of information, that, the one corroborating the other, enables him to form a decided opinion; and having done so, he will communicate the result of his investigation to the military authorities, stating his opinion, and his chief reasons for arriving at it.

No civil officer should be in the field of action, who is not on duty, whose services the military commandant does not require.

Civil officers in the field are there principally for the sake of their local information whilst the action lasts; when over, the civil officer should at once request from the commanding officer a statement of any thing required for the force.

Firewood, and straw for the bedding of the soldiers, are two things always needed, and in this cold season, when many of our Europeans and natives will be out, these are two items which should never be forgotten. The moment a force bivouacs, let the whole power of the civil authorities bring in bedding and fuel. Give so much to each regiment, and keep an account of the amount paid for it by the Government. Doubtless in many instances it can be had for nothing but the carriage.

Another important information to be thought of is the position of the wells; once a force decides to bivouac near a village, the position of the wells should be quickly ascertained, so that the force may not pitch inconveniently far from the water.

In the event of there being two civil officers with the force, they should divide the labour,—one being in the field, the other making every preparation for supplies which he may find wanted.

The Chief Commissioner particularly desires to impress on all civil officers, and especially on the younger officers, that the military authorities direct the campaign, depending much on the information supplied them by the civil officers, who will content themselves with supplying the very best attainable information, and not volunteer either projects or opinions affecting the general direction of military operations; these proceed on one well-matured plan, and any attempt at deviation in a particular province, or some fancied imaginary benefit in that individual province, might seriously interfere with previously concerted and extensive combinations. Where the opinion of the civil officer is solicited by the military authorities, he will always be ready to give it, but he will be most careful not to add his weight or influence unasked to alter any of the military arrangements.

No. III.

The season is now approaching when active operations will soon commence in Oude, and it is necessary that the civil officers should clearly understand what the Chief Commissioner expects from them with regard to the demolition of the numerous forts and clearance of the jungles.

With this object the Chief Commissioner issues the following instructions, and requests that Commissioners will communicate them to their officers, and see that they are understood and carried out.

So soon as a fort can be taken possession of it must be immediately destroyed. When the military officers have taken forcible possession, they will probably destroy the defences, but the work must be rendered complete by the civil officer. When a fort is in the neighbourhood of the military authorities the civil officers may seek their aid, but when it so occurs that the military are unable to assist, the civil officer must at once set to work himself.

His attention should first be directed to the bastions or round towers of the forts, and every part that gives flanking defence. These should be thoroughly levelled, and then the connecting lines between them thrown down. All wells in the fort to be effectually filled up, and no one, except in special cases (to be sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner) to be allowed to live inside. All jungle for four hundred yards round the fort to be completely cleared away and burnt.

Aid may be accepted from any Talookdars or other natives in the demolition of their own forts, but the Chief Commissioner will hold the civil officers strictly responsible for the weekly progress made.

Native gunpowder, which can be collected in the districts, may be used for reducing to ruins all masonry gateways, but probably for such parts of the work the military authorities will aid.

Civil Officers must compile a map for their own benefit, showing all the forts which they have to demolish; calculate the amount of labour they can command, and also tools, such as the ordinary "phowrah."

They should at once collect 1,000 phowrahs and 400 pickaxes, also 1,000 native hatchets and 500 smaller, like the native bill-hook. At the same time they must encourage labourers to bring their own, by paying them a small daily sum more than those to whom tools are supplied. If there is difficulty in procuring tools call on every Talookdar to supply a certain number in a week, and pay him for the same, and oblige him to supply a certain additional number weekly to keep up the supply. Turn all swords and musket barrels into pickaxes and crowbars,* and shields into baskets for carrying earth.

Money may be advanced to Talookdars and others on reasonable security, for aid, in whatever way given.

Roads must be cut 150 feet wide through the jungle, selecting such lines as will be of use in communicating between the principal villages outside.

A complete statement regarding each fort and jungle must be submitted, containing distinct propositions for the future disposal of the jungle, whether it should be left wholly or in part with the Talookdars, or given out in lease to others; and, if so, to whom, and on what terms. The probable area of the jungle and the nature of the soil, capabilities of irrigation, &c., should be clearly shown. If the proposition be to give out the land to strangers, it should be stated whether the Talookdars should get Malikhana, or not.

The knowledge the district officer will have acquired during the progress of the cutting of the jungle will enable him to decide on all points above noted, and submit a clear recommendation.

Weekly reports, showing the progress of the demolition and clearance, should be submitted every Monday, one copy being sent direct to the Chief Commissioner's office, and another to the commissioner of the division for eventual transmission to the judicial commissioner.

The destruction of the forts and disarming of the people, which will proceed simultaneously, are the two principal objects to be attended to, and every other duty is to be considered secondary; and commissioners must devise a system of superintendence which will ensure vigorous action.

The success of officers will be tested during the next six months, and their advancement will depend upon the successful carrying out of the two great measures alluded to.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COLONEL ROBERTSON.—The Bombay Standard regrets to learn that Colonel Robertson is suffering severely from the effects of an illness, brought on, no doubt, by exposure and over-fatigue. He is at present at Goonah, and quite unable to take the field. The service can ill-spare at this crisis so gallant and talented an officer.

* This is to be done at the Sudder station only, where several efficient forges should be set up to break up the arms and convert them into agricultural implements.

LORD CLYDE'S PROCLAMATION, Oct. 26.—The Commander-in-Chief proclaims to the people of Oude that, under the orders of the Right Hon. the Governor General, he comes to enforce the law. To enable him to effect this without damage to life and property resistance must cease on the part of the people. The most exact discipline will be preserved in the camps and on the march; and when there is no resistance houses and crops will be spared, and no plundering allowed in the towns and villages. But wherever there is resistance, or even a single shot fired against the troops, the inhabitants must expect to incur the fate they have brought upon themselves. Their houses will be burnt and their villages plundered. This proclamation includes all ranks of the people, from the talookdars to the poorest ryots. The Commander-in-Chief invites all the well-disposed to remain in their towns and villages, where they will be sure of his protection against all violence.—CLYDE.

THE GRAND TRUNK ROAD beyond the Soane is still far from safe. Numerous travellers have been, in consequence, detained at Sasaram. It was reported there, that the rebels had succeeded in maintaining their ground against Colonel Turner and Major Havelock until nightfall, when they evacuated the village in which they had taken shelter, without our troops being apprised of their withdrawal until day-break. The service messages give a different account of the matter, and report five hundred of the enemy killed.

A CLASSIC RITE.—A correspondent of the Mofussilite has heard that a native chief has had funeral rites performed over himself. It is affirmed that he intended to attack Cawnpore, and thus dedicated himself to the work. He apparently appreciated the magnitude of the task and the hopelessness of success.

CAPTAIN SOTHEY, R. N.—We are sorry to learn that Captain Sothey, of the Naval Brigade, recently met with a slight accident. He was thrown from his horse, and ruptured a blood vessel. He is now said to be recovering.

MOORSHEDEABAD.—The Governor-General has sanctioned the outlay of Rs. 2,90,000 on the erection of a suitable residence for the Nawab of Moorshehabad.

H. M.'S 19TH REGIMENT were about to proceed to Dinapore. The detachment at Dacca will join the head-quarters of the corps as soon as possible. They will be relieved at Barrackpore by H.M.'s 48th, recently arrived from Gibraltar.

MEDICAL FUND.—The Englishman states, that the successful applicants for the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund are Superintending Surgeons Charles Mackinnon and Butter, and Surgeons C. Madden, G. Rankin, Sir J. S. Login, and R. J. Brassey.

MAJOR GENERAL ROBERTS has resigned his command in Rajpootana. His resignation has been accepted by the Governor of Bombay, who has ordered the troops of the late Rajpootana Division to be united with those of the Malwa Division under General Michel. General Roberts is still on the permanent Divisional staff of the Bombay Army. The Rajpootana Field Division are in cantonments.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.—The Dacca News hears that a short time ago as Mr. W. L. Mackenzie, Deputy Magistrate of Serajunge, was in Cutcherry, a faqueer suddenly rushed upon him, seized him by the throat, and administered two or three severe blows on the head. Mr. Mackenzie was actually stunned by the man's violence. For a time the Court was in an uproar, but the faqueer was seized, indeed he made no attempt to escape, but, on the contrary, said it would be a good thing for Bengal if all Bengalees acted as he had done. The man is still in custody, and will be examined by Mr. Morris. An attempt has been made to show that the faqueer is insane; we should be glad if insanity could be proved, for dangerous lunatics are confined for the rest of their lives. The man, at all events, should be severely dealt with.

THE REV. MR. VINTON.—We extract from a published letter of the Rev. E. Kincaid, of Rangoon, a portion of an address by a Karen pastor. The address alludes to the death of a Karen Missionary, the Rev. Mr. Vinton. He said—"Our teacher pleased God, and so God took him to Himself." We need another teacher; but if he is a lazy man, and stays in the city just to take care of himself, he will do us no good; and if he has no patience, but is short and crabbed, we shall all dislike him, and keep off as far as possible. Now, what we want is a man like our teacher Vinton; and God alone can send such a man. We must all pray that God will pour out his Holy Spirit upon us, and then we shall please God, and he will send us the teacher we need. Had you known Brother Vinton intimately and laboured with him as I have, you would then say, 'Why was Vinton taken? Why was not some one taken who could be spared and not missed?'

TROOPS IN PEGU.—The troops actually serving in the province at this present writing, exclusive of those in the Tenasserim provinces, are as follows:—Three European regiments, ten native ditto, less four companies—viz., 4th, 6th, 8th (now in course of relief by 31st), 12th, less four companies in China, 15th, 23rd, 24th, 37th, 39th, and 41st M. N. I., seven companies Foot Artillery, two horse field batteries.

THE FOLLOWING DIVISION ORDER was issued by General Michel, C.B., to the Mhow Field Force after their recent victory at Mungroolee. "It is the Major General's pleasing duty again to thank Colonel Lockhart and the troops under his command for their gallant conduct on the field of battle, and to congratulate them that their great success has been achieved, owing to their steadiness, without any material loss. He has not failed to bring to the notice of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief their merits; and should any extraordinary cases of special bravery have occurred, he requests that the same may be brought to his notice by Colonel Lockhart."

LOYALTY REWARDED.—On the 2nd October a grand Durbar was held by Sir R. Hamilton at Indore. At the Durbar, Gunput Rao Seetaram and Moonshi Jan Ali Khan were invested with khillats of Rs. 3,000, and Rs. 1,000 respectively, and the title of Bahadoor. Gunput Rao Seetaram distinguished himself by his loyalty to the British throughout the past year. He was also instrumental in saving the life of Mrs. Timins, whom he rescued from Mehidpore, and brought into the British camp.

THE PROCLAMATION AT CALCUTTA.—The rejoicings on the 1st Nov. passed off very well. They may be said to have commenced at four o'clock, when the royal proclamation was read on the steps of Government House by Mr. Beadon. Directly the Home Secretary had finished reading, Mr. Halliday taking off his hat commenced to cheer. He was heartily responded to by a dense crowd of Europeans and natives, gentlemen and servants, baboos and up-country men. As soon as it was dark the streets and roads became thronged with people. The illuminations were excellent, and their effect was particularly good. The Auckland Gardens were lighted up just as Vauxhall used to be, and the view from the maidan was really striking. Had the fireworks come off on the same night there would have been no lack of enthusiasm on the part of the natives. In the Mofussil stations adjoining Calcutta, it was generally supposed that the crush would have been tremendous. Many natives on this account stayed away. Probably by the day on which the fireworks are to be exhibited they will have plucked up more courage.—Friend of India.

A BURMESE QUACK.—A man named Soondrum, who from no means at all has contrived to raise up for himself a small estate from the sale of quack medicines, and deluding ignorant people into the belief that he is a man of sanctity, and had the virtue of curing all disease, has at last been discovered to be an impostor, and is about to meet with his deserts. He resided on the eastern slope of the hill opposite the garden of Meera Hoossain Mericar, in the midst of an embryo tope, where some day last week a Burman female applied to him for relief from some ailment under which she was labouring. He administered to her a drug which had the effect of rendering her insensible, and alarmed at finding her in that state, he moved her off into an unfrequented portion of his building, where he left her to sleep her sleep. The husband, apprehensive at her long delay, sought her out, but could not find her, and, to his inquiries, this impostor replied that he had never seen the woman, but others had observed her go into his garden, and insisted that she was still there. The afflicted husband gave information of his fears of foul play to the Goung of Obo, who ferreted out the hidden one, and took the impostor into custody. The magistrate has since sent him into jail, and seized all his ill-gotten gain, and his quack medicines to boot.—Maulmain Advertiser, Oct. 19.

NATIVE INGENUITY.—The Indian Field notices that an important discovery has been made in the collectorate establishment of Burdwan. It has been found that a family who have succeeded one another in certain offices connected with the collectorate records have been in the habit of abstracting certain records. Their places they have supplied either by forged documents, or the originals interpolated. Such of the original documents as were retained were given into the hands of a "forger by profession," but nominally a shopkeeper. It seems also that the shopkeeper purchased the good-will of the former owner of the house and business of forgery before he set up for himself. We understand that it will be impossible to convict any of the guilty persons.

MUTLAH SETTLEMENT.—The Englishman mentions the small progress of the Mutlah settlement. Owing to its excessive unhealthiness, workmen can scarcely be procured. Masons are particularly wanted, as most of the labourers decamped during the rainy season. In the cold weather the place is a little more salubrious, and it is then only that the works can be proceeded with.

BANGCOON.—The inhabitants of Rangoon appear to be very hardly treated. With a surplus revenue from the province of twenty-five lakhs they cannot obtain the smallest sums for municipal purposes. They have no hospital, no efficient drainage, and scarcely a public building. The subject will be brought under the consideration of the Supreme Government.

RUMOURS.—The Hurkaru prints a letter from Sind dated the 10th October. It appears that it is rumoured that Mr. Bartle Frere will succeed Sir John Lawrence in the Punjab. Mr. Frere was then preparing to leave Kurrachee for Bombay. Great satisfaction is expressed at the rumour of the intended appointment. Mr. Frere does not, however, succeed to Sir John Lawrence, but Mr. Edmonstone. The Foreign Secretary is eminently fitted for the post, and has a local knowledge which will be invaluable. We think that something should be done for the financial Commissioner of the Punjab, Mr. F. D. McLeod. He is a most able man, and would make a good foreign secretary. It is believed, however, that Lord Canning intends to confer the appointment on Mr. Muir.

KANGRA TEA PLANTATIONS.—The following letter appears in the Friend of India:—I have just returned from a visit to the Government tea plantation at Holta, about sixteen miles from this, and been highly gratified. The valley abounds in beautiful scenery, rice is extensively cultivated, and the crops, which are now being reaped, appear to be abundant. The ride to Holta is an agreeable one, but it would be more so if a few of the most rapid and rocky of the streams which are to be crossed were bridged. The tea plantation was commenced in 1852 and is in a thriving condition, about 600 acres are planted, the lines of trees are perfect. I did not see one vacancy or a stunted bush, and although the picking has been pursued since April, the plants appear still to abound with fine green leaves. The yield of this year is worth Rs. 60,000 which, with the smaller yieldings of 1856 and 1857, fully equals the outlay from the commencement. The out turn of next year is expected to be worth one lakh of rupees, and to increase every year as the trees grow larger, even though the cultivation be not extended by the addition of a single plant; and as the present outlay does not exceed Rs. 13,000 or Rs. 14,000 per annum, the net income for 1859 will be Rs. 86,000, admitting of further increase as already intimated. Contiguous to this plantation are upwards of 3,000 acres of equally good land, unencumbered with trees or any other obstruction; the surface is finely undulated, with limpid streams and purling brooks running in all directions. The climate is the finest that I have seen in India, neither excessively cold in winter nor hot in summer. The superintendent of the plantation, the only European resident, has been there five years, and has not experienced any sickness; his house is pleasantly situated at the foot of high hills—the garden yields abundance of fruit and vegetables—the farm-yard is well stocked, and whatever else is required in the way of supplies can be had from a village a few miles distant, containing a population of perhaps 2,000. In short, I do not know of any place in India so desirable as a rural residence, or one more inviting to the capitalist and farmer. I observed many healthy young mulberry and other fruit trees on the plantation; and, from the genial nature of the climate, I have no doubt that the silkworm could be propagated with as much success as tea.

INDIAN SALARIES.—Our rule in India is at least productive of one effect. It is gradually raising the natives of India to equality with the Europeans. All over the country the wages and salaries of native servants of all classes and descriptions are enhanced, and this enhancement is still going on. On the other hand European labour is not so highly estimated as formerly. There are now two banks requiring secretaries; both banks are of the highest respectability, and yet the salary offered is actually less than is received by a secretary to a bank of any reputation in England. The Uncovenanted Service Bank offers its manager only 350 rupees a month and free quarters, and requires a deposit of 10,000 rupees. The Dacca Bank offers to candidates for the secretaryship vacated by Mr. Forbes only 400 rupees a month and rooms. In England, the annual pay of the same class of persons is usually from £600, and upwards. The East will soon cease to be an Eldorado either for civilians or adventurers.—Friend of India.

THE RAJAH OF BENARES, some time back, contributed a large sum of money towards the Educational Department in the Benares Division, and this circumstance was brought to the notice of the Court of Directors, who have thanked the Rajah, and have expressed their hopes that the example of the Rajah will have the effect of stimulating other landowners in the Benares Division to take a similar enlightened course.—Englishman, October 30.

BENGAL EASTERN RAILWAY.—Sondah will be the grand terminus of the Bengal Eastern Railway. Operations are likely to be soon commenced. Mr. Ainslie, of the Civil Service, is likely to be appointed Railway Commissioner for the valuation of lands required by the Company.

NATIVE MAGISTRATES.—We are informed that Baboo Roy Kissory Chand Mitter, the native magistrate, has been not only removed from the Calcutta magisterial bench, but dismissed from the service of Government altogether, having been found guilty of all the charges preferred against him by the Commissioner of Police. The Commissioners who tried his case could not have arrived at any other verdict than one of guilty, nor could the Government of Bengal have passed a more lenient sentence. The question now arises are we to have another native magistrate? We hope not, and this without any prejudices against the natives of this country. As we wrote on this subject before, the time has not yet arrived for giving magisterial authority in the Presidency cities to any native gentleman. There are hundreds of other billets open to deserving natives, but the presence of a native on the magisterial bench of a city like this, with such a large number of Europeans in it, is calculated to raise up in the minds of the lower order of natives ideas which it would be just as well not to call into existence.—Phoenix.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF left Allahabad with his personal staff and only one officer and one clerk from each of the head-quarter's departments on the 2nd November.

MR. H. D. WILLOCK, of the Bengal Civil Service, Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector of the 2nd grade, has been posted to Mirzapoor. This is the gentleman whose recent suspension by the Governor-General has caused so much discussion.

BARCELONA, Nov. 1.—As a faithful chronicler of events, I write to apprise you (Delhi Gazette) that the aspect of affairs of this province is at the present moment as favourable as can be. Taking the districts in geographical sequence, Bijnour is the least, if at all, concerned or apprehensive about any part of it being troubled with outward or inward aggression, and with such men as Mr. Palmer at the head of civil affairs, and Lieut.-Col. Smyth of the military, any contingency would be met most promptly and effectually. Moradabad, with Mr. Dunlop as magistrate and collector; Mr. Shakespear as judge; Brig. Coke, commanding in the military department and the presence of a wing of the 42nd Highlanders, enjoys no small sense of security. Budaon is, as usual, well cared for by Mr. Carmichael; Mr. Inglis, his assistant, keeps the Sudder station while he is out in the interior just now: this latter circumstance itself speaks for the tranquillity of this district; should, however, dissatisfaction be lurking about awaiting only the approach of hostile bands to exhibit itself, personal observation, presence on the spot, local knowledge and the keen perception Mr. Carmichael possesses, will soon enable him to detect the feeling and the people who entertain it. Bareilly is like a ship in full sail on smooth waters with no ruffled waves to disturb her progress. The Judge is now only required to complete the crew, and he, too, is said to be en route to join. Prior to the revolt, there were two Judges stationed at Bareilly, one designated additional, but his office has now been abolished, and Shahjehanpore made a Judge's station, and to which appointment Mr. W. Wynyard now stands gazetted. With a Judge at Moradabad, another at Bareilly, and a third at Shahjehanpore, the arrangement is a more convenient one.

AN OUDE FORT.—Amentie has the character of being one of the strongest, if not the strongest fort in Oude. Its area is something enormous. Two sides are said to be shut in by an impenetrable jungle, but the north and east sides are uncovered. The outermost defence of all is, it is said, merely a wall loopholed for musketry. Within this wall is a large space covered with a low jungle, interspersed with huts, &c., in which the garrison are lodged. Beyond this jungle are two successive lines of rampart and ditch, the last enclosing the private dwelling of the chief. It is said to be a maiden fortress, and to have defied kings and nobles of Oude alike. The poor wretch who thinks it will stop a British army must be a fit candidate for a lunatic asylum.

THE SULTANPORE FORCE, under the personal command of Major General Sir J. Hope Grant, marched from Sultanpore Cantonment on the morning of the 26th October. It is composed as follows:—F. Troop. Royal Horse Artillery, two 9-pounder guns, heavy battery, 7th Hussars, 1st regt. Hodson's Horse, Madras Sappers, H.M.'s 32nd Light Infantry, 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade, Madras Fusiliers, 5th Punjab Rifles. The force marched the first day to Doudpore on the Lucknow road. No enemy was sighted. The second day it marched about a mile beyond the Kandoonullah, ten miles, passing several most formidable entrenchments, which, however, were deserted by the enemy, and the remains of the camp in which the "Nusseerabad Brigade" has passed the rains subsequent to the recapture of Sultanpore. As it was evident that the birds had but recently flown Sir H. Grant pushed on with the cavalry and horse artillery, and came up with their rear near Jugdeespore, about six miles further on. The 7th Hussars and the horse artillery were brought up by a desperately deep and difficult nulla, the bridge over which they had unfortunately missed in the hurry of pursuit. Hodson's Horse, under Colonel Daly, C. B., more fortunate, got over the obstacle, and slew in a succession of single combats some twenty or thirty of the enemy. In one of these combats Lieutenant Paliser of Hodson's Horse was badly wounded, and four or five others. Two guns were, however, bagged, and the day's work may be considered on the whole a fair one. In the afternoon the force moved on to Jugdeespore, (still on the Lucknow road,) about 10 miles further. From Jugdeespore, on the morning of the 28th a portion of the force (cavalry, horse artillery, a portion of the heavy battery, the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade, and 5th Punjab Rifles) went against the fort of Mohonah some six miles north of Jugdeespore, where it was reported the Nusseerabad Brigade intended to make a stand. The fort was, however, evacuated, the enemy retreating in such haste on the approach of the force as to leave his fires even lighted, and his guns (four very good ones) so hurriedly buried that they were discovered almost immediately, together with a large supply of ammunition, and an enormous quantity of provisions. The cavalry pushed on after the fugitives six or seven miles further, and were in time to fire on a small portion of them crossing the Goomtee. The main body, it is ascertained, has proceeded westward, and will probably be brought to bag later in the campaign. On the whole, these three days' operations give good promise for the future. The enemy have been energetically followed up, though the force is incumbered (as some call it) with heavy guns. They are thoroughly broken and dispirited, and quite incapable of giving the force any trouble whilst it is engaged in the coming operations against Amentie. The force marched this morning fourteen miles in the direction of Amentie, and will take up the position destined for it in the siege of that place to-morrow. The Allahabad and Peshawar columns will, it is expected, simultaneously arrive, and take up their positions before the place, which probably contains many quaking hearts at this moment, notwithstanding the bravado with which all offers of terms on the part of the British Government have been met during the last two months.—Delhi Gazette.

LUCKNOW, Oct. 26.—A very strange piece of business occurred here the day before yesterday. Two gentlemen of the Uncovenanted Service were driving through a portion of the town, when one of them, to the astonishment of the other, jumped out of the buggy, and seizing a gigantic Affridie by the collar, as he was issuing forth from a shop with a hookah in hand, hallooed to his companion for aid in apprehending the son of Africa. A few words cleared up the astonishment of his friend. In the man before them did the former recognise the murderer of his entire family—a grandmother, a father, a brother, a wife, and a child were before him hewn to pieces, by the very man they so firmly held on—he alone escaping most miraculously. His child, after being decapitated by this villain, was torn asunder by him. Indelible was the mark, unforgetting the countenance that had deprived him of so many relatives. A year or more had passed, but a glance, a passing look was enough. The African was soon conveyed to the nearest police station, where, though he denies committing the atrocious deeds, yet admits that he witnessed them. It is hoped measures will be taken to prevent his witnessing such diabolical scenes again.—Hurkaru.

HORSE-TAMING.—The Englishman states that Captain Crossman, of the Invalids, who has recently returned from England, has brought with him Mr. Barey's secret of taming horses, and that an experiment made by him in Calcutta has proved completely successful.

MAJOR MCPHERSON.—The whole of the troops at Gwalior were paraded on the 30th October, for the purpose of presenting Major McPherson, of H.M. 78th Highlanders, with the Victoria Cross. Brigadier General Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., addressed the recipient in a very flattering speech, and said he was sorry that H.M. 78th Highlanders were not present to witness the bestowal of the decoration.

MEDICAL FEES.—The Court of Directors have refused to lay down any scale of fees for medical officers visiting the families of civil officers, but instruct the local Government to visit with severe marks of displeasure any attempts at extortion.

MR. S. S. HOGG, of the Bengal Civil Service, has been appointed to officiate as Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department.

THE EUROPEAN COLUMN, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Blunt, C.B., arrived at Dehra Dun on the 26th October.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—A private letter from Allahabad just received, mentions that the Governor-General will personally inspect several provinces in the disturbed districts, and will return to Calcutta about the middle of December. The same letter mentions that a number of matchlockmen have been engaged to guard the ferries on the Ganges to intercept fugitives from Oude.

BISHOP OLLIFFE proceeds to sea in the Fire Queen for the benefit of his health. The very Rev. A. Goran, Vicar-General, will act as the bishop's locum tenens.

MR. J. H. YOUNG, Collector of Customs in Calcutta, intends to retire from the service shortly. He is looking for an annuity that might be available to him in the year 1859-60.

THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—On the retirement of Colonel Ramsay, the commissary-general, the following arrangements are reported to have been sanctioned. Major Newbolt, the auditor of commissariat accounts, to succeed the commissary-general, Major Hobday, the deputy commissary-general, to become the auditor of commissariat accounts, and Major G. B. Reddie, who is now on sick leave, and expected to be back here shortly, is appointed as deputy commissary-general, in the place of Major Hobday.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £1 to £3.0s. To Liverpool, £1 to £1. 17s. 6d.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 9).—Since the resumption of business there has been a good demand for Mule Twist and Grey Goods for lower Bengal, as is generally the case at this time of the year, at improved prices. In Bleached Cottons a limited business continues to be done at about former prices. The market continues dull for Woolens and Metals.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 9).—A good business has been done, especially in Saltpetre, Lime, and Jute. Prices have advanced considerably on the principal articles of produce, owing to light supplies in the market. Indigo has attracted attention. In Rice some business has been done in the fine sizes. Corals have continued quiet. In Sugar only a small business in progress for the home markets. Lime in good demand for America. Synflower has attracted more attention at enhanced rates. Cutch inactive and declining.

SIR P. GRANT has embarked at Calicut for Bombay, from thence he will proceed to Jannah and Kampsee. He is expected at Hyderabad in January, on his return to Madras.

MADRAS.

SALAR JUNG.

The Royal Proclamation affords so graceful an opportunity for acknowledging the debt we owe his Highness the Nizam, and his minister, Salar Jung, for their loyalty throughout this rebellion, that we trust it will not pass away unimproved. Next to the tranquillity of the Punjab, the preservation of the empire is unquestionably due to the maintenance of quiet in the Nizam's dominions. There is no extravagance in the assertion, that had the Nizam thrown his influence into the scale of this rebellion, as he was importuned to do by every motive that could influence him, India was temporarily lost to us. The revolt of the contingent, which must have ensued, would have been followed by the defection of the Bombay army, and the rising of the Southern Maharatta country; and that the alien army of Madras would have withstood the pressure that would then have borne upon it is in the highest degree unlikely. We wish it to be understood that we are here uttering a conviction which we believe is entertained by every statesman in this country; and as the time has now happily arrived when that conviction may be expressed with propriety, it would be ungrace-ful and ungrateful to maintain silence any longer upon the subject. It may be necessary for the Friend of India to assure the world that annexation saved the empire, and to attempt to prove the paradox by pointing the finger at the Nizam as the source of our chief danger in the great crisis we have surmounted.
It is more to the purpose to reply, that the existence of the Nizam was the salvation of the State; and that we owe to the loyalty of this prince, and the worthy Salar Jung, his minister, our escape from the extremest peril that has ever overtaken us in India. Our dominion throughout the last six months of 1857 hung upon a thread, that would have snapped at any moment which announced the defection of the Nizam. There are secrets with all governments, and the journalist who may have found access to them in confidence, would be wanting in patriotism and in good faith if he failed to respect them. India does not yet know the perils it has escaped. It is no violation of confidence, however, to say that that escape was facilitated and secured by the steadfast and cordial adherence of our old ally of the Deccan. Throughout the whole south of India every disaffected hope hung upon the city of Hyderabad, while the answer to every inquiry proved that if the Nizam failed us, the whole peninsula was lost. Emissaries from the North-west were to be found in every part of it, inviting the troops to mutiny, and the people to rebellion. The Nizam's minister was abused and placarded in the city of Hyderabad itself as an apostate and an infidel, while the common people would have torn him in pieces for his adherence to us. The uneasiness was so deep in the assigned districts that the wives and families of the commissioners were quietly removed, while it is reported that our own officers recommended the spiking of their artillery, so imminent was an outbreak regarded about the time when the 1st Hyderabad cavalry mutinied at Aurungabad. Letters of the most seditious character were intercepted in the post-office; and all the elements of a general conflagration were ready to burst into a flame if Hyderabad would but fire the train. We are speaking the conviction of all who are well informed as to the state of matters in Southern India. None know these things so well as Lords Canning, Elphinstone, and Harris; General Coffin and Cuthbert Davidson. We are persuaded that the inquiry, how we may best do honour to men to whom we owe so much, is as grateful to the Governor-General, as it is to ourselves. The reward which suggests itself to us as a fitting expression of our obligation is, the restoration of the ceded districts to the Nizam; and we shall not be surprised to learn that our acknowledgment of the debt is made to take this most welcome shape. It is well enough known with how deep reluctance the Nizam consented to the dismemberment of his dominions; while the debt for which the cession was exacted, accrued from the maintenance of that contingent, which has done such gallant service in the campaign in Central India.

It is difficult to suggest a reward adequate to the services of the minister. That this man risked his life on our behalf there can be no reasonable doubt; as little, perhaps, that we owe the steadfastness of the Nizam to the ascendancy which Salar Jung has wisely been permitted to establish in the councils of that prince. Distinguished honourably in the Dec-can as a type of justice and humanity, and wise and loyal in counsel as he is firm in its execution, we can do nothing to raise the character of the minister; but we may do something, as an act of honour to ourselves, to show our appreciation of that character.—

STATE EDUCATION.—The Madras Examiner has a long article on state education. It says that the state should commence by educating the higher classes; and asks, what would become of society in England if, whilst the sons of peers and wealthy commoners had no educational institution to which they could resort, the home Government were to establish first-class schools and colleges in London for the education of the children of costermongers and Barclay's draymen? If the schools were first class, that is, conducted the student to the highest branches of science, literature, and art, then the sons of gentlemen might resort to such schools, in spite of their being frequented by the children of the ill-educated and poor. The Government is bound to provide education only for such of their subjects as are unable to educate themselves. This world is unfortunately so constituted that wealth can procure anything and everything, but happiness. The wealthy can always find means to educate their children, but the poor cannot. For the latter, then, the fostering care of Government is most necessary. If the former neglect to employ a portion of their wealth in securing the education of their children, then the loss is their own, and Government are not to be blamed if the educated child of the pauper ousts, in the race of life, the ignorant son of the millionaire or the prince.—Friend of India.

THE MADRAS TRADES ASSOCIATION are a little more active than the same Association in Calcutta.
They have just published their first report. In it they complain of the indolence of the collectors of sea customs. These gentlemen, in the receipt of Rs. 3,400 and Rs. 1,500 a month respectively, seldom make their appearance at the Custom-house at the appointed time, ten o'clock, and business is, consequently, at a standstill. The Madras municipality appears, from the same report, to be exceedingly defective. The Association also complains of the privilege enjoyed by wholesale wine and spirit merchants of issuing sample bottles of brandy. The privilege, it would appear, is abused, a large retail business being carried on under pretence of issuing samples.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF MARINE, Mr. J. J.
Franklin, has again urged on the Madras Government the necessity for the construction of a pier. The Governor of Madras has consented again to refer the matter home. We hope the scheme will not be adopted, for what Madras wants is a breakwater. The breakwater would certainly cost more than the pier, but it would convert the Madras roads into a safe and convenient harbour. Madras might become the emporium of Southern India, and the harbour dues would amply pay not only for repairing the breakwater, but handsome interest on the sum originally expended.
If, on the other hand, a pier be built, we shall in a short time be compelled to do all the work over again.

THE LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—We are glad to find that the Lawrence Asylum in the Neigherries is prospering. Up to the 9th of October the donations amounted to Rs. 20,025, the annual subscriptions to Rs. 2,832, and the monthly to Rs. 348. Sir Patrick Grant has declined individually to support the institution, but he has no objection to an appeal to the army, with this proviso, that his letter accompany the appeal.

But it is not our object to discuss this question at present.

The Proclamation next goes on to deplore, in a generous spirit, the evils and misery which have been brought upon India by the acts of ambitious men; and promises forgiveness to those who may desire to return to their allegiance. But we must confess that the sort of amnesty proclaimed, though it may have been unavoidable, does not appear to us to be calculated to produce the desired effect of subsiding the flame of rebellion—which can only be done by unconditionally extending the royal mercy to all and every, excepting some of the most notorious rebels, like the Nana and others.

In conclusion, we may observe, that the value of the Proclamation would have been much enhanced had something been said about the extension of education in India.—Rast Gofar, Nov. 7.

MISCELLANEOUS.

OUTRAGE BY SEEDERS.—It is so seldom that the Seeders about Kurrachee exhibit a pugnacious disposition towards Europeans, that we have heard with some surprise of a desperate attack two of that race made on a couple of gentlemen as they were riding along the bund road on Sunday evening last just after sunset. The occurrence took place between the jail and the English school. It appears that as the officers were proceeding gently along, the Seeders, who we suppose must have been intoxicated with liquor or some native drug, made a rush and managed to wound one of them with an immense bludgeon. Some soldiers passing by at the time instantly went to the rescue of the gentlemen, when one of the Seeders bolted, and got clear off. A corporal of H.M.'s 46th Regt. tackled the other, and managed to wrest the stick from him, as well as to get possession of his pugree; after which the fellow leaped over the hedge by the road side and, although pursued for some distance, he contrived to elude the soldiers. The bludgeon and pugree were made over to one of the officers, and it is hoped that with the assistance of the police, they may enable him to get some clue to these dangerous customers.—Kosid, Oct. 26.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—We regret to announce the untimely death of Mr. Thomas Richard Barnes, proprietor of the "English Hotel," Military Square, Fort, who met with a watery grave in our harbour on the evening of the 23rd October. It appears the unfortunate deceased was expecting his wife by the ship Windsor Castle, and on seeing some signals at the Castle flagstaff, he, in company with two friends, ship captains, went in a boat towards the middle ground to meet the expected vessel, but being disappointed they hailed the ship Fortune, which was going out of the harbour, and the captain of the latter being a friend of theirs, they were invited on board. After spending a few minutes in the Fortune they took their leave, and the two captains first got into the boat. Mr. Barnes followed, and was descending the ladder, when, his foot accidentally slipping, he lost his hold of the rope, and was precipitated into the sea, where he disappeared. Every exertion was made by the people of the ship to save the deceased, but to no purpose, for he did not rise to the surface. The body has not yet been discovered. What the feelings of the hapless widow will be when she is informed of this unfortunate accident, on her arrival in Bombay by the Windsor Castle, which is hourly expected, may be more easily conceived than described.

THE 30TH N.I.—The disarmed sepoys of the 30th Regiment N.I., consisting of two hundred and thirty rank and file, who arrived from Kurrachee on Saturday last, in the Hon. Company's steamer Berence, were marched on Monday last into the Grand Arsenal, where they were served out with arms, of which they had been deprived several months ago, in consequence of their disloyalty. The sepoys seemed delighted at the idea of being re-armed, and the would-be mutineers, who, it is to be hoped have given up their traitorous designs, showed their joy by embracing "Brown Bess" with peculiar expressions of recognition. The 30th Regiment will be stationed at Malligam, to which place they will shortly proceed.—Bombay Times, Oct. 20.

THE GOVERNOR.—Lord Elphinstone left Bombay for Matheron on Saturday, the 6th of November, having remained at Malabar Point since the issue of the proclamation.

THE SECRETARIATE.—Mr. W. Hart, secretary to Government in the general department, has been allowed leave of absence for fifteen months on medical certificate, and left for Europe by the Overland Mail of the 9th November. Mr. Ellis, it is said, will officiate as secretary during Mr. Hart's absence.

BHOWNUGGUR, 2nd Nov. 1858.—In consequence of a telegram received at the court of his Highness the Rajah of Bhownuggur, from his agent in Bombay (Mr. Merwanjee Nusserwanjee), preparations were made on a grand scale for the inauguration of the sovereignty of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. On the morning of the 1st November, a royal salute was fired, and the whole town of Bhownuggur wore a holiday aspect. The streets were all cleansed and decorated with flowers and flags, and the people turned out in holiday attire. Every house was illuminated in the evening, and the rajah's palace was one blaze of light. The proclamation was read and explained to the people by the karbarree, in the presence of the rajah, his nobles, and the leading men of the principality. Bhownuggur never looked so well as it did on the evening of the 1st. It was one blaze of light, and the people all looked pleased and happy. Rose-water, sugar, and pannaoparee were distributed from the palace, and all was joy and festivity. In all the chief towns of the Rajah's dominions, similar rejoicings were made in honour of the event, and a day of general jubilee proclaimed. It was too late to prepare fireworks, but we are to have them soon, as well as some entertainments by European artists specially engaged for the occasion. Throughout all Her Majesty's dominions, no town could eclipse Bhownuggur either in loyalty or sincerity. You may have had a grander demonstration in Bombay, but it was not a heartier one; each of us, from the Rajah to the ryot, having vied with each other in testifying our fealty and allegiance to Victoria, Queen of India. Great credit is due to the principal Karbarree for the part he took in the arrangements.—Bombay Times.

KHANDISH.—Captain Keating, the political agent of Western Malwa, at present officiating in Nimar, has completed one of the most successful small campaigns of the season. It is not a month ago that this indefatigable officer was ordered to keep the Bombay road open, rid the Suidna neighbourhood of the plundering Bheels and others, and to kill or capture the leaders, amongst whom one Seetaram Koer was the most prominent. This Seetaram asserted that he was the true Holkar, and was backed by the Nana or Peishwa's friends. In fact, he was the only man who had sufficient influence to collect a body of blackguards. With him were two or three Mundloes of influence, and Bhema Naick, against whom and others in the Satpura hills, our Bombay friends made a little expedition in the early part of this year. Captain Keating's army was not a large one. He had not 500 men with him, and not a single European. The principal part of this force was contributed by Maharajah Holkar under two of his principal officers, one being Buree Khoman Singh, commander-in-chief. The results of the campaign are briefly told. The rebels were traced, pursued, and engaged. Seetaram was killed; another of the leaders was caught and died; a third, Rughonath Singh, is a prisoner; and the redoubtable Bhema Naick has also delivered himself up. Above one hundred prisoners have been captured and quantities of property, recovered. We congratulate Captain Keating most heartily on his success. Hardly recovered from sickness, the wounds he received at Chundairee barely healed, this intrepid officer unhesitatingly exposed himself in the most inclement season to the deadly jungles of Suidna, penetrated into them and obtained a success which a field force, out for several weeks could not effect. He deserves some substantial reward from Government.—Mofussilite.

THE BRIGADE AT AHMEDNUGUR.—The Poona, Irregular Horse, from Seroor, has been directed to proceed with all despatch to Ahmednugur, to join the force now being assembled at that station, to oppose the progress of Tantia Topee in the Deccan, of which the 91st Regiment and the 4th Troop Horse Artillery will form part.

EAST INDIAN RIFLE CORPS.—The recruiting for the East Indian Rifle corps is progressing very slowly; as yet only two young men having been enlisted. The names of the parties are John Thomas O'Keefe and Joseph Priestly. They were sworn in before Mr. H. E. Leake, at the Masagon Police Office, having passed the surgeon's examination. Each person, after being enlisted before the magistrate, receives a bounty of Rs. 25 with a free kit; and is entitled to all the advantages enjoyed by a European soldier as to pay, pension, &c. At present, the specified time of service is ten years.

TRIAL OF THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH INSPECTORS.—A Hyderabad correspondent of the Sindian of the 20th Oct. gives a long account of the commencement of this investigation, but his avowed partisanship prevents us from placing confidence in his narrative. For some cause not explained, Mr. Barton, the barrister, who left Bombay to defend the inspectors, does not appear to have been present at the trial. Lieutenant Tyrwhit and Mr. Stack were the magistrates. On the 13th Mr. Dewey was charged with an assault at Roamaka Bazaar, on or about the 12th of May last. The evidence for the prosecution was taken, and the prisoner was allowed until next morning to prepare his defence. On the close of the case for the prosecution last mentioned, Messrs. Dewey and Eckford were arraigned for having, at Nugger Parkur, about the 9th of June, wilfully shot a cow; and the evidence so signally failed that Mr. Dewey claimed an acquittal on the ground of there not being a single word against him; and Mr. Eckford, very much to the surprise of the Court, also claimed an acquittal on the very evidence given against him. They were both acquitted. This charge is the only one yet disposed of. The proceedings in the other cases have been stayed pending instructions from the Commissioner.

CAPTAIN HAINES.—Some wealthy Hindoo gentlemen have, we observe, a very graceful Oriental custom pursued on cases of great national rejoicing—they have paid the creditors of those imprisoned for debt, and let the captives go free. We are sorry to find our rulers on this matter outdone by their subjects. A public servant long distinguished, who has repeatedly been thanked by the Court of Directors and received a decorated sword in testimony of the approbation of his employers, has now been four years incarcerated for debt—the fifth year of his captivity rapidly advancing. To Captain Haines we owe the possession of Aden and transformation of a beggarly Arab village to a large trading station. He who for fourteen years reigned supreme at the great half-way house to Suez, —having been twice tried by a jury of his countrymen on charges of malversation, and been fully acquitted—is, with his family who sought his prison house to solace and comfort him in his solitude, passing away. Now that capital punishments, unless for three of the most atrocious offences, have been wiped from the criminal code, a debtor whose valuable and long-continued services have been acknowledged by the State, is being done to death by the most cruel of agencies—that of a life-long incarceration. The representatives of royalty may depend upon it, that any oversight in this matter, for we believe that the prisoner and his sufferings have just been forgotten, is the very last thing of which his sovereign would approve. Her accession to the throne of India ought to be the signal for opening the prison doors, and permitting the long tormented captive to go free.—Standard, Nov. 5.

A RETIRING FUND.—A correspondent of the Telegraph proposes to establish a retiring fund. He shows the want of such a fund by pointing out the inextricable difficulties in which young officers are often involved by the present system of buying out lieutenant colonels; such a fund, known as Colonel Holland's fund, has already been established in Bombay, but the system broke down. In 1855 Major Stock proposed a scheme, which, however, was never carried into effect. The scheme now proposed is based on Major Stock's plan, and will give, in the shape of bonus, to retiring officers all the sums they have subscribed to the fund, minus the interest.

CAPTAIN HART'S SCHEME.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier publishes a sketch of Captain Hart's scheme for supplying Poona with water. He proposes to dam across the valley, near the village of Upper Ambeygaun, and convey the water by pipe or masonry aqueduct to a reservoir near the Poona camp. The dam will be small, 1,270½ feet in length, and 59'86 feet above the bed of the stream. The aqueduct will be rather more than seven miles long. Should the water be conveyed by pipes only, the length of piping required will be about five miles. The plan seems feasible enough, and on no exaggerated scale.

DEATH.—We are sorry to hear of the somewhat sudden demise of one of the oldest residents in Sind, T. J. Tanner, Esq., Purser I. N. and Paymaster Indus Flotilla, much and deservedly regretted by his brother officers and all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

GAS COMPANY.—The prospectus of a Gas Light Company for Bombay has been published. The capital is £50,000, in 1,000 shares of £5 each. The Board of Directors contains many good names, and the majority of the natives are in favour of the scheme.

Futteh Mahomed Khan. On the 5th it was learnt from a kafilah, who had arrived from Turkistan, that the King of Bokhara was at Samarkund, and that he was going to take the field against the King of Kogan. The latter was also prepared for war, and the Russians had come to his assistance, owing to the oppression of Sirdar Ufsul Khan. The people of Balkh had joined the Russians. On the 6th it was reported to the Dost that cholera was raging at Peshawur, and that it had also commenced at Cabul."—Lahore Chronicle.

Operations in Bundelcund.

Allahabad, 14th September, 1853.

From Maj.-Gen. G. C. Whitlock, Comdg. Saugor Field Div., to the Chief of the Staff.

Dated Banda, 19th August, 1853.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for submission to H. E. the C.-in-C., copy of a communication from Brigdr. Carpenter, comdg. the 1st inf. brig., detailing the successful result of a surprise of a body of rebels in the neighbourhood of Kirwee.

G. C. WHITLOCK, Maj.-Gen.
Comdg. Saugor Field Div.

From Brigdr. W. Carpenter, Comdg. 1st Inf. Brig., Saugor Field Div., to the Asst. Adjt. Gen., Saugor Field Div.

Dated Kirwee, 14th August, 1853.

Sir,—Authentic intelligence having reached me shortly before noon yesterday, that a large body of mutineers and rebels, variously estimated at 2,000 to 4,000 men, were actually descending the Ghats, about two or three miles in front of the villages or towns of Nayagon, Seetapore, Chitrakote, and Kampta, any or either of which places were in danger of immediate attack, I have the honour to report for the information of the Maj.-Gen. comdg. the division, that I lost no time in organising the detachment noted below, and marched at 2 p.m. guided by Syed Akbar Ali, Tehseeldar, and Ghulam Ahva Khan, Thanadar of Kirwee, both of whom have been most zealous in obtaining for me correct information. I may here observe I have ascertained from a prisoner that the rebels came from Durdree, and were under the command of Goomdun Sing, Rummust Sing, and others of inferior note, who are known to muster nearly 2,500 men; but I am inclined to think the number of the enemy we engaged did not exceed 1,500, of whom about 200 were said to be mutinous Sepoys:—

2 Brass guns carried on elephants.

Royal Artillery.—1 captain; 3 sergeants; 2 corporals; 3 bombardiers; 32 gunners and one trumpeter, of whom 2 sergeants, 1 bombardier, and 9 gunners were mounted.

Madras Engineers.—1 lieutenant.

H.M.'s 43rd Regt.—1 captain; 1 lieutenant; 1 ensign; 6 sergeants; 119 rank and file.

1st Regt. N.I.—1 major; 1 captain, 1 lieutenant; 1 ensign; 6 native officers; 12 havildars; 132 rank and file.

Sikh Mounted Police.—1 jemadar; 2 duffa'ars; 18 Sowars.

2. In less than three hours my advance guard, preceded by the mounted men of the R. A., came in sight of the enemy in force, about a mile distant, and apparently in confusion, as if taken by surprise; but they immediately formed up, with their right resting on one of the passes through the hills, and their left protected by a body of cavalry and infantry en potence, with another pass close at hand, and on the left of the cavalry a labyrinth of deep and almost impenetrable ravines intersected each other, wooded to the very summit; the rear of the main position was a precipitous hill, covered with large boulders of rock and thick jungle. The temple of Hoonamaun, a very strong building on the face of the hill, afforded good cover to the enemy, some of whom appeared to be in possession. I halted within about three or four hundred yards, to enable Capt. Palmer, R. A., to prepare his guns for action; this seemed to give confidence to the enemy, for he immediately cheered with loud shouts of defiance, inviting us to come on, and commenced a desultory fire along his whole line, so that I hoped he intended to make a vigorous stand.

3. As soon as Capt. Palmer was ready to open fire, I advanced H.M.'s 43rd L.I., and the 1st N.I., in skirmishing order with supports, and the mounted art. men and Sikh horse in reserve. Capt. Palmer's practice with canister and round shot was admirable; and the Enfield rifle told upon the enemy's ranks; but they turned and fled by the time we were within 200 yards of the base of the hill, retiring up its face, whilst we plied them with canister, rifle, and musketry, which, in spite of the cover afforded by the rocks and jungle, did considerable execution. The ascent, however, was almost perpendicular, and the men too much exhausted by heat to attempt it, so that it is somewhat difficult to state the enemy's loss; but from personal observation, on the most moderate calculation, it may be fairly estimated at upwards of 100, whilst our own was nearly nil, as the enemy fired too high and in confusion; their cav. retired with even more precipitation than the inf., by the difficult pass I have mentioned, and had disappeared before we could reach the gorge.

4. By this time night came on, accompanied by torrents of rain. I therefore left a party of fifty Sepoys of the 1st regt., under the command of Capt. Rishton, at the house of the Thakoorin of Nayagon, in order to allay the alarm of the people, who were panic-stricken throughout the villages I have named. I myself returned with the remainder of the troops to Kirwee, and arrived about half-past one this morning. Capt. Rishton, who performed his duty in a very satisfactory manner, came in at 8 A.M., and reported all quiet, and that the enemy had retired to their stronghold in the hills.

The Thakoorin of Nayagon did good service during the morning, by exhibiting a bold front to the enemy, although she has very few armed men, and only one gun. This lady acted in obedience to my previous instructions to resist to the uttermost until we came to her support.

5. The conduct of the troops, officers as well as men, deserves my warmest commendations, and the native soldiers emulated their Europ. comrades, whilst all appeared to regret the enemy did not give them a better opportunity to display their valour.

6. I beg to mention for favourable consideration the names of Capt. Palmer, comdg. R.A.; Capt. Colville, comdg. detach. of H.M.'s 43rd L.I.; and Maj. Gottreux, comdg. 1st regt. N.I.; and I am happy to have another opportunity to bear testimony to the zeal and energy of Maj. Holson, my maj. of brig. All these officers deserve, and have cordial thanks.

7. The medical arrangements were well provided for by Asst. surg. Jowett, and those of the commissariat by Mr. Conductor Lynch, to my entire satisfaction.

8. I deeply lament the loss of three men of the gallant 43rd L.I. by sun-stroke. The afternoon was very hot, and a great many Europeans fell out during the march, and after the engagement; but I am inclined to attribute sun stroke in these cases to the fact that few of us have yet recovered our natural health and strength, impaired by the arduous hot weather campaign, and the long marches to which we have been exposed.

9. Fortunately, the cessation of rain, for a few days, had dried up the country, and enabled me to surprise the rebels; but our return night march is not to be described. The rain poured down in torrents, and the ravines, which are numerous and deep in this neighbourhood, had become rivers. In passing one of them, an incident occurred deserving notice. A mounted artilleryman, Corporal Hughes, got into the deepest part of the stream, his horse was swept away, and he himself on the eve of drowning, when Staff-sergeant Glasgow, of the R.A., dashed amid the darkness into the foaming flood, at imminent peril of his life, and saved his comrade.

I witnessed this brave action, and have much pleasure in recording it.

W. CARPENTER, Brigdr.,
Comdg. 1st Inf. Brig. Saugor Field Div.

INDIAN JUGGLERS.—One of the tricks consisted in wrapping a boy in a net so tightly that he could neither move his feet nor his arms, which were folded across his chest. The net was then tied by a firm knot behind. The boy, thus bound, was placed in a basket only just large enough to hold him, and the basket, which lay on the ground, was covered with a cloth. After some ceremonies, the magician assured us that the boy had gone to the bazar, to prove which he called him and was answered by a childish voice far in the distance. Whether this was effected by ventriloquism or a confederate, I do not know. He then approached the basket and, to further prove that it was empty, thrust a spear through it in all directions. This part of the performance was quite incomprehensible, as the basket was so small that the boy could hardly be crammed in, in the first place; and it, as well as the spear, were submitted for our inspection to show that there were no false bottoms, or other similar devices employed by European stage-jugglers. A few more ceremonies recalled the boy, who jumped out of the basket, unembarrassed by the net, which was rolled up and held in his hand.—Minerva's "From New York to Delhi."

Court Martial.

LIEUT. GEORGE GILES ROOKE, 21st N.I.

Head Quarters, Allahabad, Oct. 27.—At a Gen. Court Martial assembled at Peshawur on Thursday, Oct. 7, Lieut. G. G. Rooke, 21st N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For having, at Peshawur, on Aug. 11, 1858, appeared, in a state of intoxication, at a theatrical performance held in the barracks of the left wing of H.M.'s 81st regt., he being at the time on duty of station subaltern officer of the day.

Finding.—“Guilty.”

Sentence.—To be cashiered.

Approved and confirmed,
CLYDE, Gen. C. in C.

Allahabad, Oct. 22, 1858.—Recommendation.—The Court having awarded the only sentence within their power, beg most respectfully to recommend the prisoner to the merciful consideration of the C. in C., in consequence of his youth and inexperience.

REMARKS BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN INDIA.
The court martial having sentenced the prisoner to be cashiered for the crime of drunkenness on duty in a place of public resort, concludes its proceeding with a recommendation of mercy.

If this recommendation were attended to, Lord Clyde is at a loss to understand how in future he could subject a private soldier to corporal or other punishment for drunkenness on duty under arms in the Peshawur division.

The members of the court-martial, owing to want of reflection on the first principles of discipline, and on the law which weighs alike on all ranks of the army, have imposed on the Commander-in-Chief the responsibility belonging to themselves; there being, in the opinion of his Excellency, no extenuating circumstances whatever on which to found a plea for mitigation of punishment.

Lieut. G. G. Rooke will be struck off the strength 21st N.I. from the date of the publication of this order at the head-quarter of his regiment, of which a report is to be made to the Adjutant-General of the army, and to the Assistant-General at the presidency.

BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

ILL-TREATMENT OF NATIVES.

Head Quarters, Poona, Oct. 29.

The Commander in Chief regrets the necessity of calling the attention of officers to G. O. C. 1st September, 1856, paras. 33 to 40, in consequence of the many recent instances in which that order has been disregarded by commanding officers on the line of march.

2.—There is the less excuse for this want of attention to the order in question, because it is quoted at the foot of every form of progress report, given to commanding officers at the commencement of a march.

3.—In the instances referred to, not only have the ryots been ill treated, but native officials holding responsible situations under Government have been subjected to threats and indignity when in the discharge of their duty.

Government have, in a letter dated the 22nd inst., desired that officers should be again exhorted to treat all natives, official or non official, with consideration and kindness, and have notified that they will visit with their severe displeasure any one who disregards the distinct and stringent orders now in force on this subject.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 15, 1858.

UNPOPULARITY OF THE ENGLISH RULE.

If a courteous foe, Major Martin is also a determined one, and will not be refused. Having collected his reinforcements he returns to the charge, resolved not only to maintain his own position, but, if possible, to carry ours. In truth, he is no mean adversary, and having discovered the weak point in his opponent's coat of mail, he concentrates thereupon all his force and skill, without wasting his strength or cunning on armour of proof.

In a brief notice of a very suggestive pamphlet, entitled "Why is the English Rule odious to the Natives of India?" we expressed some doubts as to the existence of the fact therein assumed, and remarked that the Major himself had failed to answer his own question. In reply, he adduced various opinions and sayings of eminent civilians, in confirmation of his belief in "the unpopularity of our rule, and the hatred of the people towards us." The chief causes for this alleged state of things, according to Major Martin's authorities, are the enforcement of the village system throughout the sub-presidency of Agra, the dilatoriness of the Civil Courts, and the attempt "to force the policy of Europe on the people of Asia." Now, we at once admit the reality of every one of these evils, and we add to them the arbitrary and unjust resumption of grants of land and revenue. On many occasions during, at least, the last eighteen months have we stigmatised these causes of dissatisfaction, and implored the Government not to delay until too late the application of powerful remedies. But while we acknowledge, with regret, the existence of those blots, we are not prepared to concede Major Martin's postulate that the British rule is therefore odious to the people of India. We fully recognise the imperfections in our system of administration, but we are rather disposed to wonder that they are not still greater and more numerous than that they should be such as they are. We maintain that our errors have proceeded partly from the rapidity of our conquests, and partly from our ignorance of the real feelings of the population, and consequently injudicious and premature desire to introduce the civilisation and liberalism of the West among a people whose opinions have been fixed and stereotyped for thirty centuries. We committed the folly of pouring new wine into old bottles, and of patching an old garment with new stuff. With equal success we might have attempted the cultivation of Lapland moss at Sierra Leone. Still, our faults were those of the understanding, and not of the heart. A writer in Blackwood's Magazine, whose opinions otherwise are nearly identical with those expressed by Major Martin, acknowledges as much when he speaks of "our wrong-headed benevolence in subjecting them

(the landed gentry) to courts of justice fashioned on the English model." Again, the same writer states that from the days of Lord Cornwallis to those of Lord William Bentinck "the most striking characteristic of our Government, especially in its Gangetic provinces, was a great, perhaps an excessive, desire to extend the protection of law and of a fair administration of justice over every class of our subjects." It was "with this noble end in view," that the perpetual settlement of Bengal was effected, and in furtherance of the same policy was the Special Commission afterwards appointed for the purpose of inquiring into and redressing the wrongs of the ancient landholders in the Upper Provinces. Unhappily this Commission, through the incapacity of some of the officials, became the fruitful parent of many abuses, and its result was undoubtedly the very opposite to what was intended by its appointment. The landed aristocracy were ill-treated and alienated under a delusive idea of benefiting the population at large, and to the apprehension of similar injustice may no doubt be attributed the obstinate resistance of the Oude Talookdars. The sepoys and the ousted proprietors of land have, however, been almost our sole enemies throughout the revolt. Bengal Proper has been disturbed in only one district. The Punjab has remained faithful and zealous. The Presidency of Madras has been perfectly tranquil, and in that of Bombay the partial disturbances that have occurred have been suppressed by native troops. Does this look like universal hatred? Are we not rather entitled to plume ourselves on the general fidelity of races subjected by arms or policy, but differing entirely from their rulers in language, religion, usages, and opinions? To expect gratitude from those whom we have benefited is contrary to all experience. It is something that we are not universally execrated by those for whom we have done so much, and for whom we are willing to do so much more, provided only they will accept our favours in the same spirit in which they are offered. If we cannot command the love and respect of the natives, we have at least the proud consciousness of having deserved to do so. It is true that we have fallen into many lamentable errors in our too great eagerness to improve the peoples subject to our sway, but even for these it is unfair to judge harshly of the Government. However, it is not yet too late to supply the shortcomings of the past, and we have every confidence that the present Government will benefit by the dearly-bought experience of their predecessors, and be enabled to avoid the rocks and shoals that beset their progress in a then unexplored channel.

THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION.

We have no wish to be captious or exacting. We have not scanned the Royal Proclamation with any preconceived intention of finding fault with its tenor or details. We are fully sensible of the difficulty of framing a document that should give satisfaction alike to the British public at home, and to the excited and suspicious peoples of Hindostan. We ask not for Oriental imagery and spasmodic fervour, nor should we object to plain English sense, couched in simple but vigorous diction. But we are reasonably disappointed with a State paper so utterly lukewarm and pointless as the Proclamation issued to the inhabitants of India on the 1st of November. Had it been delivered through the voice of Parliament as the law of this land, we should at once have accepted it as a public document couched in the usual ambiguous terms, and with the usual absence of feeling. We have long grown familiar with obscurity of speech and torpor of sentiment, and are even disposed to regard these defects as the proper attributes of a Government subject to the scrutiny of the press, and to the action of popular opinion. But far other qualities were required in addressing an impulsive and excitable people, unaccustomed to public discussion and habituated from infancy to regard the decrees of the Sircar as the will of heaven. That such edicts should be looked upon as valid and unchangeable, it is essential that they be both clear and positive. And it is precisely on those two points that the Proclamation in question appears to be defective. The very enunciation of the titles of our gracious Sovereign is altogether too vague and indistinct to make any impression upon a population who know no more about America and Australasia than our fathers did about Timbuctoo. And then mark the bathos of the sudden transition to the legal preamble, "Whereas, for divers weighty reasons, &c." For all that the natives are likely to understand of this paragraph, it might as well have been written in Greek, while the word "consent" is certainly not calculated to give them any very high notion of the power of the Padshah Begum who now reigns over them. Equally misplaced is the title of viceroy, though, perhaps, it may be rendered intelligible to the people of Oude as Nawab-Wuzeer. Then it seems to us injudicious to give a mere temporary confirmation in their several offices to the persons hitherto employed in the service of the East India Company. However permanent may be their tenure of office, to the natives it will appear as temporary and uncertain, because of the qualifying clause, "subject to our future pleasure, and to such laws and regulations as may hereafter be enacted." If these words mean anything, it is that the officers of the late Company will be kept on for the present, until their fate has been decided upon by the aforesaid Padshah Begum. Now, in the East there is nothing so objectionable as uncertainty, or the chance of change. It is there almost better to do wrong by rule, than to do good by fits and starts.

The ratification of all existing treaties and engagements with the native princes is intended to allay any apprehensions entertained by weak or dishonest persons, and excited or encouraged by crafty and designing men. At the same time the experience of all history teaches us the true value of treaties, and warns us against attaching any undue importance to official declarations, however sincere at the moment of enunciation. There is no doubt that these engagements will be maintained until they are broken, and then both parties will allege that it is the other which is to blame.

The next paragraph would have been entirely satisfactory, but for the concluding "desire" that the native princes—meaning, we presume, their subjects—"should enjoy that prosperity and that social advancement which can only be secured by internal peace and good government." If the word "desire" signify no more than a prayer, or fervent wish, there is nothing to be said against this clause; but in State papers it usually implies something approaching to command, or the assertion of a superior will. And in that sense this clause may be understood to convey an intimation that the native princes will be required to administer their States according to English notions of polity.

Passing over the acknowledgment that the Sovereign of Great Britain is bound by the same obligation to the natives of British India as to all other subjects, we arrive at, perhaps, the most important clause in the entire document. As a declaration of perfect neutrality in questions of religious faith, nothing can be more explicit, but it goes much too far. If it is to be enforced in the letter as well as in the spirit, the local authorities will have no power to suppress the many brutal and degrading exhibitions which form the chief feature of the religious observances of the Hindoos. A saving clause might well have been introduced to the effect that no interference would be permitted so long as the public worship did not offend against decency and high-toned morality. As it is, an excellent opportunity has been lost of repressing the worst abominations of Hindooism and of putting an end to the obscene and disgusting rites of that most foul and impious creed. We may congratulate ourselves, however, that Suttee, Female Infanticide, and Thuggee, have been already declared contrary to law, for otherwise these practices would have been protected and perpetuated by virtue of this strangely-worded Proclamation.

The recognition of the right of every native to hold office is unexceptionable in theory, and we have no objection to their obtaining any post "the duties of which they may be qualified, by their education, ability, and integrity, duly to discharge." But "there's the rub."

The following paragraph has "healing on its wings," and, had it been less stiff and formal, might have inspired a far greater degree of confidence among the landed proprietors. It is especially addressed to the class which has had most reason to complain of the Company's administration. The warmest admirer of the late system is compelled to admit the injustice, bordering on spoliation, which marked the practice of the Civil Servants in the Upper Provinces in the matter of "resumptions." That evil is now to be amended, and equity rather than technical and financial considerations will henceforth be kept in view.

Against the promise of amnesty to all who may tender their submission before the close of the current year, with the exception only of those who have actually taken part in the murder of British subjects, we do not raise the slightest objection. Enough has been done by way of retribution; let it now be tried how far conciliatory measures may avail to restore tranquillity and mutual confidence.

The concluding paragraph draws huge shadowy outlines, the merit of which cannot be judged until they are in some degree filled in. While hoping for the best, the past forbids us to be too sanguine for the future. The Hindoo is not a promising material. There is too much sand mixed with the clay of his composition to render him really plastic. He neither retains impressions, nor receives them properly. In short, he is only fit to be used as a burnt brick, to be piled up indiscriminately with millions precisely similar to form the pediment of a mighty pillar—that pillar the British power.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE PAST, THE PRESENT, AND THE FUTURE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—I thank you for the publication of my letter in your paper of the 6th December, and also for the spirit of your own remarks thereon. To those whose minds and thoughts are occupied with India and its future as connected with our own land, the question of the general feelings of the inhabitants of that country towards us and our rule is a subject of the deepest importance. It is one upon which there may be, and doubtless are, differences of opinion; and its public discussion, when carried on with candour and moderation, must be productive of public benefit. I am led now to address you again regarding it, because it appears to me that your observation upon the able article in Blackwood to which you advert is calculated altogether to mislead the reader who may not have perused the article itself. Speaking of our treatment of the native landed proprietors, you say, "It is not denied that the latter (the British authorities) acted in perfect good faith, and with excellent intentions, though in utter ignorance," &c.

It seems to me that, so far from such being the case, one of the main objects of the article is to show the want of good faith displayed by the British Government in its treatment of the native proprietors. See at page 703 the observations upon Mr. Boulderson's account of the abominable and iniquitous treatment which the Talookdar of Munchanna received at our hands, and which causes Mr. Boulderson to say that no wonder he is now (June, 1857) a rebel.

Again, read at page 704 the account of the Special Resumption Commission—how the work of resumption "went merrily on, to the infinite disparagement of our name for good faith, humanity, and justice;" till at length "resumption became a passion; hundreds of decisions in favour of Government were passed in a single day; and the principle was broadly proclaimed that the very existence of a rent-free tenure was a nuisance, and ought to be abated."

Can it be that such passages were intended to mark the writer's opinion that the Government acted "in perfect good faith, and with excellent intentions?"

Again, at page 707, we have Mr. Edwards' account of the warnings that he gave to Government during the year preceding the outbreak, of the consequences likely to ensue from "the great abuse of the power of the Civil Courts, and the reckless manner in which they decreed the sale of rights and interests connected with the soil." Mr. Edwards was Judge of Benares, and, consequently, had the best possible opportunities of being thoroughly acquainted with the working of the system. Mr. Edwards says again, at page 708—"The danger now is that this vast mass of our subjects (the proprietary body), who are numbered by tens of thousands, and who are the real thews and sinews of the country, will never consent to the restoration of a Government to power which they consider treated them with harshness. . . . I feel convinced that no amount of force will restore us to power, unless at the same time some measures be taken for undoing the evils of the past. . . . I am fully satisfied that the rural classes would never have joined in rebelling with the Sepoys, whom they hated, had not these causes of discontent already existed."

Should the reader desire any further evidence as to "the good faith and excellent intentions" of the British Government in its treatment of the native landed proprietors, it is only necessary to refer him to a most able article on "British India," in the Quarterly Review for July, 1853, where he will find a detail of the doings of the Inam Commission (a commission to inquire into alienations of revenue in the Dakhun), instituted in 1851, and which was still carrying on its work of spoliation when the mutinies occurred, in 1857, when, to quote the words of the Review, "so general and alarming had become the spirit of disaffection it had engendered, that it was brought suddenly to a close when the rebellion broke out. . . . But the mischief has been done, and it will take a century, if we remain so long in India, before confidence in our good faith and justice will be restored."

military men, or others unconnected with the services, came in warning us of the hatred in which we are held by the great body of the natives. The exceptions are so rare that they may be said to prove the rule. I cannot say that I myself have seen even one. I am told that Mr. Gubbins enunciates a contrary opinion, but I have not read his book. There appeared in the Daily News of the 7th December a letter from Nagpore, under the signature of "E. V.," obviously the production of one well acquainted with India and its people, and which gives anything but a cheering view of our prospects. Our greatest difficulties will, indeed, be only commencing when open warfare and resistance have been overcome. One of the most pressing points will then be the financial state of the country. Who will venture to guess at the war expenditure of the last eighteen months, during which the united armies of the three Presidencies have been kept upon the war establishment, and for the most part engaged in active operations in the field? The pay of the troops is a mere paltry item in the expenses of such a time, and the bare thought of what the war bill must come to is enough to make the stoutest heart quail. Undoubtedly, as soon as ever active operations are brought to a close, and there is no longer an enemy in the field against us, there will be an urgent call for economy in every department, and one of the first measures will be to reduce the army to a peace establishment. It remains to be seen what will be the conduct and demeanour of those mercenaries who have been rioting in plunder, and flushed with constant excitement, battle and victory for a year and a-half. What will they say and do when suddenly told that their services are no longer required, and that they must return peaceably to their homes and lead a quiet life, and get their bread how they can? Then we shall begin to realise the deep significance of the warning given by the Rajah of Putalee to Mr. Raikes:—"Wait, sir, until this excitement of victory, this surfeit of plunder be over; wait till you mass large bodies of Sikhs in your cantonments, and then remember that I warned you of the danger." It may not, perhaps, be very easy to say whether we shall incur the greater danger by keeping our heterogeneous levies together, or by dismissing them to their homes. The first move made in dispensing with the services of any of them may not improbably alarm the rest with the prospect that their turn is not far distant; and every European soldier that we can muster in the country is likely enough to be in requisition as a protection from our at present excellent friends and mercenary allies.

At the first moment, too, of leisure for anything but war and its all-engrossing concerns, the puzzling question of a great change in our system of taxation must be met and grappled with. It seems impossible that there can be any diminution in the civil charges for governing the country; they are much more likely to be increased; and I take it to be quite certain that there must be a large increase in the military expenses for some time to come at any rate. There was a deficiency of revenue before the outbreak. Whence, then, is the revenue for the increased expenditure to be obtained? The answer will most probably be,—by a complete remodelling of our whole revenue system, which shall throw a due share of the public burdens upon those large and wealthy classes which have heretofore contributed nothing directly, and very little indirectly, to the public resources.

Nothing can be more just in theory than the carrying into effect of a well organised plan which shall throw upon those hitherto favoured classes their due share towards the burdens of the State; but practically there will be many difficulties, and not a few dangers, to be overcome before the end is accomplished. Of the difficulty of devising means for bringing those classes within the grasp of the tax-gatherer I will say nothing. It is a mere matter of detail, which those accustomed to the work would probably effect but for the dangers which the attempt might not unlikely evoke. With the native mind throughout the length and breadth of the land still heaving with the throes of such a convulsion as is now we hope beginning to subside, can we afford to risk the re-awakening of it, in even greater intensity than ever, by the introduction of an entirely novel, and to them unheard of, system of taxation, levelled especially at the wealthiest and most influential classes, and which cannot fail to render them bitterly hostile in heart towards us? That something of the sort will be attempted is most probable, indeed it seems to be almost a necessity. The financial wants will exercise an irresistible pressure, and the abstract justice of the measure will commend it in an especial manner to English statesmen. The misfortune is, that the necessity should come upon us at a moment when the state of the native mind renders it peculiarly dangerous to introduce so disagreeable a novelty in the way of putting our hands into their pockets.

The moral of all this is, that, maybe, our difficulty is not quite so near a satisfactory solution as many people are apt to imagine. It will not do to shut our eyes and go blindly forward in hope that luck will carry us through. Perils not a few are in the path before us; our wisdom is to look them boldly in the face, as affording the best and only chance of bringing the ship safely into port. There never was a time since England became a nation when she had more need of a commanding genius at the helm than now exists in India. Whether the right man is in the right place there may be doubted. Lord Canning's dealing with the mutiny at its first outbreak, and long after, has not stamped him as a great and far-seeing statesman; but, unquestionably, the nation owes to him a deep debt of gratitude for the determined stand that he made against the bloody counsels which would have involved us in a great national sin; and, what Talleyrand would have characterised as still worse, a great political blunder.

It is much to be hoped that the spirit of that part of the Royal Proclamation which announces an amnesty to the rebels will be cordially acted upon in India. It has become sickening to read in the accounts brought by each mail of the numbers of those misguided people who are everywhere being cut up by our troops, though rarely offering any resistance such as to cause even a trifling loss to our side. I am not finding fault with this; I am only lamenting the fact. I know that it is unavoidable, and that when they array themselves in the field against us, the slaughter of all that our troops can come at must take place. But surely the period has gone by when there can be any necessity for the immediate wholesale execution of the common herd of prisoners captured, which I read of as having occurred with regard to Tantia Topce's force in the mail just come in. On each occasion where the taking of prisoners is recorded it is added that they were immediately disposed of; and we all know pretty well now what that means. Even the bearers who carried a gorgeous palanquin which was captured, were immediately shot, so the account states. I cannot imagine anything more barbarous and cruel than so to deal with the mere domestic servants of some great man, who, in all probability, had no choice but to follow their master and do his bidding, and who, we may be well assured, took no active part in the fighting. The revered Havelock, when about to engage the butchers of Cawnpore, warned his men that Christian soldiers must never think of imitating the deeds of a heathen and barbarous foe; but it would seem that now, when the period of alarm and excitement has long passed, we are following a course which, in the judgment of impartial history, will leave the balance of vindictive cruelty against us.

Apologising for the unreasonable length of this communication, I am, sir, yours, WILLIAM MARTIN.
December, 1858.

MILITARY COLLEGE AT ADDISCOMBE.

The usual half-yearly public examination of the gentlemen cadets of her Majesty's Indian forces took place at this college on Friday last. For the first time Lord Stanley, M.P., the new Secretary of State for India, took the chair, and addressed the cadets in a speech so admirably suited to the occasion as to make this examination one of the most noteworthy that has lately taken place at the college. Sir George Clerk, K.C.B., Under-Secretary of State for India, and Sir Frederick Currie, Vice-President of the Council, were also present, with most of the other members, including Sir James Weir Hogg, Sir Robert Vivian, K.C.B., Sir Henry Montgomery, Colonel Sir Henry Rawlinson, K.C.B., Colonel Sir Erobey Cautley, K.C.B., and Messrs. MacNaughten, Mills, Willoughby, Eastwick, and Arbuthnot. Sir Frederick Smith, K.H., M.P., Sir Frederick Abbott, C.B., the Lieutenant-Governor, and a considerable number of military and general visitors were also present, including Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., Sir Charles Pasley, K.C.B., the Rev. Sir C. Furnaby, Sir Harry Jones, K.C.B., Admiral Cory, Major-General Cameron, Sir Edward Lugard, K.C.B., Major-General Portlock, Colonels Russell, C.B., Sandham, R.E., Bainbridge, Elwyn, Addison, Hogg, Lefroy, Abbott, C.B., Willoughby, C.B., Hancock, Durand, C.B., Wilde, C.B., Ross, R.E., Simpson, Green, Morris, Harrington, and Baker, R. Campbell, M.P., Sandoz, &c.

There were fifteen cadets brought forward for examination. Of this number six were reported by the public examiner qualified for the Engineers, viz.—William Henry Pierson, George Strahan, Barté John Goldie, John Pennycuik, Charles Alexander Sim, and Henry Doveton. Eight were reported to be fitted for the Artillery, viz.:—John William Taylor, James Andrew Sutherland Colquhoun, Samuel Swinton Jacob, Walter Ernest Forbes, Francis Ward Major, John Forbes Meiklejohn, Charles Doyle Anderson Straker, William Andros Warren, and Francis William Collis, for the Infantry.

Mr. B. Hawkins, who had met with a severe accident, which prevented him from offering himself for this examination, when he was certain to have stood well in the list of successful candidates, was spoken of highly by the examiner and specially reserved for examination for the Engineers hereafter. The report of the Public Examiner and Inspector of Studies, bearing warm testimony to the diligence and good conduct of the cadets, having been read by Mr. Cochran, the clerk of the College, the prizes were distributed as follows:—

Lord Stanley then addressed the students. He said,—Gentlemen, it is now my duty to express to you the gratification which I and all who are interested in this College must feel at the very satisfactory report which has been made to me of its present state of discipline. I also wish, in compliance with the old custom of this time and place, to address a few words of counsel and goodwill to those who are about to enter upon a career of active service in India. It is a task which I willingly undertake, and yet it is one which at the present moment may seem almost superfluous. For to those who have eyes to see, and ears to hear, the events of the last two years have spoken, and will speak, with far more force than any words of mine. I do not refer to the political or social causes of the insurrection which has taken place, with those we in this room have nothing to do, but what I mean is this—that the great lessons which we have received must impress on all thoughtful minds more strongly than they ever were impressed before, the peculiarities of the position which an Englishman, especially an Englishman in civil or military employment, occupies in the East. Everything in Asia—public safety, national honour, personal reputation—rests on the force of individual character. In Europe, law and routine circumscribe the limits of personal action; society is stronger than any man in it; but in India, in military life especially, incompetence is never permanently safe from detection, and talent with perseverance need never despair of an opportunity. You have had lately a memorable instance of what I am now saying. General Havelock, when the insurrection broke out, was a man advanced in years; his life had been passed in service duty and strictly performed, but still comparatively obscure; two years ago neither he himself nor any friend for him could have anticipated that he would take a place in history. He sought only to do the work that lay before him; distinction was long delayed, it came unsought for, but it came at last. Somewhat similar was the career of Sir W. Nott, the able general who retrieved English honour in Afghanistan. He, too, after more than thirty years of ordinary service, in which his military genius found no adequate scope, was selected for the first time late in life for the command of an army; and you all know the result. I dwell upon this because I know that in the life of those who serve the State abroad there are apt to be moments of despondency—increased, perhaps, by exile and climate—when exertion seems vain and success hopeless, and when even active and enterprising men shrink from the labour of qualifying themselves for positions in which they think they may never be placed. If it should chance that in such moments—for to you, too, such moments may come—any word I now utter should recur to your minds, remember then that you are only passing through a trial which is common to all who encounter the hazards of a profession whether abroad or at home: remember that that most valuable public servant, Lord Macaulay, who reached the highest posts of Indian and colonial Administration, once wrote back from India entreating to be allowed to give up a service for which he felt no taste, and in which he had no hope of success. Remember, again, that if common report be not unfounded, the most illustrious soldier of English or Indian history, the Duke of Wellington himself, at an early period of his career seriously contemplated abandoning a profession in which he despaired of advancement, and seeking employment of a different kind. And bear this in mind, that when the time of trial arrives, as arrive it will, to those who can work and wait, a few months, a few weeks, even a few days may suffice to build up that edifice of fame and success for which the whole previous life has been training. But such chances only occur to those who can turn them to account, and for the highest successes even of military life a merely military training is an insufficient qualification. No man, I believe, can be a really efficient general, far less an efficient administrator, who does not closely study the human machinery with which he has to work, the people of the country in which he lives and acts—(hear, hear). Do not imagine that your work in that respect is more than begun when you have acquired the necessary qualification of language. Examine native habits, native ideas, native character; do it in a spirit of fairness, and you will gain at least this, even if you gain nothing else, that you will avoid that ignorant and unwise contempt for all that is Asiatic, which, politically and personally, does Englishmen so much harm in the East—(cheers). You cannot live, however you may attempt it, in a state of entire indifference to those who surround you in such multitudes. If you do not bear them good will you will bear them ill will; and, as it seems a law of nature that between different races of men, until they get acquainted, a certain repugnance shall exist, so it is equally certain that by better knowledge, if there be only the will to acquire it, that feeling of repugnance is dispelled. Were I addressing you this time last year I should add a word of caution against the popular absurdity—for it is no less—which imputed to 150,000,000 of mankind a participation in the atrocities of a few criminals and fanatics—(hear, hear). But that state of feeling is over in England; it has almost come to an end in India. We are free from the mischievous influences of panic and passion, and have learnt to recognise in men like Scindiah, the Rajah of Puteala, the Nizam and his Minister, Sala Jung, and Jung Bahadoor, of Nepal, as well as in our gallant native levies, who have fought side by side with Europeans with no unequal courage against rebels and mutineers, the possession of manly qualities which may make us well content to hail them as friends and supporters of British power—(cheers). I have spoken to you, gentlemen, as to men who aspire to, and are prepared to struggle for, the highest prizes of life; and I hold it needless, therefore, to warn you against the vulgar temptations of indolence, extravagance, and pleasure. Others will tell you—and, I believe, not in vain—how the brightest prospects may be clouded and the most vigorous energies impeded by debt, hastily and carelessly contracted, and not for long years shaken off. Others will warn you—and I think you will take the warning—that in a climate not naturally congenial to Englishmen the connection between the slightest violation of temperance and disease of body and mind is far more invariable and certain than at home. I will add only this—remember, though to some of you it may have a startling sound—that for a European gentleman in India there is, strictly speaking, no private life—(hear, hear). He is one of the ruling race; he is one of the few among the many; he is one of a population some 10,000 strong among more than ten times as many millions. There are, little as he may know or care about it, quick eyes to watch his conduct, and envious tongues ready enough to disparage his nation and his race. This is not a merely personal matter. A single officer who forgets that he is an officer and a gentleman does more harm to the moral influence of his country than ten men of blameless life can do good. To you, therefore, in more senses than one, the honour of England in the East is committed. You are the representatives, not only of our military strength, but also of our national character. You go forth from a college which has trained, through a long series of years, many of the ablest public servants whom this empire has ever produced. I hope that the permanence of its prosperity may be equal to its deserts; that you, its latest representatives, may be worthy of those who have gone before; and that among the names of those whom I address some, at least, may live in the records, not only of this college, but of this country, connected with the honourable exploits of war, or with the glory of skilful and successful administration. Gentlemen, I wish you God speed, and believe that whatever happens you will always do your duty.

At the conclusion of his Lordship's address, the noble Secretary, with the visitors, proceeded to the sand modelling hall, where there were several beautifully constructed models, of which the chief features and peculiarities were pointed out by the cadets. There was one very good model of two fronts in Vauban's first system, which, with all its minute and rather over-estimated advantages of chemins des rondes and retired flanks, were duly explained by sub-officer S. Jacob. Those, however, which attracted most attention were those of a fort in Captain Choumaras' new system, which is now in good repute upon the Continent, though the system itself consists rather in an extension and development of Vauban's ideas than any new arrangement of the author, and a model of the native Indian fort of Nowah, in the Deccan. Both of these, especially the latter, were constructed with singular neatness and care. The advantages of Choumaras' system were fully and very clearly explained by Mr. Pierson, a cadet of course, while Mr. Doveton gave a fair narrative of the main strength of native forts, and the manner in which that of Nowah was taken. To illustrate his account still more forcibly, a small charge of powder was sprung under the counter-scarp of the miniature stronghold, and the manner in which a very strong place was taken with only the loss of four men was thus made apparent, even to the most "civilian" of visitors. There was also a very fine model of a direct double sap, one-third of the real size, and the manner of carrying forward which against the works of the besieged was explained by Mr. Goldie.

The display of drawings by cadets this term was much in advance of those exhibited in former years; indeed, there was quite an artistic power as well as feeling in their compositions. The effect of the drawings as they were placed on the walls was really good, owing to the sweet harmony of the colouring and general tone.

Mr. Strahan exhibited several beautiful works in water-colours of lake scenery, as also did Mr. Pierson, each of whose productions would do credit to professional skill. The drawings of Messrs. Rowcroft and Riddell were much admired, as showing considerable promise of excellence.

The photographic department was well represented, some of the plates being very fine and of admirable texture. Prizes were awarded to Messrs. Strahan and Forbes.

After two o'clock the cadets assembled and went through their drill with a steadiness and good order that did the highest credit both to themselves and their tutors. The proceedings of the whole day were altogether of a most satisfactory kind and gratifying to all.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

On Thursday, the 9th inst., a general court of this company was held at their house in Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of proceeding to the election of four directors in the room of Mr. Martin Tucker Smith, M.P., Mr. Charles Mills, Mr. Elliot MacNaghten, and Mr. Ross Donnelly Mangles, who have disqualified by their acceptance of seats in the new Indian Council. Four gentlemen offered themselves as candidates—namely, Major-General Duncan Sim, of the Madras Engineers, Mr. Thomas Williams Helps, barrister-at-law, Mr. L. R. Reid, and Col. J. W. J. Ouseley. There was no opposition to their return. Three other directors have disqualified by accepting seats at the Council—namely, Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart., Captain Eastwick and Captain Shepherd. The election of successors will take place on Saturday, the 18th inst. Four candidates are at present in the field, namely—Sir James Dalrymple Elphinstone, Bart., who was captain of the ship Orwell, in the East India Company's service, at the time their charter expired, Major-General George Moore, Mr. Eric S. Smith, and Dr. A. Beattie.

6. No candidate will be allowed any marks in respect of any subject of Examination unless he shall be considered to possess a competent knowledge of that subject.

7. The Examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by ex voce Examination, as may be deemed necessary.

| Vernacular Languages of India (each) .. .. . | 350    |

* Each candidate may name one or two languages. If he names only one, he must name either Sanskrit or a vernacular language current in the Presidency which he has selected.

2. The History and Geography of India .. .. . 500

3. The General Principles of Jurisprudence and the Elements of Hindoo and Mahomedan Law 1,000

4. Political Economy .. .. . 500

In this, as in the preceding Examination, the merit of the candidates examined will be estimated by marks, and the numbers set opposite to each subject denote the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it. The Examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by ex vivo Examination, as may be deemed necessary.

10. No candidate will be permitted to proceed to India until he shall have passed the Further Examination, or after he shall have attained the age of twenty-five years.

13. No person will, even after passing the Further Examination, be allowed to proceed to India unless he shall comply with the regulations in force at the time for the Civil Service of India, and shall be of sound bodily health and good moral character. The Civil Service Commissioners will require such further evidence on these points as they may deem necessary, before granting their Certificate of Qualification.

14. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as candidates are to be addressed to the Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, Dean's-yard, London, S.W.

NOTE.—The Secretary of State for India in Council, has authorised the Civil Service Commissioners to state that, with the view of meeting the expenses to be incurred by selected candidates during the interval which must elapse before they can proceed to India, it is his Lordship's intention to allow the sum of £100 to each selected Candidate who shall have passed the Further Examination in July, 1860, to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and shall have complied with such rules as may be laid down for the guidance of selected candidates.

EAST INDIA COAL COMPANY (LIMITED).—At the meeting of the East India Coal Company (Limited), held on the 8th, Mr. W. S. Austin in the chair, the report exhibiting the progress of the undertaking was adopted, and a dividend declared at the rate of seven and a half per cent. per annum. The accounts present a balance to the credit of revenue of £5,938, but, though the distribution intimated is equal to the amount named, it will not be divided before March, as the directors will not be in funds till that date. It is stated that the prospects of the company are favourable, and that the result of careful supervision and more energetic management is a much larger increase in the yield of the coalpits. With the view of substituting some economical and speedy mode of conveying the coal from the mines to the terminus of the East India Railway at Ranegunge, the directors have despatched to India one of Boydell's patent endless railway engines and six trucks, capable of carrying on the ordinary road about twenty tons each journey.

THE DUTCH EAST INDIA COLONIES.—A Bill relative to the emancipation of slaves in the Dutch East India Colonies has been presented to the legislature by the Dutch Minister for the Colonies.

PROSPECTUS.

The paramount importance and eminently remunerative character of Works of Irrigation in India have become, by long experience and well-ascertained results, established facts. Accordingly, the Government of Madras, in May last, in a Report to the late Court of Directors of the East India Company, after setting forth in the strongest language their beneficial effects and public utility, certified that "the returns from Irrigation Works are always considerable, and often immense;" and the truth of this statement is placed beyond doubt by official Returns made to Parliament in 1853.

By these it appears that the whole of the then existing works in the Madras Presidency (many of which were much out of repair, and to a great extent useless) realised, during a period of fourteen years, an average net profit of 53 per cent. upon the cost of their construction and maintenance, whilst the thirteen largest yielded during the same term a like profit of more than 120 per cent. Those works, also, which have been since undertaken but not yet completed, viz., on the Godavery and Kistnah rivers, have already produced large returns, which will shortly, it is stated, exceed 100 per cent.

Hitherto works of this nature have been executed by the Government only. But from the want of funds and a suitable and trained agency, comparatively little has been effected, and it has now become impossible, at least, for many years to come, to provide others out of the ordinary revenue. Much therefore remains to be done in this respect, to meet the positive and immediate requirements of the country; in truth, it has been for many years past repeatedly recorded by members of the Legislative Council, by Government Commissioners, by Civil and Military Engineers, and by many others of high character and intelligence, that a vast number of new works which will yield return equal to what has been above stated, are imperatively required within the territories above named, and that in the Madras Presidency alone, many millions of acres of good land are now lying waste, requiring only irrigation to render them eminently fertile and profitable, whilst immense volumes of water (and more than sufficient for the purposes required), flow by neglected to the sea.

Next to Irrigation Works, both in importance and in their remunerative character, are cheap means of Transit. Their extension is also as largely and urgently called for; and it is a fortuitous circumstance that in India these two essential elements of prosperity may be secured by one operation, for Works of Irrigation can in most cases be constructed, at a trifling additional expense, in the shape of Canals, navigable by Steam Boats, the cost of carriage whereon will be far less than on common roads, and much lower than anything yet thought of for Railways.

To aid the Government in supplying these fundamental wants throughout the several districts enumerated at the head of this Prospectus is the object of this Company; and it may with confidence be asserted, that no enterprise of the present day, however lucrative and useful, will bear favourable comparison with such an undertaking.

The tract of country proposed to be, in the first instance, thus affected contains 400,000 square miles, upon the whole cultivable portions whereof cotton, both indigenous and exotic, can be successfully grown, whilst the soil of extensive districts is pre-eminently qualified for its production. Within this domain there is also a quiet, orderly, and industrious population of upwards of 53,000,000, ready, and indeed anxious, to cultivate the land immediately they are enabled by irrigation to do so.

One most important result which will flow from the development of the scheme here described will be the opening up, and rendering cheaply accessible to the Coast, an area of Cotton-growing land many times larger than the whole of the plantations of America, from whence four-fifths of our present supply is procured; so that if only a small portion of the land thus affected is employed in the cultivation of Cotton, England will be entirely relieved from her present degrading dependence upon Slave Labour for its production. Further, the Territories so improved will be enabled to compete successfully with other countries in the production and exportation of Grain and Seeds of all kinds, Sugar, Tobacco, and many other staple articles of commerce so valuable to Great Britain.

The formation and proposed objects of this Company were first notified to the late Court of Directors of the East India Company and to the Board of Control in February, 1857, from which time negotiations of a comprehensive character were carried on with those authorities, and continued with the Secretary of State and Council for India.

Pending these negotiations the Directors refrained from raising through the public any portion of the intended Capital, but being firmly convinced of the sound and profitable nature of their undertaking, and of the ultimate success of their efforts, they proceeded upon their own responsibility to procure the requisite Act of Incorporation, and to adopt all other proceedings necessary to save delay, and to establish this Company upon a firm and sure basis. With this view they had before the Court of Directors particulars of two highly promising and important projects in the Presidency of Madras as first portions of the scheme to be carried out, which projects are now under consideration by the local government.

The Directors are enabled to state that they have at length met with the desired support, and that this Company is now effectually established, and its scheme fully recognised by the Home Government of India, who, fully admitting the great and lasting advantages to be obtained by attracting private enterprise and English capital to works of public utility in that country, have conceded liberal and substantial terms of support to this the first attempt of that nature, including in such terms a perpetual guarantee of a minimum interest of 2½ per cent. per annum on the first issue of capital to the amount of £1,000,000, as paid into the Indian Treasury, all surplus profits being divisible equally between the Government and the Company, which arrangement is to be subject to determination only upon the Secretary of State for India in Council giving notice, within six months after the expiration of each period of twenty-five years from the commencement of the present arrangement, of an intention to purchase the whole of the works then constructed at a sum equal to an average of the market price at which the shares of this Company shall have been selling in London during the three preceding years.

In addition to the works before referred to and proposed for construction in Madras, the Directors have submitted to Lord Stanley in Council, other and no less valuable projects, and his Lordship has referred particulars thereof to the Supreme Government of India for investigation and report.

All future issue of shares will be distributed pro rata amongst the then existing Shareholders.

Forms of Applications for Shares may now be had on application at the Company's Offices, 27, Cannon-street, E.C., London; of the Bankers, Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie and Co., 1, Pall Mall East; and of the Solicitor, John Mackrell, Esq., 34, Cannon-street West, E.C., London; but no application will be considered unless a Deposit of One Pound on each Share applied for is previously made to Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie and Co., Bankers of the Company. The Deposit will be returned if the application is not accepted.

The last day for application will be Saturday, the 18th inst.

Extract from Minutes of Consultation transmitted by the Government of Madras, on the 15th May, 1858, to the late Court of Directors of the East India Company.

The Government express their unanimous, strong and earnest advocacy, that all Irrigation Works, which, on a comprehensive view of the wants of the country, may be deemed necessary to develop its undoubtedly great resources, be commenced at once boldly and on a large scale, be pressed forward throughout all times and under all circumstances, and be looked on and be practically treated, as in fact they really are, as the most economical, because the most profitable, undertakings in which the Government could possibly engage. It is needless now again to bring forward the innumerable instances in which money has in the Presidency been most advantageously invested in Irrigation Works. The proceedings of Government have, in this respect, been only too desultory and vacillating, and it is confidently asserted that "India" could be placed in a position to pay all her own expenses and gradually discharge her debt far more readily and speedily by a judicious expenditure than by any scheme of retrenchment or reduction.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a

Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocquer's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MR. O'MEARA, Surgeon-Dentist, late of Simla (Seven years resident in India), begs to inform his Friends and former clients returning from India, that he can now be consulted professionally in London, at No. 18, Queen Anne-street, Cavendish-square.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH. New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Mothers and nurses, who know how young children are ever exposed to accidents resulting in cuts, bruises, burns, or scalds, may save themselves from much anxiety and trouble if they will always have ready at hand a supply of this inestimable Ointment. If the parts injured be gently covered with it, the pain will be immediately relieved, and all the bad consequences of the accident be speedily and permanently removed. This Ointment, though benign and gentle in its action, indicates extraordinary power in the rapidity and completeness of its effects. It is composed of rare balsams, without the admixture of a grain of mercury, or any other deleterious substance, and is as safe as it is efficacious.

FRAMPTON'S PILL of HEALTH.

Price 1s. 14d. and 2s. 9d. per Box. This excellent Family Pill is a medicine of long-tried efficacy for purifying the blood, so very essential for the foundation of good health, and correcting all disorders of the stomach and bowels. Two or three doses will convince the afflicted of its salutary effects. The stomach will speedily regain its strength; a healthy action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys will rapidly take place; and renewed health will be the quick result of taking this medicine, according to the directions accompanying each box.

PERSONS of a FULL HABIT, who are subject to headache, giddiness, drowsiness, and sinking in the ears, arising from too great a flow of blood to the head, should never be without them, as many dangerous symptoms will be entirely carried off by their timely use.

For FEMALES, these Pills are truly excellent, removing all obstructions, the distressing headache so very prevalent with the sex, depression of spirits, dullness of sight, nervous affections, blotches, pimples, and sallowness of the skin, and give a healthy, juvenile bloom to the complexion.

These Pills unite the recommendation of a mild operation with the most successful effect; and for elderly people, or where an occasional aperient is required, nothing can be better adapted. In consequence of the great and increasing demand, the Proprietor has obtained permission from her Majesty's Commissioners to have the name and address of

"THOMAS PROUT, 229, STRAND, LONDON." Impressed upon the Government Stamp, affixed to each box. Sold by all Vendors of Medicine.

HEAD MASTER—The Rev. E. W. BENSON, of Rugby,

At a GENERAL MEETING of the Governors, held on the 18th November, 1858, the following Resolutions were passed:

1. That the College be opened on the 20th January next.
2. That as the funds at the disposal of the Governors are inadequate at present to provide for more than 81 foundationers out of the 100 boys to be admitted on the opening of the College, an additional number of 102 boys be admitted as non-foundationers, to consist of sons of Officers of the Army, including the Indian Army, and sons of Civilians, the preference to be given to the sons of Officers.
3. That the charge for these boys be:—Sons of Officers, £70 per annum; sons of Civilians, £100 per annum. This charge to cover all expenses for board, education, stationery (except printed books), washing and medical attendance; also, two suits of uniform a-year, with a great-coat once in two years.

The Education to be given in the College will be of a similar character to that given in the great public schools, and will include in the subjects of instruction—

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 13th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

ANY interest that might otherwise have attached to the intelligence received by the Bombay Mail of the 25th November, has been already anticipated by the Government Telegrams published in our last issue. The effect of the Royal Proclamation certainly appears to have been most satisfactory. From all quarters the rebel leaders are described as flocking to the civil magistrates to tender their submission and renew their allegiance. The defection of the Nawab of Banda is likely to prove a fatal blow to the cause of the insurgents in Central India. Indeed it can hardly be said that the rebellion any longer exists in that district, as Tantia Topce is reduced to the condition of a vagrant rather than of a rebel chieftain. The celerity of his movements, however, is something marvellous. By the latest accounts he is represented as having baffled his pursuers, and to have reached a point within 300 miles from Bombay. He was hemmed in on all sides by cavalry and infantry, and escape rendered all but impossible. His colleague, Maun Sing, of Powrie, is reported to have sustained a signal defeat on the 14th November at the hands of Brigadier Smith, near Koondye. He had taken up a strong position with 6,000 men on the opposite side of a nullah near a village and was on the point of breaking up his encampment, when suddenly the 3rd Troop Horse Artillery opened upon him a sharp fire of grape and shrapnel within two or three hundred yards. Though in some measure protected by the jungle his men fell fast, till they broke and fled in confusion, hotly pursued by the cavalry for eight miles. Altogether, his loss was estimated at 600 men.

Of the movements of the infamous Nana Sahib nothing certain appears to be known, and even his name is scarcely ever mentioned by the Indian journalists.

In Oude several forts have yielded to force or fear. On the 3rd November, Brigadier Walpole stormed some formidable entrenchments at Rampoor, though with the loss of eighty or ninety men put hors de combat, among whom were Colonel Farquhar commanding the Belooch Battalion, and Dr. Smith of the 1st Punjaub Cavalry. Colonel Farquhar was shot through the knee, and his leg was afterwards amputated, but he is said to be in a fair way of recovery. On the 9th of the same month Brigadier Eveleigh carried the fort of Simree almost without resistance, and on the following day Rajah Madhoo Sing yielded the fort of Amaithee to Major Barrow, Civil Commissioner with the Commander-in-Chief's army. Only three leaders of importance remain, therefore, in arms against us. These are the Begum, Nurput Sing, and Rajah Beni Madhoo, who have now no alternative but to submit, or be crushed by the forces that are rapidly closing around them.

Accounts from Rohilcund are highly favourable. Here and there small parties of desperate villains make their appearance, but only to be instantly annihilated, and the pacification of the province may be regarded as complete. The Commander-in-Chief was at Pertabghur, only twenty miles from Allahabad, apparently disposed to afford the rebels time to make their submission, rather than compel them to do so by arms. His Lordship's inactivity is, of course, very disagreeable to junior officers eager for an opportunity of distinguishing themselves, and is consequently commented upon by the local press in no flattering terms.

The Bombay papers allude, with evident exultation, to a slight rebuke said to have been administered to the Commander-in-Chief of that Presidency by the Governor, Lord Elphinstone. Sir Henry Somerset, it appears, had arranged to leave Poona on the 16th of November for a tour of inspection, but was gently reminded by his Lordship that as the rebels were so near at hand the presence of the Commander-in-Chief might be required at headquarters. At least, so runs the story, which is quite as likely to be erroneous as correct.

Sir Patrick Grant, Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army, arrived at Bombay from Calicut on the 11th of last month, and had proceeded on a tour of inspection through Central India.

It is proposed to establish an Economic Museum, with botanical gardens, at Bombay, in commemoration of the transfer of the Company's government to the Crown. Some of the wealthy natives are said to have initiated the proposal.

The Bombay banks have raised their rates of interest and discount one per cent. all round, money having become more in demand owing to the improvement in the import market. The present rates are five per cent. for Government Bills and eight per cent. on commercial paper at three months.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

We have received a few lines from Brigadier Smith's column, dated 14th instant, at Rajpore, thirty miles east of Goonah, and learn that by a forced march of eighteen miles from near Mongrowlee to Dumgoom the day before, and by starting again at three o'clock the next morning, they came on and surprised a party of the rebels, about 800 or 900 strong, four miles east of Rajpore, at daylight, and before even they had risen. Maun Sing, of Pardone and Powrie, was with them, but unfortunately escaped on horseback; his elephant also got away, but his shield and palkee fell into our hands. Between 500 and 600 have been killed by the cavalry and infantry; the former pursued for six miles southward. The rebels had no guns, and such was their flight that swords, bundooks, bundles of clothes, tatoos, spears, camels, all were abandoned. Extraordinary to relate, two Enfield rifles, one marked "Grenadier Company 88th Regiment"—no doubt taken at Cawnpore—were captured by the 10th N. I. Our loss is very small:—Lieutenant Harris, Blake's Troop H. A., five men 10th N. I., and a native officer 1st Lancers killed, and four men wounded; one man 95th, two Mead's Horse, and some six men and eight horses of H.M.'s 8th Hussars, all wounded. Brigadier Smith's column has done well. After tracking the rebels—first those under Tuntia Topee—for the past month, all through dense jungles and unfordable rivers, a great deal of indignation and discontent is felt throughout the brigade that General Michel should have crippled the movements of the column by returning, after he had worked the horses to death, the cavalry and two divisions of Blake's troop (which alone brought in one hundred sore backs). The consequence is, that half the troop only is horsed, and a number of the men, as well as the 8th hussars, have to march. Brigadier Smith intended to send all the Sikh horse and half the troop H.A. to Goona to rest, three weeks of which at least they would require before the horses could be of the least service.—Bombay Gazette.

THANKS OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY TO ITS SERVANTS.

The Right Hon. the Governor-General directs the publication of the subjoined despatch from the Hon. Court of Directors, and of a resolution passed by a General Court of the East India Company, on the 30th of August last:—

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT.—No. 147 of 1858.

Our Governor-General of India in Council.

We have the satisfaction of transmitting to you, for promulgation in such manner as you may consider suitable, the copy of a resolution unanimously passed by the General Court of the East India Company, held on the 30th ult., expressing the thanks of the Court to the servants and officers of the Company "of every rank, and in every capacity." We are, &c.

(Signed) F. CURRIE,

London, Sept. 1, 1858. J. EASTWICK.

Countersigned in accordance with 16 and 17 Vict., cap. 95, sec. 2. J. D. DICKENSON, Secretary. Extract Minutes of a Special General Court of the East India Company, held at their House in Leadenhall-street, on Monday, Aug. 30, 1858.

A Proprietor advertising to the fact of this being the last occasion of the meeting of the General Court before the severance of the connection of the East India Company with the Government of India, and moving the Court, it was Resolved unanimously,—That the East India Company on surrendering at the bidding of Parliament, those powers connected with the Government of the British territories in India, which it has long exercised as trustee for the Crown, desires to return its warmest thanks to its servants and officers of every rank and in every capacity, for the fidelity, zeal and efficiency with which they have performed their several duties, and offers to them its best wishes for their future prosperity.

To those who are natives of India, the East India Company has the satisfaction of being able to give the fullest assurance, that in her Majesty Queen Victoria they will find a most gracious mistress, not unmindful of their past services under that authority which has hitherto had the honour of representing British sovereignty in India, and ever ready to reward loyalty to the British Crown.

The East India Company is convinced that the Members of the Home Department of the Company's Government will maintain the high reputation which that Department now enjoys, and will continue, when enrolled in the direct service of the Crown, to command the esteem and confidence of their Official Chiefs, and of the public.

Of its fellow-countrymen employed in India, under the Company's government, whether as civilians or soldiers; of those, especially, whose duty has recently subjected them to trials of unexampled severity, and who have done their duty so admirably as to win for them the praise and sympathy of their Sovereign and their country,—the East India Company is proud to say, that their past conduct affords the strongest security that the Crown will possess no servants abler, none more devoted, than those who have been trained by the Company; and without in any manner arrogating to itself what is due to men, some of whose names are honoured in every region of the civilised world, the East India Company trusts that in the page of impartial history it may be recorded as having presented, in the career which it has opened both to the members of its own civil and military services, and to the gallant troops of her Majesty and her royal predecessors, a field for the exercise of the highest qualities of the statesman and the soldier.

In the humble hope that the Company's rule will prove to have been, in the hand of Divine Providence, an instrument of good, and even of the highest good to India, the East India Company earnestly prays that it may please Almighty God to bless the Queen's Indian reign by the speedy restoration of peace, security, and order, and so to prosper her Majesty's efforts for the welfare of her East Indian subjects, that the millions who will henceforth be placed under her Majesty's direct, as well as sovereign dominion, constantly advancing in all that makes men and nations great, flourishing, and happy, may reward her Majesty's cares in their behalf by their faithful and firm attachment to her Majesty's person and Government.

The Right Honourable the Governor-General, speaking not only for the Government of India, but for all of every class who have acted under that Government, desires to record an assurance of the respectful thankfulness with which these parting words of good-will and approval will be received by the vast community of the Indian Civil and Military services.

The Governor-General is satisfied, that amongst all, there is but one common feeling of acknowledgment of the just, considerate, and liberal treatment, which has ever characterized the great Company which has now ceased to govern the British territories in India.

By Order of the Right Honourable the Governor-General.

G. F. EDMONSTONE.

KISSORY CHAND MITTRA ON EDUCATION.

Kissory Chand Mittra, the native magistrate of Calcutta, has been tried by an official commission, found guilty, and dismissed. He was charged with having wrongfully acquitted a man accused of theft; subsequently interpolated words in the evidence to excuse the decision, and then denied the interpolation. In a second case, Sumbhoonath Dhur charged Deedar Bux with stealing firewood. The principal witness was in attendance, but the magistrate, without hearing him, ordered the prosecutor to pay a fine of ten rupees for bringing the complaint. In this case also certain sentences implying malice on the part of the prosecutor were interpolated in the evidence. The charge was heard before the magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, a barrister, and the native judge of the Small Cause Court, who concurred in the verdict of guilty. Two of them immediately after signed also a recommendation to mercy in the teeth of the evidence, because Kissory Chand Mittra "might, perhaps," have acted from "thoughtless indiscretion."

The case seems to have created an unusual degree of interest, and is quoted on all sides as a proof of the utter unfitness of natives for judicial employ. There seems, indeed, a feeling that Kissory's acts were dictated by a determination to refuse justice to Europeans. The latter theory, however, is inconsistent with the evidence, and the former, we confess, is not exactly the lesson we should be inclined to draw. A native magistrate is certainly wretchedly out of place administering English law to Englishmen, and native magistrates generally may be mere nuisances. At the same time, unless we are prepared to abolish them everywhere, we must teach them, and if we cannot teach them in Calcutta, in the presence of a strong and critical community, where can we?

The true lesson of the affair to our minds is, the utter worthlessness of our education as a moral agent. Kissory Chand Mittra is by no means a bad specimen of an educated native. He comes of a family remarkable for what it suits us to call "enlightenment." He knows English, and we dare say could pass an examination in Milton or Gray's Elegy. But neither knowledge, nor Milton, nor high position have availed to give him a moral sense. There are dozens of country justices in England who would pass decisions just as ridiculous as those for which he has been arraigned. There are probably not five who would interpolate evidence to justify them, not two who having interpolated words would not acknowledge them. It is here that our education breaks down, and with it, unless we can change our system, all hope of real native improvement. The native magistrate wants no further education. He has no deficiency of intellectual power. He has an immense advantage over the European in his knowledge of the language and habits of his countrymen. It is principle he wants, and unless our education can be so modified as to give it, its utility is simply nil.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIETARY OF THE SOLDIERS.—The following letter, purporting to be from a soldier stationed at Mooltan, appears in the Lahore Chronicle:—"It is well known that the working classes in England, Scotland, and Ireland, from whom the ranks of our army are gathered, chiefly subsist on vegetables (meat in many parts being too expensive for their means), consisting of potatoes, cabbages, &c., onions too, I am aware, are used to flavour soups and other messes; but that any Briton would eat a pound of them daily, either boiled or fried, seems both improbable and impossible. Yet this is the case with the European troops doing duty in Mooltan. A pound of meat and bone, the latter often preponderating, buried in a pound of onions, which can be obtained in the bazars at a mere nominal cost, comprises the midday meal of men that are working hard, and doing heavy duty. At the same time that the dinner, as it is termed, is brought into the barracks, we are allowed a dram of arrack, of such a strength that a boy of tender years might drink without contorting his features, although for the last two or three months arrivals of large cargoes of beer are frequently reported in the Kurrachee newspapers. Six months have now elapsed since anything but onions have been brought to our regimental stores as vegetables palatable to a European, and for the last three months we have been deprived of that refreshing and nutritious beverage which every Englishman is partial to. Could not these deficiencies have been supplied ere this, and thereby have prevented the ravages of scurvy,—two-thirds of our strength being more or less afflicted with it? The medical staff have exerted themselves to the utmost to stem the torrent, but men are not willing, nor can they be spared, to lay by in hospital with sores and rotten teeth. If the authorities cannot procure these necessities from other places, or that they find a difficulty in providing carriage, is not the soil in Mooltan sufficiently fertile to yield an abundant crop of vegetation to supply the wants of troops that may garrison it in future? Cricket-grounds may relieve the monotony of the place, but the produce of potatoe fields might be the means of saving many valuable lives. In such a barren soil as Aden there was no such scarcity, and in Kurachee we were well provided for; both of which stations are apparently unfavourable to cultivation. We cannot reasonably expect to obtain rations here of the same quality and quantity as we received in Poonah. There rupees 6-5-4 were stopped for our rations per month, and 2-12 returned to us. Here the same deduction is made; meat and flour are not much dearer, and onions may be considered as valueless by the manner in which the natives dispose of them. I certainly have not a commissariat scale of prices in my possession; but, from inquiries made in the bazaars as to the selling prices of flour, meat, &c., &c., and then making a reasonable deduction for a Government contract, considerably less than 6-5-4 a month will pay for a soldier's rations in Mooltan. Here the balance goes to I cannot say; it should be returned to our pockets. Supposing that the difference is even one rupee a month per man, and that that there are 600 European soldiers here, 600 rupees will not be a despicable income, and very easily earned. A soldier's pay, I imagine, is intended by Government for his own use, and not to assist in supporting private establishments."

LUCKNOW AS IT IS.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette thus alludes to the present appearance of the capital of Oude:—"I have said little lately of the city of Lucknow itself. The change in it is so great that parties who were here since the time of its capture scarcely recognise the place. The road leading from the Chief Commissioner's residence towards the Residency, and beyond that to the Iron Bridge and Muchee Bhowm, still itself, is as it was; but the clearances have given it a totally different aspect. The numberless buildings that have been razed, worth some lakhs of rupees, the mud tents cleared away, the broad roads radiating in every direction, are all vast improvements that nothing but a revolution would give an opportunity to effect. Nearly every mud fortification formed by the enemy between November and March last has been rubbed out, bullet marks are rare, excepting in a few buildings in the old Residency, and the ground in many cases can only now be pointed out where some building stood, in which or from which we suffered during the siege. One small low structure yet remains opposite the post-office, upon whose walls you cannot place the palm of your hand without covering two or three bullet holes. The Chutter Munzil and the Kaiser Bagh continue to exhibit the shattered condition they were reduced to by our shot and shell; the latter still more so of the devouring propensities of those sharks, the prize agents."

CHOLERA IN RANGOON.—By an official statement, for which we are indebted to the town-magistrate, it will be seen that there occurred in Rangoon within the last ten days of the last month no less than three hundred and ten deaths from cholera. These we understand to be the duly-certified deaths from this cause, and doubtless there were many unreported casualties alike attributable to the disease. At all events even the number before us evidences a fearfully high rate of mortality, and speaks loudly for the necessity of instituting some inquiry into the probable origin of the epidemic—or, if this cannot be ascertained, at all events some useful light might be thrown upon the subject by a careful investigation into, and report on, the peculiar features of those districts in which the scourge appears to have committed the greatest ravages. In the Poxendoung quarter for instance, where the rate of mortality was highest, it might not be difficult to obtain at least an approximate idea of the causes predisposing to disease, or aggravating its destructiveness. Certainly the matter requires some attention. At this moment, we regret to learn the mortality is greater than it was at the date of the magisterial report.—Madras Times, Nov. 6.

CAMP DHERAI, Oct. 25.—The force under Brigadier Wetherall marched here this morning eight miles from Seran, where it was joined by a detachment that went a few days ago to Buddree, a small fort belonging to a Raneer. The rebels were allowed two hours to make up their minds what to do, and dispersed, leaving their guns behind them. The forts were, I believe, destroyed. A few shots were fired on our troops, and a few men found with arms in their hands; their arms were taken from them, and they were sent about their business. They ought to have been taken prisoners, I think, or shot. We have a large quantity of baggage with us, as we take half a month's supply; but the country is richly cultivated, and there must be plenty of grain somewhere. This is the place where the Sikhs got into an enclosure, a kind of mud fort, a few months ago, and killed 500 rebels; the bones are still lying about.

AGRA, Nov. 7.—I was wrong in stating that Brigadier Showers was leaving the station for field service. He was only on a visit of inspection in his district, and one day the fort guns (giving him his complimentary number of explosions) intimated to our ears his return. A great convoy of shell and other ordnance stores was preparing at the time I last wrote (and I have observed many more since, with their bullocks, hackeries, noise, and bustle located behind the cantonments, church, and Sudder bazaar), for transmission to Cawnpore. The fort has supplied a great deal of shell and other munitions of war, provisions, &c., to Cawnpore especially, since the beginning of the mutinies; and the neat pyramids, and well-ranged piles of shot and shell, do not now meet the eye, notwithstanding there is yet plenty of material—enough and to spare to knock the strong places of our rebel enemies about their ears. I see that according to a Government announcement, a company of artillery, composed of Eurasians and native Christians is to be formed at Agra. The company is to consist of one captain, one lieutenant, five sergeants, at 18, six corporals, at 14, and eighty-eight gunners, at 9 rupees per mensem, staff sergeant, one bhiste only, mehter, &c. The total monthly expenses of the company including command allowance, repairs, petty stores, &c., will amount to Rs. 1,108-12. I do not approve of the cheese-paring system of giving such small pay to the really necessary portion of any body of men. It never ensures either serviceable men, or skilful or energetic workmen; even our old little stout friend, with the cavalry sword, has disappeared from the Umir Sing gate. Between the Eurasian and native Christian clerks, in the various public offices (I do not say that they are too well paid), and these gunners' pay there is a wide chasm. An attention to the means of attracting Burmians, natives, and Europeans, to more economic productive employments is more wanted for the prosperity of India than an open market in the mere mechanical employment of writing in the Government offices and other Government employments. I forgot to state that the 3rd Europeans have been only lately supplied with the Enfield, which has given them some exercise in learning the drill connected with it.—Bombay Gazette.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—Mr. Le Mesurier, of the East Indian Railway Company's Service, has proceeded to the Sutlej with the view of carrying on certain necessary trials and investigations on the substrata of that river, at the site where the future viaduct and bridge may be constructed, and for pursuing inquiries as to the sources from whence building materials can be best procured.

THE ANDAMANS.—The Gov. General having been overwhelmed with the petitions from the relatives of the mutineers, who have been transported to the Andamans, his Lordship's time is much occupied in disposing of the petitions. Dr. Walker lately proposed to Government that the wives of the convicts transported to the Andaman Island be persuaded to proceed to that island. The Governor-General was of opinion that at the present moment any measures taken by the Government to persuade the wives of convicts already transported to proceed to the Andaman Island would be liable to mis-construction and might be productive of very injurious results, and remarked that when Government will be enabled to publish the terms on which mutineers generally can be admitted to pardon, and when the people shall have gained confidence in its intentions the course proposed by Dr. Walker may be pursued without much risk, but so long as the rebels and sepoys continue in their present suspicious mood any such proceeding would induce many to desperate measures.—Englishman.

LEAVE TO UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.—It is rumoured that the casual leave of fifteen days granted to uncovenanted officers, as provided by the Revised Uncovenanted Absentee Rules, is to be abolished, and that the power of granting such leave will be left entirely to the discretion of the heads of the several public offices. This is a move in the right direction. Although there is scarcely a pin to choose between the late Company's government and that of the Crown as regards red-tapism, yet we think in that respect the "paper government" of the former stands unrivalled in the annals of states. Should the above rumour prove correct, commanding officers may indulge the hope that they will be empowered to expend eight annas for cooley hire, without having to obtain the sanction of the Governor-General, and waste a quire of paper—to say nothing of the time and trouble of writing—in forwarding the application through the various departments of the circumlocution office; and perhaps having afterwards to furnish Government with an explanation respecting so extraordinary an item of expenditure.—Hurkur.

OUDE FIELD FORCE, Nov. 5.—I have not had time before to send you any account of the affair at Rampore the day before yesterday. The enemy's position was very strong: a large pukha fort the other side of the river, and a very strong entrenchment, or rather lines of entrenchments, this side, and on the other two. From the uttermost entrenchment the ground slopes up gradually till it reaches a considerable elevation about 1,200 yards from the enemy's works. The whole space is covered either with dense jungle or cultivation, the corn and bajra fields affording excellent cover to skirmishers. On the summit of the hill there stands an old mud fort or "ghurree," and a village a little to the rear of it. Brigadier Wetherall's intention, I believe, was to halt the force in a secure position behind the mud fort and village, (from the latter the enemy speedily retired, and the former was given up to us,) and the next morning, when Sir Hope Grant's column was opposite to him, and ready to act on the enemy's rear, to attack them with all his force on the front. However this may be, I do not know but a small party consisting of two or three companies of the Highlanders, about 200 of the 9th P. I., and a company, I believe, of the Belooch battalion, were sent down to skirmish and drive the enemy out of the jungle and the fields. The heavy portion, meantime, played upon the fort and the entrenchment. The fire was very heavy, the enemy fought well, and kept it up from ten till twelve. In occasions of this kind we cannot be too careful how an action is described. Men are jealous of their reputation, and, if they are not mentioned so prominently as others, are apt to take offence. I am not writing a despatch, but I am sure that no dissatisfaction will be felt by others, or by the officer commanding the 9th P. I. himself, when I allude to the truly gallant behaviour of that regiment. Captain Threlkall, finding his men falling fast around him, sounded the assembly, and, being well supported, ascended the entrenchment, got in through the embrasure, and took the gun that was posted there, which was afterwards used with the greatest effect against the enemy, who still kept on fighting after the Sikhs and Pathans had got into their entrenchment. But they must have felt that it was all over, though they did not commence their flight till 3 P.M. The cavalry crossed in the afternoon, and in the pursuit about a hundred were cut up. The detachment of our troops meantime had been reinforced by a fresh body of the Highlanders and the greater portion of the Belooch battalion. Colonel Farquhar, commanding the latter, was very severely wounded. Dr. Smith, 1st P. Cavalry, was also badly wounded in the pursuit. The enemy engaged were about 2,000 strong; they fought well and resolutely, and the loss of officers, these men amnesties and pardons is apparent enough to any one but a child. Our losses are about 80 or 100 killed and wounded. I do not believe the enemy lost more than 200 or 250 killed.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—We believe that the legality of the claim of the prize-agent to some portion of the property taken at the fall of Delhi is likely to be contested in the Supreme Court. It appears to us that nice points will have to be discussed before the determination of the question thus raised. It cannot be forgotten that the inhabitants of the stormed city were subjects of her Majesty.—Hurkur.

DARJEELING.—A private letter from Darjeeling, dated the 2nd Nov., states that the Superintendent of Darjeeling has received a letter from the officiating Resident at Katmandoo, to the effect that "Jung Bahadur has withdrawn the doubtful Proclamation, and is to issue one allowing free trade," &c., &c. The Julla Pahar works are, it appears, to be continued. A meeting was held on the 30th October of the landed proprietors of Darjeeling, Leelong, and Kurson, and an Association was formed for the purpose of furthering the cause of European colonisation in connection with the Society in England. General Lloyd, Lieutenant Colonel Cromwell, Dr. Campbell, and Mr. Seman, form the Committee, and Mr. Bane, senior, is Honorary Secretary.—Era and Press.

ALLAHABAD.—Manick Chand Modee of Allahabad, we are informed, has petitioned Government expressing discontent at a reward of Rs. 50,000 offered by Government to him for his loyalty and losses, and prayed a grant of one crore and half of rupees, a Khilaf and title, and the proprietary right of certain Zemindaries in perpetuity. The Governor-General has not passed as yet any orders on the petition.

SASSERAM.—From Sasseram we hear, that the rebels in those quarters are holding out in the hills. They tried to get across the Soane by Rotasghur, but Colonel Turner drove them into the hills again, where they are much in want of food, and the spies say they are quarrelling amongst themselves.

COLONEL RAMSAY.—The retirement from the service of Lieut.-Colonel James Ramsay, Commissary-General, is indeed, as the Governor-General has expressed himself, a great calamity to the Government, but we hear there was no alternative; the Colonel's health has entirely broken down, and a further residence in India it is deemed would be fatal to him; he therefore retires from the service with every good wish, but at the same time with great regrets from all departments. The following is the circular issued by Colonel Ramsay on the occasion:—"Circular.—Commissary-General's Office, Calcutta, 8th Nov., 1858. Lieutenant-Colonel James Ramsay regrets to announce that his state of health compels him to resign his post as Commissary-General of the Bengal army, for the active and responsible duties of which he feels he is no longer fitted. Lieutenant-Colonel Ramsay has passed twenty-nine years of his life in the department, the last ten of which have been devoted to its improvement. The most noble the Marquis of Dalhousie, K.T., late Governor-General of India, [minute, dated 28th February, 1856.] has recorded that 'the Commissary Department of the Bengal army is as effective for peace or war as that of the best organised army in Europe.' This opinion has been fully verified by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, (who, in reference to the late field operations,) has been pleased to state, that 'the officers of the Commissariat attached to the troops in the field were most efficient; no troops were ever better cared for, or provided with better supplies. To those who have laboured with the Commissary-General in gaining for the department, the above handsome and well-merited testimony from such high authority, Lieutenant-Colonel James Ramsay offers the tribute of his heartfelt thanks, and to all he bids an affectionate farewell. JAMES RAMSAY, Commissary-General.'" Colonel Ramsay intends to offer himself for election as a director of the Agra and United Service Bank.—Delhi Gazette.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH.—It will be remembered that on the appearance of the famous Ellenborough despatch, condemning the policy adopted by Lord Canning towards the people of Oude, the inhabitants of Calcutta immediately wrote an address to Lord Ellenborough in approval of the despatch issued by him. To that address his Lordship has written the following answer:—"To Messrs. Longueville Clark, Mackinlay, Sutherland, &c., &c.—Gentlemen, I have received with much gratification your letter of the 7th of August, expressing your concurrence in the principle laid down in my despatch with respect to the proclamation in Oude. I still think it was as much my duty to publish as to write the despatch which condemned that measure of confiscation. It is satisfactory to me to learn that so many English gentlemen, long resident in India, retain their native feelings, and desire that the Government of that country should be conducted on principles of justice. In justice will always be found sound policy, and nowhere more certainly than in the East. I rejoice to think that the proceedings taken here, with the view of overthrowing Lord Derby's Government, have in their result, contributed to its strength, and have thus afforded a new security for the enforcement of just principles of Indian administration. It is my earnest hope that actuated by pure motives in the exercise of the power entrusted to us, we may succeed by the blessing of Providence in effecting the good we desire, and shall see British authority in India rest upon the willing obedience of a contented people, but the natives of India must thoroughly understand that the power so entrusted to us, we are resolved to maintain, and that there is not an Englishman who would not rather die than see severed from the Crown the noble Empire which by a century of glorious actions we have acquired. I have the honour, to remain, gentlemen, your very faithful servant, ELLENBOROUGH."

TANTIA TOPEE.—We are informed that Colonel Beecher was at Baitool on the 11th and 12th November, with a good force of cavalry and guns. The enemy were halfway between that place and Ellichpore, and hearing of close pursuit fled towards the hills. Letters from Ellichpore, of date the 13th, describe everything to be peaceful and prosperous. General Michel was half way between Hoosungabad and Baitool on the 10th, Buornampore all right and well protected. Tantia Topee reported to be wounded and sick in body and mind; his force starving and done up; elephants and cattle ditto and footsore.—Poonah Observer, Nov. 17.

THE MAHARAJAH OF CASHMERE.—We learn that the young Maharajah of Cashmere, Rumber Sing, is indisposed, and that two hukeems from Lahore, ul-lashaw, and Budrookshaw, have proceeded to Jummoo at the request of his highness, to render medical aid.

THE BELOOCHES.—At the taking of the fort of Rampore Kulsia, we (Delhi Gazette) are glad to notice that the 1st Belooch Regiment behaved most gallantly, a correspondent states that a party of this corps, headed by Lieut. G. F. Beville, was the first over the river and into the enemy's entrenchments, which were at once evacuated. They had a covered way more than one and a half mile long, leading to a very strong fort, and a party of the Belooches rushing into it were blown up by one of the enemy throwing a burning brand into the powder-magazine. The enemy contested every inch of ground with our troops, and handled their muskets famously, keeping up a continual shower of bullets for some time. There were only four companies of Belooches in the engagement, the remainder being kept as a reserve, but they lost seven killed and fourteen wounded. It is very much to be regretted that Colonel Robert Farquhar, commanding the Belooch regiment, should have received so severe a wound in the knee as to render amputation of the leg necessary; he will be taken into Allahabad when he can be moved. Every letter we have seen respecting the taking of the fort states it to have been immensely strong, surrounded by jungle, and the entrenchments inside it, extending over an immense space on both sides the river "Sai." The enemy fought bravely it is said.

TAKLEE, NEAR SEETABULDEE, Nov. 10.—A force, under Colonel Willoughby Osborne, consisting of D. Troop (European) Madras Horse Artillery, two squadrons 7th Madras Light Cavalry, 32nd Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and Rifle Company, 26th Regiment Madras Native Infantry marched here from Kamptee yesterday morning, by order of Brigadier Carthew, commanding Nagpore force. Information has come in, that a large party of rebels, supposed to be Tantia Topee's main body, with all their plunder, is in the vicinity of Baitool, about fifty miles hence. A troop of cavalry has been sent out to reconnoitre, and the horse artillery and cavalry are in readiness to make a dour after the ruffians at the shortest notice. Tantia Topee has divided his force into three parties, and is thought to be either making for Oomrawtee in Berar, or for Nagpore, and it is hoped that we may be lucky enough to intercept him, and give him a jolly good thrashing. General Michell has been in full pursuit of him ever since the action of the 23rd ultimo, and tried to prevent his crossing the Nerbudda, but Tantia Topee doubled round a range of hills, and eluding both General Michell's and General Whitlock's forces, crossed the river with his advanced party between Hoosungabad and Narsingpore. The rebel chief is reported to have with him seven elephants and numerous camels heavily laden with loot, 1,500 disciplined (?) troops, chiefly cavalry and a countless swarm of badmashes of all descriptions, but no guns. Lieutenant Kerr was close on the advanced party, with his 350 Mahratta horse, but, finding himself too weak to attack, has fallen back for the protection of Hoosungabad, and to watch the second party, as well as to await General Michell's arrival. Preparations are being made, both at Nagpore and Kamptee, to give Tantia Topee a warm reception, should he venture to attack them. The Nagpore Irregular Cavalry have arrived to the relief of Chindwara, which was thought to be in danger.—Delhi Gazette.

ROOSEAH, Nov. 10.—There is nothing doing here except a little sporting. Colonel Barker's column was expected at Banee Gunge on the 10th or 11th November. He has gone there to make a demonstration, and will return to Rooseah in a few days. The fort at Rooseah, the scene of Walpole's disastrous attack, is now levelled, the ditches filled up, the jungle all round it being cut down, and Nurput Sing's best friends will not know it or even its site, should they even return. Engraj Sing handed in another gun a day or so ago, and has the pleasing duty assigned him of knocking down his own fort at Tooleepore, some ten miles north of Rooseah. All is quiet in the rear at Palee and Sandee, and in those quarters. No one knows in what direction the next move will be.

BAREILLY, Nov. 25.—The last week has also passed away, leaving the province generally in a desirable state of tranquillity, but it is to be regretted, that a small party of ten or eleven of the rebels should have got the chance to murder one of our chuprasias, and a hurkaru of the Intelligence Department, posted at Mahofa, a village bordering on the Pillibheet jungles, and but two miles from Neoreen, where the last action in which Captain Brown lost his arm was fought. The event has not been lightly regarded by the authorities, but received as the summons for still greater vigilance than is already kept in this part of the district, and the mounted and infantry police fit for service have accordingly been, or are about to be, sent to patrol the jungle frontier of Pillibheet. A very necessary step indeed, for predatory attacks from lawless bands lurking about these jungles will be of frequent occurrence at all our weakest or unguarded points, unless it is shown that even at such places we are watchful, and of which these dastards must very soon obtain intelligence, for they have emissaries watching our every movement—police arrangements, strength of each post, &c., which enables them to plan their attacks with assured success. In the present case their information was so precise, that they ascended to a room on the upper loft of a building where their victims were slumbering and effected their deadly purpose. We will hope, if it is not hoping against hope, that such occurrences after the further measures adopted will be very rare if, unfortunately, at all.—Delhi Gazette.

THE CHAPLAIN AND THE MARINER.—The Phoenix relates a curious incident which has occurred in Penang. The Rev. Arthur Wallis, "well known in Bengal, and now Chaplain in Penang," has had a misunderstanding with Captain Adley, a mariner. Captain Adley, it appears, while away on a voyage to Calcutta, left his wife at Penang. Mrs. Adley gives birth to twins and dies. On his return the Captain requests Mr. Wallis to baptize his children, on a certain day. Mr. Wallis baptizes children, however, only on the last Sunday of every month, and so wished the ceremony to be postponed. Captain Adley became excessively irate, wrote strongly to the clergyman, and received in reply a cool and decisive answer. Whereupon he signifies his intention of appearing in church the Sunday following, and calling upon Mr. Wallis to discharge his duty. Mr. Wallis comes to church, then, accompanied by an European policeman, who observing Captain Adley had come provided with "sponsors and godfathers," instantly takes him into custody. The affair has excited considerable excitement and discussion in the local journals.

LOYAL NATIVES.—Nazir Khan and Ameer Ali of Shahjehanpore, we are informed, have received from Government rent-free lands paying an annual jumma of Rs. 1,000 for their lives, for interring the bodies of Mr. Bicketts and others after their murder at Shahjehanpore.

DELHI.—It appears settled that European troops are henceforth to be permanently quartered at Delhi, and it is said that the new cantonment will be inside the city walls and along the banks of the Jumna, the palace being converted into an immense magazine.

MR. S. BLANCHARD, the able and experienced Editor of the M. fusilite, is about to disconnect himself with that paper in order to start a journal in Allahabad.

RAMPORE.—We (Delhi Gazette) are very glad to hear that the loyal Nuwaub of Rampore (Rohilkund), kept high festival on the 1st November, proclamation day. The translation was forwarded to him from the Governor General, and on its reception on the 1st, his Highness collected all his family, troops, and citizens on the parade ground, and rising from a silver throne, read it himself to all present; afterwards twenty-one guns boomed out, and all the troops fired a feu de joie in honour of her Majesty. In the evening the city and fort were splendidly illuminated, which the Nuwaub proceeded to witness. The fireworks were, it is said, very fine, and some twenty sets of Nauchnees danced for the delight of the populace for the two nights dedicated to festivities. The whole, we are told, went off very magnificently. The ladies of the court, too, had their amusements in the female apartments. The whole arrangements were perfected under the care of the Nuwaub's brother, Mahomed Kasim Ali, Khan Bahadur, and Fatta Mahomed Khan, one of his Highness's officers. On the 20th October, Lieut. J. H. Fisher, of the 82nd Foot, with 43 European sick and 50 of the Irregular Cavalry, arrived at Rampore on their way to Nainee Tal, and on the 27th, 86 Europeans, 50 Sowars, and two officers arrived there from Nainee Tal, and on the 29th marched for Bareilly. His Highness entertained them most kindly, and deputed Fatta Mahomed Khan to attend in every way to their requirements. Is the Government going to reward this chief for his well-tryed loyalty under such adverse circumstances as he has been placed in?

TIRHOOT.—From Tirhoot, the Delhi Gazette learns that Government have refused permission to Jung Bahadur to bring more than 1,000 men in a pilgrimage he purposes to make to Hajee-pore, and that, as he wished to bring 10,000 men, he is not very well placed at the non-compliance with his desires. Forty cartloads of baggage, tents, &c., have reached Hajee-pore. Orders have been issued by Sir Jung net to allow any more timber to be felled in the Terai.

LUCKNOW, Nov. 12.—Since the issue of the Proclamation several petty rebel chiefs have come forward and given up themselves and their followers, and have, under the terms of the Proclamation, received pardon, but the only talooqdar of note that has yet come forward is Madho Singh of Amethi. He tendered his allegiance on the 10th of this month to Major Barrow. But I believe several others are on the point of following his example. The entire district of Mullaon is now in our possession, and civil power has been restored therein. The Deputy Commissioner, Major Carnegie, has not yet gone to the old Sudder station of Mullaon, but is, for the present, located at Sundeela. Mr. Perkins, Assistant Commissioner of Lucknow, went out the other day to Roohia, in the room of Mr. Kavanagh, who has come into Lucknow and taken up Mr. Perkins' duties as civil judge. I hear there is shortly to be a great change in the posting of officers. The disarming of the population is being carried on very vigorously by the district officers and their assistants, especially where they are aided by a military force. In cases where there is no force to back up the endeavours of our officers, the inhabitants don't come forward willingly to surrender their arms. The destruction of forts, gurdies and fortifications of all kinds is also going on rapidly in all parts of the country where our rule has been restored. These measures cannot fail to secure the tranquillity of Oudh where they have been completely carried out. Beni Madho has again retreated to Shunkarpore. He has not yet shown any signs of coming to terms, or of taking advantage of the pardon offered. Nurput Singh after vacating Roohia, went off with a few followers towards Mahomdee, and I hear he is now going to join the Begum, at Boondee. It is said that this lady is now very anxious to make terms; but the sepoys about her will not allow her to do so, and have forced her to agree to cross the Gogra and attack us. These sepoys, I presume, are the remnants of the Bengal army; and I fancy they are of opinion that their sins have been so great, that it is impossible that the Queen will extend her pardon to them. We have heard no particulars lately of the doings of the Furruckabad and Shajehanpore brigades. I suppose they have not had much fighting, for the rebel chiefs and leaders must have kept vacating the country as our troops advanced. Colonel Troup was to have been at Seetapoor on the 10th, and as Mr. Balmain, the deputy commissioner of that district, is with the force, we shall soon have another district under our rule. I have now a fact to communicate which will astonish all who hear of it. The little town of Alleejunj, on the Fyzabad road, only one mile from the Mundeean cantonments on one side, and the same distance from the military police lines on the other, was actually plundered by a body of about 250 rebels on the night of the 10th instant. The rebels, sows and matchlockmen, entered the place at about 12 at night, killed two or three burkundazes, plundered the town, and marched off without the slightest opposition or injury. This is indeed a most daring dacoitee. If we cannot protect the suburbs of Lucknow, the inhabitants will begin to have a very poor opinion of our power; and in fact this very occurrence seems to have unsettled their minds a good deal. I hear that the Governor-General will shortly be here. How long he will remain, it is not known. He is to decide the question relating to the sites of the civil and military stations of Lucknow. It has been proposed by the Chief Commissioner, I hear, that the military station should lie between Dilkhoosha and Alum Bagh. The land has been surveyed, and barracks will be built as soon as his lordship's decision is known.—Delhi Gazette.

IMPORTANT TO CIVILIANS.—Mr. O. Toogood, of the Bengal Civil Service, we find lately submitted to the Indian Government a memorial with the following requests:—1st. That he may be placed in a position not inferior to that which he held previous to proceeding on furlough. 2nd. That his passage-money from England to this country may be repaid him. 3rd. That he may be allowed his travelling expenses from Calcutta to Monghyr. 4th. That the time occupied by him in the journey from London to Calcutta may be reckoned as service in this country. 5th. That in the event of his wishing to avail himself of the remainder of his furlough granted to him, that the time occupied in his journey from this country to England also reckoned as service in this country. 6th. That his expenses from whatever station he may be at London may be defrayed on his reaching that city. Mr. Toogood is one of those officers who being on furlough in England when the mutinies broke out, were ordered by the late Court of Directors on the 3rd August last to return to India.

With respect to the first request, Mr. Toogood cited cases to show that since his return from furlough under late Court's orders several members of the Civil Service similarly situated who returned to India after him, and some of his juniors also have been nominated to appointments before him. The President in Council observed that his request cannot now be fully complied with until a vacancy occurs, but the President in Council was of opinion that his claims to permanent employment suitable to his standing in the service deserve the most favourable consideration, and in the meanwhile his Honour in Council has sanctioned an arrangement presently noticed, whereby in respect to present allowance he will be placed at as little disadvantage as possible. With regard to his second request a reference has been made to the authorities at home. His third request not complied with. The President in Council has been also pleased to resolve that every member of the Civil Service who was ordered out from England before the expiry of his furlough shall draw from the date on which he was first appointed to act in any office to the date on which he was or may be confirmed in that office as special allowance, which, together with his subsistence allowance, shall be equal to the full salary of the office, and that his total allowance thus settled shall be regarded as a substantive salary in request to all deductions made in consequence of leave of absence, whether on account of sickness or otherwise, provided that no member of the Civil Service thus situated shall receive under this rule more than the emoluments he was drawing at the time when he applied for and took his furlough.—Englishman, Nov. 11.

LIEUT.-COL. PHILIPPS.—It is a rather remarkable and a lamentable fact that Lt. Col. J. L. Philipps, late commanding H.M. 89th Regiment in Rajpootana, whose death is reported to have occurred on his way to Bombay on board a country boat from Cambay, is the second Lieut.-Colonel, and eighth officer of that regiment who has died of disease within the past twelve months. He served in the Crimea, and lost the use of his lower extremities from exposure to wet and cold in the trenches before Sebastopol, and was one of those who received the medal from the Queen's hands at that impressive parade in Hyde-park. Being in England on leave when the 89th was ordered from the Cape to India, instead of to New Zealand—the previous destination of the corps—he had embarked for the latter colony, and was some days at sea, when a pilot brig, which had been despatched by his family for the purpose, overtook the Transport, and relanded him in England, whence he hastened to India, which he had scarcely reached, when he fell into command of the corps by the decease of Colonel Leslie Skinner, at Deesa. The deceased, who was greatly beloved by the men of his regiment, was a member of a large family of soldiers, several of whom fell in the Crimea, and during the present mutiny—the last, we believe, being Captain Edward Hughes, of the 57th B. N. I., who survived the defence of Lucknow, only to fall after its relief by Havelock. In fact, of seventeen brothers and first cousins who entered the army, some sixteen and thirteen years ago, he is the ninth who has fallen in action, or died of exposure in the field in a few years.—Hurkaru.

AN IMAGINARY CAPITALIST.—A considerable sensation has arisen in our money market during the last three or four days from the quantity of Company's paper, as we continue to call it, suddenly brought forward for sale. It is supposed that the natives still felt so much distrust that they were anxious to part with their securities at a time when the feeling amongst capitalists, particularly the Europeans, was so favourable. Many lakhs were sold by the brokers at delicious prices, to the banks and capitalists, and all parties were very pleasant on the subject. The countenances of brokers, who have had rather slow times of late, quite brightened up. Gloomy looks and long faces disappeared; but alas for fortune! yesterday the mystery, which it was believed there must be somehow, was cleared up. A native of some respectability, who had hitherto fulfilled all his contracts, and who had instructed the brokers to sell his paper, assuring them of its existence, mysteriously informing them that it should be dug up when required. This native was discovered to be insane, his insanity taking this not unnatural form. It is to be hoped that no one has resold the paper they may believe they have contracted for from this man, and to help in preventing such a misfortune, we hasten to give publicity to the facts.—Englishman.

KHILLATS have been bestowed on the undermentioned officers of the Rajah of Nabha's service, who were wounded in opposing the passage of Jullundur mutineers over the Sutlej near Ludiana. To Moosudda Sing, commandant of Artillery, 500 rupees. [To Jall Sing, Resaldar, 250 rupees.

PROCLAMATION AT SIMLA.—The ceremony of delivering the Proclamation having closed, then commenced the Durbar. The Rajah of Simla was seated at the right hand of the Deputy Commissioner, on the raised dais, on which also, at his left hand, were placed the officials, such as the Extra Assistant Commissioner, the Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners, and others. Next to the Rajah of Simla was seated the Ranah of Keonthul, with his son and grandson; both these chiefs, on arrival, having been led to their seats by Lord W. M. Hay. The Rajah was presented with a killut, consisting of shawls, turbans, and then, after salaaming in acknowledgment, he retired. The Keonthul Ranah, for his hospitality to the residents who fled to his territory from Simla on the memorable occasion of the panic of May, 1857, was rewarded by being created a rajah; he was invested with the title, presented with a sunnud, and a killut to the value of Rs. 5,000, partly in shawls, the remainder in bags of money. An interesting little incident now occurred. A pretty selection of suitable toys had been prepared for the little grandchild, who was now presented with them, to his evident satisfaction, and it was highly amusing to witness the child's pleasure at receiving his little killut. The Wuzer of the Rajah of Kihloor received for his master, who was too ill to attend personally, also a reward of Rs. 5,000, in shawls, &c. The Thakoore of Kotee also was honoured by receiving a sunnud, conferring on him the title of Ranah. The Thakoore of Ghoond and Theog received small killuts and complimentary letters from the Governor-General. These three latter chiefs are tributary to the Rajah of Keonthul; they with the Rajah, who was cheered by the entire community, now retired, and one by one the other chieftains came on to the dais from a side room, where they had been seated, each to receive his quota of reward. The Thakoore of Bulsun, an old man, nearly 100 years of age, was created a Ranah and received a killut of 1,000 rupees. The Ranahs of Joobul and Bhogul had each a killut of 1,000 rupees, and Jye Sing, the brother of the former, had 600 rupees given him. The Wuzer of Kihloor and the uncle of the young Rajah of Simla had each presents of 800 rupees. The Ranah of Dhomes had his annual tribute to Government remitted to one-half. The remaining Ranahs of Budgee and Kooner, the Thakoore of Koomharsain, Turcho, Durcot-e, and Kothar, had the usual Durbar killuts presented, with complimentary letters from the Governor-General. The well known Government contractor at Kuss-wlee, Bahadoor Singh of Kothar, has been promised a Jageer-ship, when sanctioned by the Governor-General, for his good conduct during the late mutiny. The Vakeel of the Rajah of Bisahir had a killut bestowed on him, rendering, by this attention to the servant, more apparent the work of disapprobation shown to the master by excluding him from the Durbar. The Vakeel of the Rajah of Puttilla, the Tehsildar of Simla, and the Kotawal, had also small killuts given them; and thus ended the Durbar.—Lahore Chronicle.

SEHARUNPORE FESTIVITIES.—Yesterday, the 1st of November, here, as doubtless at most other stations, the Royal Proclamation was read in the presence of all the inhabitants both European and native, first by Mr. Robert Spankie, the judge, in English, and afterwards by the Tehsildar, in the vernacular. The Police, mounted and foot, looked remarkably well, and did credit to their officers. After the reading of the Proclamation a royal salute was fired by Major Roberts from his two Sikh guns, followed by a general salute by the police, and then all dispersed. In the afternoon the station was entertained by Messrs. Spankie and Vans Agnew at a superb banquet, after which their bungalow was brilliantly illuminated on all sides. V. R. and Victoria in coloured letters looked very pretty, and the garden, with its picturesque walks and arbour, presented a most charming appearance. Later in the evening there was a grand display of fireworks, and the concourse of native spectators showed a very good spirit in this city. But mark the mournful sequel! An unlucky rocket, instead of emulating the example of all other sorts of rockets and going up into the skies, thought proper to effect a singularity by taking a contrary direction, and went straight into the chuppur, at first as we all thought harmlessly, but after the dispersion of the crowd, and while the ladies, having retired into the house, were playing and singing, the alarm was given that the house was on fire. Then came a scene of confusion indeed. Ladies seized their babies and bolted like lightning, and gentlemen stripped off their coats and set to work to get out the furniture and property. A fatigue party from the police and bhates and gurras were shortly on the spot, and, fortunately, a swimming bath being near at hand, there was a plentiful supply of water; and by the unexampled energy of the gentlemen, and the hearty zeal of the workmen, the Sikhs of the police especially, in about three hours the fire was brought under, not, however, before the whole of the upper story of this magnificent house was totally destroyed. In the midst of it all, Mr. Spankie was to be seen in the most reckless manner encouraging the men, and once with a courage worthy a better object, making a desperate rush through a burning room, the flooring gave way, and he was lost to sight amidst a burning mass: he was, however, immediately pulled out by some friendly Sikhs at hand, and I rejoice to add, the only injury he received from his accident, was a slight burning of his hands. Mr. and Mrs. Spankie and Mr. Vans Agnew were accommodated for the night by their friends, and so ended this most unfortunate occurrence. It is to be deeply regretted that such unexampled loyalty should have met with such an ungrateful termination.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 9.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 13.—A detachment, consisting of 200 sabres, H. M. 9th Lancers under Major Coles—and 3 H. Art. guns—have been directed to march from Allahabad on the 15th Nov. towards Mirzapore, with the State prisoners from Delhi. The headquarters H.M.'s 9th Lancers, and 2nd Troop 2nd Brigade H. A., will march on same day towards Pertaubghur, under Lieut. Colonel Kaye.

MAJORS AND MINORS.—The inhabitants of the twenty-four pergunnahs have presented a petition to the legislative council, praying, with reference to the bill "for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of minors in the Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal," that the age of majority be fixed at eighteen, and not at the Court of Wards' age of twenty-one, as petitioned for by the British Indian Association.

BABOO KALLY DOSS PALIT, the able Deputy Collector of Hazareebaugh, is to be invested by Government with the management of the Pachete estate.

CHURCH AT LUCKNOW.—Lord Canning has sanctioned an outlay of 30,000 rupees from the funds realised from the city tax, for the erection of a church for the civil community. Captain Hutchinson is the architect. The foundation will shortly be laid.

SALT REVENUE.—The collection of salt revenue in the Punjab for the current year (up to the present date) as compared with that of last year, shows an increase of rupees 2,41,074-10-7.

MURDER OF CAPTAIN HART.—We deeply regret to announce the fact that Captain Hart, of the 39th Madras N.I., was shot dead, by a Sepoy, at Vellore, on Friday night, the 12th November. The following account has been forwarded to us from a most trustworthy source:—"It would appear that about half-past ten o'clock last night, the 12th instant, a Mussulman Sepoy of the 18th N.I., on sentry near the flag-staff, and overlooking the hollow bastion in which the gaol is situated in the fort, suddenly, without rhyme or reason, fired his musket off twice at, or in the direction of, the flag staff, and then ran down from his post to the front of the gaol, where he was challenged by the sentry on duty at the entrance,—that the European goler, Mr. Stafford, an out Chelsea pensioner, came out from his quarters to see what the firing was about, when the Sepoy shot him dead. The man then made away, for the main guard, situated near Brigadier Logan's quarters, called out to the sentry on duty there for the brigadier, saying, he wanted to shoot him; he then made off for the inner gate of the fort, which he managed to pass before the sentry could stop him. He had to pass two other gates, without guards, and then the outer gate, where there is a guard, which he also contrived to pass without being stopped by the sentry on duty. He then appears to have made away either across the parade-ground, or by a back road to the commissariat and police office, where there was also a guard of his regiment on duty, by whom, however, he does not appear to have been seen in time. The superintendent of military police, Captain Hart, of the 30th N.I., a highly-esteemed officer, having been informed of the firing, had left his residence, stating that he was going to the fort to inquire into the cause. On the way he had to pass his office, and drove in to get some peons; not finding them in the front of the office, he was driving round to the back, where the peons guard-room is situated, when the same miscreant suddenly turned up, and, after making use of abusive language, first to the driver and then to the unfortunate officer, fired at him and shot him dead, the ball entering near the neck, and coming out near the opposite shoulder. He then again made away for a sort of Mussulman shrine on the parade-ground, where he began to sing out 'Deen, deen.' He was then surrounded by a jemadar and party of his own regiment, and having refused to give himself up when called upon to do so, was fired at, and fell wounded. He is now secured in the main guard. Though badly wounded, his wounds are not dangerous. The man bears a good character in the regiment in which he has served some ten years, but indulges, it would appear, in bhing, and seemed to be still under its influence on the morning of the 13th.—Spectator, Nov. 15.

NAGPORE PROVINCE, CHANDAH.—The rebel zemindar, Bapoo Row, was captured and made over to Captain W. H. Orichton, the Deputy Commissioner and Magistrate of Chandah, on the 21st of October, at 12 A.M., by Lieutenant T. E. L. Higginson, commanding the detachments on outpost duty and field service. The trial was at once proceeded with, and the rebel zemindar was fully convicted. He was sentenced to be hung. The sentence was carried into execution, without any misadventure, the same day, at 4 P.M., amidst a vast concourse of people, near the jail in the city. The prompt manner in which our magistrate has acted is applauded by the community here, as all, more or less, were desirous to see the chief of the murderous band, who caused English blood to be shed, grace the new scaffold at Chandah, and Bapoo Row was the first who swung from it. He mounted the ladder steadily. His only wish was that he should have died happily had his accomplices hung with him too. The trial of the others is going on, and we expect to see a couple more forms dangling from the gallows at Chandah. Venketrow, the other rebel Zemindar, is not yet captured, but it is reported he intends surrendering himself and imploring for mercy. The wire of the telegraph line is expected to be distributed through Chandah next month. Inspector W. J. Grinnal is carrying on the work expeditiously.—Advertiser.

A NICE STATE OF SOCIETY.—A very daring robbery was committed in the dwelling-house of Mr. Huni during the night of the 2nd Nov., and property to a considerable amount carried away. From all we learn there can be little doubt but that Mr. Huni was drugged. The same day Mr. Locke, Inspecting Postmaster, lost his gold watch from the travellers' bungalow; the bungalow peon is supposed to be the culprit, and has been taken into custody. A few nights ago the Scotch kirk was entered, and a number of globes and wall shades carried off. Robbery of late has been much on the ascendancy, and in some cases may be traced perhaps to the dearth of provisions, and the large number of labourers thrown out of employ. But this could not have been the cause in Mr. Huni's case, and if brought home to the butler, we could hardly name a punishment too severe for a robbery under the circumstance, and which might have ended in murder also.—Cochin Courier.

NORTH CANARA FIELD FORCE.—Since I wrote to you on the 1st of October, the rebels pillaged and burnt down a house near the village of Munshee in North Canara, the value of the booty amounting to about two thousand rupees; Munshee is only ten or twelve miles from the frontier post of Koondul. The officer commanding there, Captain Searle of the 35th N. I., on getting intelligence of this event, immediately proceeded to Munshee with thirty-five men, but the rebels had left two hours before his arrival—this was on the night of the 12th. On the following day, having obtained information of their movements, Captain Searle gave chase, which he kept up for four or five days, but without success. The rebels are very active, know the jungles well, and the country being very mountainous and thickly wooded, it is of course the easiest thing possible for them to keep clear of regular troops. Lieut. Reid of the 16th with some of his men, also followed Capt. Searle, and Captain Leggett of the 35th, with Lieutenants Grant of the 47th, and Cox and Broughton of the 35th—and Mr. Ballard of the Civil Service, and Lieutenants Vizard and Onslow of the 35th, with detachments, were out in different directions on the frontier, trying to cut off the rebels in their attempt to descend into the Goa territories. The work was very hard and the exposure very great, men and officers lying out in the open air at night in heavy dew and drizzling rain. This excitement continued till about the 17th, when the detachments learned that the Bund had managed to escape through some thick jungles into Goa, and they therefore settled down again on the frontier coasts. On the 16th, Captain Leggett and Lieuts. Grant and Cox with their detachments thought they were going to be the lucky

REMOVAL OF DR. NICHOLSON.—About a month ago we stated that a great stir had been made by the Supreme Government regarding some mutineers, who died from the effects of scurvy, contracted on the voyage to the Andaman Islands. The affair has taken a more serious turn than we expected. A rumour was for some days current here that Dr. Nicholson, Civil Surgeon of Kurrachee, is about to be removed from his appointment. In common with others, we did not believe that the Government of Bombay would have resorted to such a step, whatever their subordinates might have advised, without at least some investigation. Dr. Nicholson's grave fault, error, crime, or whatever name interested persons may apply to it, is simply this—that he has to bear the blunders of others. Some months since a gang of mutineers were received from the Mooltan authorities, for transmission to the Andaman Islands. They were lodged, of course, in the jail; amongst their number were some few sick; these were sent to the hospital, and as a sequence were under the medical treatment of Dr. Nicholson. The time arrived for the removal of the convicts, when the officiating magistrate at Kurrachee took upon himself to remove from the hospital the sick prisoners, save one; and this without the doctor's permission. Twenty-seven of the prisoners died on board from scurvy;—the Government, alive to the welfare of ruffians who had murdered loyal subjects, and their families, and dead to that of European women and children, slowly and deliberately killed by their own servants, wrote to the Commissioner, and the object being to bring some one to justice, an innocent person, Dr. Nicholson, is immolated. That women and children were deliberately killed on their voyage up river, our columns have proved, and as opportunity occurs, we shall never cease to return to the subject. Dr. Nicholson is removed from his appointment simply for not having reported the circumstance of the removal of the sick convicts from the jail hospital.—Sindian.

SAWUNT WAREE, 9th Nov.—A few days ago information was given that a small tiger had visited the town of Waree, and was hiding in the bushes, having demolished a pig, the swinish multitude in this state being very numerous. An officer of H.M.'s 56th Foot went in pursuit, accompanied by three men of the Sawunt Waree local corps. On their arriving near the spot where the tiger was supposed to be, the party were informed by some native that the animal had been wounded, and were requested to be very careful and not to enter the jungle. The officer, Mr. Gubbins, not understanding what was said, went ahead, and before he had time to cock his rifle, the tiger, which turned out to be a cheeta, bore down upon him like lightning, tore his face, and bit him in the arm and several other places severely, and if it had not been for his slipping down into a nullah his life would have been sacrificed. Two of the sepoy were also much wounded and bitten, but did not retire until they had laid the beast dead at their feet. The courage displayed by these men has been greatly praised; a waterman who went with the party was also injured. This may serve as a hint to gentlemen who are sportingly inclined to follow up wounded animals, to think a little before they act. General Jacob is, to the delight of the native community, daily expected here from Goa. From the roaring of the cannon and report of musketry that we hear daily, it is believed he will review the Sawunt Waree local corps, which is comprised at head quarters of recruits, before he leaves the station. It is wonderful how soon these darkies have been disciplined. To see them manoeuvre one would think they had been years in the service instead of only a few months, but when a corps is blessed with a good adjutant strange things can be done.—Bombay Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF SIR PATRICK GRANT.—H.M.'s steamer Feroze, I.N., arrived from Calicut on the morning of the 11th Nov., having on board his Excellency Lieutenant-General Sir Patrick Grant, G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army, who proceeds on a tour of inspection in Central India. His Excellency left the Feroze in the Governor's state barge, accompanied by his military staff, and landed at the Apollo Bunder at about quarter past eight. The Feroze fired a salute of 13 guns, on his leaving the vessel, and the saluting battery sent forth a similar peal on his landing at the Bunder. His Excellency was received by a guard of honour from H.M.'s 57th Regiment, which presented arms as he passed, and the garrison band played "See the conquering hero comes." A carriage belonging to the Governor was in readiness to receive him, in which his Excellency drove off to Malabar Point, after returning the salute given him by the troops. Sir Patrick Grant seemed in the best of health, and presented a robust and martial appearance.

COLONEL C. H. SOMERSET, C.B., Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, has, we are informed by our Deccan contemporary, been appointed a brigadier, to command the cavalry with the Malwa Field Force, under General Michel. He leaves Poona immediately.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—At a meeting of the directors of the Bank of Bombay, held on the 11th November, the rate of interest was raised 1 per cent. all round.

A NEW ATTORNEY.—Mr. Campbell Mackintosh Keir, who lately arrived from England, was sworn in on the 18th November before a full court as attorney, solicitor, and proctor of our Supreme Court.

THE EX RAJAH OF KOLAPORE, who is now lodged at Munora, is to be removed to Clifton, in order to make room for the new comers from Surat.

ARBITER ELEGANTIORUM.—The following G. O. C. dated 7th April, 1855, is republished for general information, and the commander-in-chief is pleased further to direct that officers shall appear in uniform at all places of public worship, whether troops attend or not:—Head Quarters, Mahabaleshwar, 7th April, 1855. The commander-in-chief has had his attention drawn to the subject of dress in this army, from the way in which he has observed officers divest themselves of their uniform upon every possible opportunity. A laxity in this respect has crept into the service, injurious to discipline and to the respectability of the profession. The commander-in-chief directs that officers invariably appear in uniform when attending any place of public worship where the troops attend at all public parties, and in all military society; on these occasions they are to appear in the established undress uniform. Officers are forbidden to appear in places of public resort in fancy head-dress, smoking caps, wideawakes or shooting jackets, or other unseemly apparel. When officers put on plain clothes, for the convenience of exercise or recreation, they are to conform to the usages of society and to dress accordingly, particularly when they are likely to come into the society of ladies. Commanding officers are desired to see the spirit of the order acted up to, and they will order every officer home to his quarters, who infringes these rules.

MR. W. LOUDON, Uncovenanted Assistant Superintendent in the Poona and Tanna Revenue Survey and Assessment Department, has been appointed to the office of Administrator-General, vacant by the death of Mr. J. H. Standen.

MR. ST. ALBIN, of the electric telegraph department in Ceylon, who has successfully accomplished the task of laying down the submarine cable across the Straits of Manar, has received orders to proceed to Bombay, to lay similar cables across the beds of several large rivers in India. He will, no doubt, be employed in Sind. Mr. St. Albin arrived in Bombay on the 24th October by the steamer Norna.

CONCEALED ARMS.—We noticed some days ago that a number of concealed arms were, owing to the vigilance and energy of Mr. Framjee Naaserwanjee, the Foudjar of Poona, discovered in or near the village of Chicklee, fourteen miles from Poona. Amongst the arms thus found secreted—some being buried in the earth—were several jinjalls and wall-pieces, some of them carrying a one-pound ball a-piece. The case having been brought before the acting first assistant magistrate of Poona, Mr. C. G. Kemball, that officer, after enquiry, fined the Patell of the village, who was proved to be the owner of the arms, in the sum of 200 rupees—a moiety of which will be given to the Foudjar. We have no wish to cast the slightest blame on the assistant magistrate who decided the case. We have no doubt that he would have inflicted a more rigorous punishment had the law allowed of it;—but it appears that the Disarming Act makes no difference between the concealment of a pocket pistol or an 18-pounder.—Poona Observer, Nov. 17.

MR. EDWARD ARTHUR.—We (Bombay Gazette) are glad to observe that our old townsman, Mr. Edward Arthur, Coroner for Bombay and Attorney for Paupers, has returned from home, where he had gone to recruit his health. It was expected that, on his return, Mr. Arthur would resume his duties, which had been respectively carried on by Mr. Sangster and Mr. Acland during his temporary absence, but we regret to learn that he is about to resign his appointment, in consequence of his health not permitting him to continue the onerous duties attached to the situation. It is supposed that Mr. Sangster will be appointed to succeed him.

THE GUZERAT PROVINCIAL BATTALION has been reorganised as an irregular corps, the station to be at Kaira. The facings of the men are light yellow. The following officers are named:—Capt. H. Davies, 29th Regt. N.I., commandant, and Lieut. B. Johnston, 18th Regt. N.I., adjutant. The office of assistant surgeon is still vacant.

CAPTAIN RAVERTY.—The services of Captain H. K. Raverty, 8rd Bombay N.I., an Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab, have been replaced at the disposal of the Bombay government.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—There have been some mistakes in recent announcements of official changes in this Presidency. Mr. Young, Chief Sec. to Government, has assumed the duties of Mr. Secretary Hart in the Separate, General, Ecclesiastical, and Public Works Departments, and Railway Branch; and Mr. E. H. Ellis has been appointed Acting Secretary in the Revenue and Financial Departments in place of Mr. Young thus transferred. Colonel Melville, the Military Secretary, has been thirty-six years in India, eighteen of which long period have been spent in the Secretariat. It is said that he will be succeeded here by Colonel Swanson.

SIR HENRY DAVISON, who arrived here so recently as the 8th of May last, from Madras, and was on the same day sworn in as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Bombay, is, it seems, about to return to the place from whence he came, breveted, however, as Chief Justice of Madras, in the room of Sir Christopher Rawlinson, whose term of office expires in January next.

DR. IMPEY.—We are sorry to observe that Dr. Impey, postmaster general, Bombay, is under the necessity of leaving the presidency for England in consequence of ill-health. It was only yesterday we learned from a friend of his that he was likely at no distant period to succeed Sir William O'Shaughnessy as chief of the electric telegraph department in India. We are certain this latter appointment would have been more in consonance with his talents, and more congenial to his wishes than the office he has lately held, and we can only regret that sickness should prevent the realization of his fond expectations.—Sind Kossid, Nov. 16.

NAVAL ARCHITECTURE.—The launch of the frigate now building in the Mazagon Dockyard, intended for his Highness the Imam of Muscat, will take place in the early part of December. The vessel is an excellent specimen of naval architecture, and clearly demonstrates what native artisans, under European superintendence, are capable of effecting. She is pierced for thirty-six guns on slide, being flush fore and aft, and her draft of water will not be more than that of an ordinary merchantmen of 600 or 700 tons burden.

Affair at Kirwee.

From Brigdr. W. Carpenter, comdg. 1st Inf. brig., Saugor field div., to the Asst. adj. gen., Saugor field div., dated Kirwee, Aug. 14, 1858.

Sir,—Authentic intelligence having reached me shortly before noon yesterday that a large body of mutineers and rebels, variously estimated at two to four thousand men, were actually descending the Ghats, about two or three miles in front of the villages or towns of Nayagaon, Seetapore, Chitrakote, and Kampta, any or either of which places were in danger of immediate attack, I have the honour to report, for the information of the Maj. gen. comdg. the div., that I lost no time in organising the detach. noted in the margin,* and marched at 2 P.M., guided by Syed Akbar Ali, Tehseeldar, and Ghulam Aboo Khan, Thamedar of Kirwee, both of whom have been most zealous in obtaining for me correct information. I may here observe, I have ascertained from a prisoner that the rebels came from Dudree, and were under the command of Goomdun Sing, Runmunt Sing, and others of inferior note, who are known to master nearly 2,500 men; but I am inclined to think the number of the enemy we engaged did not exceed 1,500, of whom about 200 were said to be mutinous sepoys.

2. In less than three hours, my advance guard, preceded by the mounted men of the R.A., came in sight of the enemy in force, about a mile distant, and apparently in confusion, as if taken by surprise, but they immediately formed up, with their right resting on one of the passes through the hills, and their left protected by a body of cav. and inf. expolence, with another pass close at hand, and on the left of the cav. a labyrinth of deep and almost impenetrable ravines intersected each other wooded to the very summit; the rear of the main position was a precipitous hill covered with large boulders of rock and thick jungle. The temple of Hoonomaun, a very strong building on the face of the hill, afforded good cover to the enemy, some of whom appeared to be in possession. I halted within about three or four hundred yards, to enable Capt. Palmer, R.A., to prepare his guns for action; this seemed to give confidence to the enemy, for he immediately cheered with loud shouts of defiance, inviting us to come on, and commenced a desultory fire along his whole line, so that I hoped he intended to make a vigorous stand.

3. As soon as Capt. Palmer was ready to open fire I advanced H.M.'s 43rd L.I., and the 1st Regt. N.I. in skirmishing order, with supports and the mounted art. men and Sikh horse in reserve. Capt. Palmer's practice with canister and round shot was admirable; and the Enfield rifle told upon the enemy's ranks. But they turned and fled by the time we were within two hundred yards of the base of the hill, retiring up its face whilst we plied them with canister, rifle, and musketry, which, in spite of the cover afforded by the rocks and jungle, did considerable execution. The ascent, however, was almost perpendicular, and the men too much exhausted by heat to attempt it, so that it is somewhat difficult to state the enemy's loss; but from personal observation, on the most moderate calculation, it may be fairly estimated at upwards of a hundred, whilst our own was nearly nil, as the enemy fired too high and in confusion; their cav. retired with even more precipitation than the inf., by the difficult pass I have mentioned, and had disappeared before we could reach the gorge.

4. By this time night came on, accompanied by torrents of rain. I therefore left a party of fifty sepoys of the 1st regt., under the command of Capt. Rishton, at the house of the Thakoorin of Nayagaon, in order to allay the alarm of the people, who were panic-stricken throughout the villages I have named. I myself returned with the remainder of the troops to Kirwee, and arrived about half-past one this morning. Capt. Riehton, who performed his duty in a very satisfactory manner, came in at eight A.M., and reported all quiet, and that the enemy had retired to their stronghold in the hills.

H.M.'s 43rd Regt.—1 capt., 1 lieut., 1 ens., 6 serjts., and 119 rank and file.

The Thakoorin of Nayagaon did good service during the morning, by exhibiting a bold front to the enemy, although she has very few armed men, and only one gun. This lady acted in obedience to my previous instructions, to resist to the uttermost until we came to her support.

5. The conduct of the troops, officers as well as men, deserves my warmest commendations, and the native soldiers emulated their European comrades, whilst all appeared to regret the enemy did not give them a better opportunity to display their valour.

6. I beg to mention for favourable consideration the names of Capt. Palmer, comdg. R.A.; Capt. Colville, comdg. detach. of H.M.'s 43rd L.I.; and Maj. Gottreux, comdg. 1st regt. N.I.; and I am happy to have another opportunity to bear testimony to the zeal and energy of Maj. Hodson, my maj. of brig. All these officers deserve, and have, my cordial thanks.

7. The medical arrangements were well provided for by Asst. surg. Jowett, and those of the commissariat by Mr. Conductor Lynch, to my entire satisfaction.

8. I deeply lament the loss of three men of the gallant 43rd L.I. by sun stroke. The afternoon was very hot, and a great many Europeans fell out during the march and after the engagement; but I am inclined to attribute sun-stroke in these cases to the fact that few of us have yet recovered our natural health and strength, impaired by the arduous hot weather campaign, and the long marches to which we have been exposed.

9. Fortunately the cessation of rain for a few days had dried up the country, and enabled me to surprise the rebels. But our return night march is not to be described. The rain poured down in torrents, and the ravines, which are numerous and deep in this neighbourhood, had become rivers. In passing one of them an incident occurred deserving notice. A mounted artilleryman, Corporal Hughes, got into the deepest part of the stream; his horse was swept away, and he himself on the eve of drowning, when Staff serg. Glasgow, of the R.A., dashed amid the darkness into the foaming flood, at imminent peril of his life, and saved his comrade.

I witnessed this brave action, and have much pleasure in recording it.

Comdg. 1st Inf. Brig., Saugor Field Div.

Colonel Robertson's Victory at Beejapoor.

The Hon. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Adj. gen. of the army, dated the 24th ult., forwarding a despatch from Brig. Gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div., reporting the successful operations of a column, under the command of Lieut. col. Robertson, 25th B.N.I., which was detached from Powree, in pursuit of the rebels under Maun Sing.

The Gov. gen. entirely concurs with the Rt. Hon. the C. in C. in the commendation bestowed on Lieut. col. Robertson and the officers and men under his command. The havildars whose meritorious conduct has been brought to notice will be immediately rewarded in the manner proposed.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen.,
Sec. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Dept.,
with the Gov. gen.

From the Adj. gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Depart., with the Gov. Gen.

Sir,—I am directed by the C. in C. to transmit the accompanying copy of letter, of the 11th inst., and enclosure, received from Brig. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div., reporting the proceedings of a column under the command of Lieut. col. G. H. Robertson, of the 25th B.N.I., detached from Powree, in pursuit of a rebel force under Maun Sing; and to request that, in submitting the papers to the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen., you will have the goodness to express H.E.'s high approval and commendation of the conduct of the commander, and of the troops concerned in these arduous and skillfully-managed movements.

2. The C. in C. further recommends that the havildars mentioned in the concluding paragraph of Lieut. col. Robertson's despatch, may be rewarded with the 3rd class of the "Order of Merit," for their exertions in procuring intelligence of the movements of the enemy.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. col.,
Adj. gen. of the Army.
Hd. Qrs., Allahabad, Sept. 24, 1858.

From Brig. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div., to the Chief of the Staff.

Dated Camp Seepree, Sept. 11, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to lay before H.E. the C. in C. a report from Lieut. col. Robertson, comdg. 25th B.N.I., of the pursuit and defeat of the portion of the Powree fugitives that was composed of regular troops.

This body had formed the main strength of the rebel Maun Sing, and give him a complete superiority over Scindiah's district authorities, so that his depredations were unchecked, and becoming daily more formidable, until they brought on him the visitation of British troops.

Col. Robertson's column was furnished with fifteen days' supplies for Europeans and with all the carriage that could possibly be taken from the rest of the force, and with elephants and camels to mount about 200 men.

After a most arduous pursuit of ten days, the difficulties of which can only be fully appreciated by those who have seen the country through which it lay, Col. Robertson's column overtook and nearly annihilated the fugitives at Bijipoor.

In these dense jungles, the few scattered villages were either deserted or in Maun Sing's interests, through fear or affection; for some have been in his jaghir, and others subject for a year to his unchecked raids. Nothing but Col. Robertson's experience, and his unwearied perseverance and steady determination, and the high military spirit and energy of his troops, enabled him to conduct the expedition to its successful issue. Maun Sing, who is familiar with every path in the jungles, appears to have doubled back about the 1st or 2nd, with 200 men, whilst his vakeel, Pearce Lall, with a similar number, also turned off at the same time by a separate route; and the two have re-united and appeared again in the jungles north of Powree, with about 400 men, to which he is reduced from 4,000. The local troops of Scindiah ought to be able now to deal with them, if any energy whatever is exerted in the matter. I beg to recommend most earnestly to H.E.'s favour and consideration, Col. Robertson and the officers, non-commissioned officers and privates under his command; the conduct of all appears to have been most excellent.

Col. Robertson particularly recommends Captain Bolton, deputy assist. qr. mr. gen.; Lieut. Williams, deputy assist. commissary gen.; also Capt. Poore, 8th hussars; Capt. Forster, 95th regt.; Capt. Rice, 25th B.N.I.; Lieut. Stewart, 13th L.I., comdg. Meade's horse; Lieut. Roome, 10th B.N.I.; havildars Ram Lal, 10th B.N.I.; and Dowlut Sing, 25th B.N.I.

R. NAPIER, Brigdr. genl.,
Comdg. Gwalior div.

From Lieut.-Col. G. H. Robertson, Comdg. Pursuing Column, Gwalior Div., to the Assist. Adj. Gen., Gwalior Div.

Dated, Camp near Beejapoor, Sept. 5, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, that the Pursuing Column under my command, strength as detailed below, marched from Powree on the 27th ult., in pursuit of Maun Sing, said to have with him 1,000 cav. and 3,000 inf.*

2. On the 29th, we came up with a small party of Maun Sing's inf., some of whom were killed, some taken prisoners, and the rest dispersed in the jungle. From the prisoners I learnt that Maun Sing had told the Gwalior contgt. portion of his inf. to leave him, as he could not supply them with food. We continued closely to follow Maun Sing, coming daily upon the encamping ground vacated by him a few hours before. At a pass among the hills between Sanda and Bijrawun, some of his fires were burning when we arrived on the evening of the 30th. At this ground he divided his party, sending his wounded and superfluous baggage towards Padone. At three miles before reaching Sangye on the 31st, I saw traces on the ground of foot-prints (chiefly men's) turning sharply to our left rear, while the impressions of horses' hoofs continued on to Sangye. Here had evidently been a further division of Maun Sing's force, reported to be now reduced to 500; of these 200 were said to have gone towards Shahabad with Pierce Lall, and 300 with Maun Sing and his uncle Ajit Sing, towards Rye. On the evening of the 2nd inst. we reached Rye, and there heard that three parties of inf. Sepoys, had met at that village from different directions, and had left that morning. On the evening of the 3rd, we arrived at Burrumpore. In view to at once closing up with the enemy, who had contrived hitherto to be always just ten or twelve miles ahead of, I made arrangements on the line of march for pushing on with a portion of the column as per margin,† and at two o'clock next morning (4th inst.) marched. At 10 A.M., we arrived at Jagur, marched again at 5 P.M., bivouacked when it became dark, turned out at midnight, and reached within a short distance of Beejapoor on the Choupet river, a little before daybreak to-day.

3. The village of Beejapoor lay between us and the enemy, who were encamped on the bank of the river. Day broke, and I sent the hussars and irreg. cav. round the village, by the right, to attack the enemy on their left flank, and took the inf. through the village straight at them. They were posted in great numbers on high ground with a smaller portion lower down. There were about seven or eight hundred inf. and 150 cav. Their appearance was certainly very imposing for a few minutes, but it was only for a few minutes. Our inf. rushed forward, and shot down and drove before them those who were on the lower ground, while our cav. charged across the higher ground, using their sabres most effectively, as shown on the thirty-seven bodies which have since been counted on that spot.

4. The action commenced at a quarter-past 5 A.M., and by seven o'clock, we were masters of the field. The enemy were shot and bayoneted along both banks of the river, and while crossing the river, and in the thickly-wooded ravines in its neighbourhood; the cav. got among them wherever the ground admitted of their acting. The slaughter was immense; I am assured by every one who has examined the scene of conflict, that I am within the mark in saying, that at least 450 mutineers were destroyed. They belonged to the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th regts. of the Gwalior contgt., the Allajah Bahadur regt. (Scindiah's), 1st regt. of the Kotah contgt., 40th, 50th, and 52nd B.N.I. Of the wounded, I can express no opinion. The enemy attempted to fly in various directions; those small bodies that could not be overtaken by our fatigued soldiers and Sepoys, were fired into, and I feel certain, that the total killed and wounded, greatly exceed the number of our men (571) brought into action. Of Maun Sing, I have lost all clue in the last day or two. I do not believe he was present in the fight.

6. I beg to be permitted to bring to the notice of brig. gen. Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., comdg. the Gwalior div., the splendid behaviour of every individual under my command. With one halt only, this column has, since the 27th ult., made long and harassing marches, averaging sixteen miles daily, and that in the rainy weather, across ploughed and muddy fields of black soil, and dense forests, where frequently there was no track whatever, through rivers whose rough and stony beds and banks severely shook, and otherwise injured the gun carriages, and over rocky mountain passes. Great labour has been gone through, great fatigue has been endured, most satisfactory has been the result as experienced this morning.

7. Most of the country we have traversed was at one time under Maun Sing's charge, and many villages belong to him; I have therefore had peculiar difficulty in obtaining information regarding him. Frequently our march has been delayed for want of a clue to his movements, so that the turning out of the column to proceed in pursuit of him has generally been at uncertain hours. From the day we left Powree, I have been under the deepest obligations to Capt. Bolton, assist. qr. mr. gen. Rajpootana div. The duty of picking up intelligence, I entirely committed to him, and most ably has he performed it. Frequently during the night, when we were only too happy to be allowed to take some rest after the day's fatigues, has Capt. Bolton been again and again disturbed, either to listen to the reports brought in, or to send out scouts.

8. The commissariat arrangements have been carefully attended to by Lieut. Williams, sub-assist. commissary gen. Rajpootana div. Few who are not behind the scenes can conceive what the difficulties of a commissariat officer's duties are in such a country as we are acting in, more especially while long marches are being daily made, thus affording very little time for procuring supplies from the neighbourhood.

9. I have the honour to submit, for the favourable consideration of the Brig. gen., in addition to the two officers mentioned above, the names of the following officers who commanded detachments this day in the battle of Bejapoor. Capt. Poore, 8th Hussars; Capt. Foster, 95th regt.; Capt. Rice, 25th regt. By. N.I., who also had with him the detach. of the 86th regt., which had no officer; Lieut. Stewart, (13th regt. L.I.) Meade's horse; Lieut. Roome, 10th regt. By. N.I.

10. In conclusion, I most strongly recommend to the consideration of the Brig. gen. commg., havildar Ram Lal, 1st coy. 10th regt., and havildar Dowlut Sing, gren. comp. 25th regt. The services of these two men have been invaluable. They have acted as spies, and risked their lives in procuring information, in a country where a Maun Sing's influence is paramount, and where the villages were deserted as we approached them. It is difficult to say, how we could have proceeded without the aid of these two havildars.

G. H. ROBERTSON, Lieut. Col., Comdg.
Pursuing Column, Gwalior div.

Operations at Selimpore.

From the Adj. gen. of the Army to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Depart. with the Gov. gen.

Sir.—I have the honour, by direction of the C. in C., to forward, for the information of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen., a letter in original from Brig. J. Chute, comdg. at Lucknow, No. 313, of the 26th ult., giving cover to reports from Lieut. col. Pratt and Maj. Bulwer, of H.M.'s 23rd fus., detached with a force from Lucknow, to operate against the rebels collected at and about Selimpore, in considerable numbers; and I am to beg you will be good enough to express to his Lordship the high opinion entertained by H.E. of the brilliant manner in which these operations were conducted, more particularly that at Selimpore, by Maj. Bulwer.

2. I am further desired to draw the attention of Lord Canning to the gallantry displayed by Lieut. C. F. Chamberlain, of the Oude Police.

W. MATHEW, Lieut. col.,
Adj. gen. of the Army.

Hd. qrs., Allahabad, Oct. 5. 1858.

No. 318.

To the Chief of the Staff, Army Hd. qrs., Allahabad.
Lucknow, Sept. 26, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the accompanying despatch from Maj. Bulwer, of the 23rd fus., in comdg. of the force directed by me to operate against the rebels at Selimpore, in compliance with the telegrams received from you, and in answer to my application to this effect.

I am happy to say that the expedition has been most successful, and been the cause of establishing confidence and tranquillity to a considerable extent along the right bank of the Goomtee.

Every credit is due to Maj. Bulwer, for the zeal and ability which he has evinced in the performance of this most important duty; and I trust you will bring his name to the favourable consideration of H.E. the C. in C.; as also the names of those officers mentioned in the despatch who rendered such able assistance, particularly Lieut. Chamberlain, of the Oude police, who seems to have shown great dash and judgment.

I further beg to forward a despatch, received from Lieut. col. Pratt, 23rd fus., comdg. a portion of the troops from Nawabgunge Barabunker, detailing his movements on the left side of the Goomtee River, in co-operation with the force despatched from Lucknow.

J. CHUTE, Brig.
Comdg. at Lucknow.

P.S. I have since dispatched a strong party of sappers, to destroy the fort mentioned by Maj. Bulwer.

To the Offg. Depy. Assist. Adj. Gen., Lucknow.
Camp Goomsingunge, Sept. 25, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the brigdr. comdg. at Lucknow, that, in pursuance to his orders, I proceeded on the night of the 22nd inst., with the force named in the margin,* in the direction of Selimpore. It had been ordered that the whole force should be formed at the Dikusha, at 9.30 p.m., but, owing to some mistake, the N.I. did not arrive as soon as expected. I was delayed, therefore, a little at starting, but moved off at about 10.30 p.m.; the road some three or four miles from the Dikusha is excessively bad, and the mortars delayed the column.

* Infantry.—180 men 23rd B. W. Fus.; 120 men 88th regt.; 400 Native Police.
Cavalry.—800 Sowars.
Guns.—2 9-pounders roy. art.; 2 5½ in. mortars, roy. art.

I received information from Mr. Martin, the civil officer who accompanied me on the road, that Moosahib Ali, with 2,000 or 3,000 men, four guns, and 200 sowars, occupied Selimpore, and was in direct communication with a large force of double that number on the opposite side of the Goomtee. My intention was to arrive at Selimpore about daybreak, in order to co-operate with the column from Nawabgunge, which was to attack the rebels at Chirria Bagh at the same hour. I found myself, however, owing to delays, at that time at Moosheegunge, a village about two miles from Selimpore, where I heard the firing of the column on the opposite side of the river.

I immediately pushed on with all the available cav. under Lieut. C. F. Chamberlain. 26th B.N.I., and directed him to surround the place; this he accomplished effectively and most rapidly, and by the time the remainder of the force had come up, the whole entrenched position was watched. Having taken a reconnaissance with Mr. Martin, who was accompanied by the zemindars of the place, I found, from his information of the locality, that Selimpore was a strong entrenched position, with the river running on the north, and was surrounded with an outer and inner ditch and rampart, and that the only gate was on the south side. My plan of attack was, therefore, to open with the guns upon the south and west of the place, and detach cavalry to the two flanks for the purpose of cutting them off in case of a retreat. I accordingly ordered the two guns under Lieut. Cuthbert, and the two mortars under Lieut. Maitland to open fire, covered by a co. of the 23rd, under Capt. Monsell, and a co. of the 88th, under Capt. Radcliffe; and at the same time Lieut. Chamberlain drew the main body of his cav. to the right flank, leaving a detach. to guard the left. A large body of the enemy, both inf. and cav. were seen flocking out towards the east side of right flank. I accordingly withdrew the two guns under Lieut. Cuthbert to that point, ordering a co. of inf. to follow in support. In the meantime Lieut. C. F. Chamberlain, by a charge of cav., in which he cut up some of the enemy, caused them to retreat back into the town, and the guns coming up, opened on their retreat, Lieut. Chamberlain advancing his cav., dismounted, and following them up. I directed the inf. and skirmishers on the left, now to advance. They crossed the ditch with great gallantry, and got into the entrenchment, meeting the enemy, and causing great slaughter, near the gateway, and in the inner ditch. They were now in full retreat, endeavouring to cross the river. The guns were brought down to bear on them in the boats; the cavalry advancing down to the bank, charged them most gallantly under Lieut. Hill, cutting up a considerable number; some escaped, but most were killed or drowned. The boats were afterwards destroyed by Mr. Martin.

I cannot speak too highly of the behaviour of all the troops on this occasion after a march of 20 miles, with the sun getting very hot, and little or no shade to be found; it is difficult to describe the fatigue and labour they underwent, but, notwithstanding all the difficulties, they acted with the greatest vigour, and gallantry, and took a very strong position occupied by a force infinitely numerically stronger than themselves. The loss of the enemy on this occasion must have been very great; for, besides the slaughter in different parts, there was one spot at the entrance of the fort, where I saw, myself, between 250 and 300 bodies lying together; I should compute the loss at 700 men killed. Amongst the slaughter, it is credibly ascertained, that Koshal, the noted freebooter, in this part of the country, was killed; it is also reported, that Moosahib Ali has fallen; but as this does not seem certain, I have taken measures to ascertain the truth of it.

The loss on our side was two Europeans killed, one officer Lieut. Moore, 88th regt., and 7 men wounded; in the native force 5 men killed, and 19 wounded, and 27 casualties among the horses.

There were 4 guns captured, 5 zumburks, or camel guns, with their camels, and two elephants, besides 80 prisoners given over to Mr. Martin. I occupied the town during the night with European and native infantry. I had no means of destroying the fort; I therefore left it as it was, and returned on the morning of the 24th to Goomsingunge.

On my return, I sent patrols of cav. to the right and left flanks; the fort on the right, on the banks of the river, the residence of Moosahib Ali, was found evacuated, 250 of the enemy having left it during the night. After leaving our guns at Selimpore, I occupied this fort temporarily with the police; the fort on the left was also evacuated. The country is quieted all round, terror having been struck in the district by the great and signal blow inflicted in Selimpore. Confidence has been re-established at Goomsingunge, where the natives are flocking back to the bazaar, rejoicing at the death of Koshal and at our occupation of the place.

I have reason to believe that the effect of the movement altogether has been most beneficial to our power.

It is now my pleasing duty to bring to the notice of the brigdr. comdg. the names of those who were engaged, and distinguished themselves. Where all behaved so well, it is difficult to fix upon any particular individual; but I must be allowed to mention the name of Lieut. Chamberlain, who commanded the police force, and whose activity, vigour, and thorough knowledge of the country and its inhabitants, combined with his great soldier-like qualities, rendered me the most valuable service; of his gallantry and dash, it is almost useless my speaking. It must be well known. On this occasion it was most conspicuous. I will leave it to him to bring to the public notice the names of his officers, who were all indefatigable. I have previously noticed the gallant charge made by Lieut. Hill, on the bank of the river; I also wish to bring forward the names of Capt. Radcliffe, who commanded the 88th, and led the assault most gallantly on the fort; of Captain Heigham, who commanded the two cos. of the 23rd R.W. fus.; of Lieut. Cuthbert, who commanded the two field guns; and Lieut. Maitland, the two mortars; they all afforded me the greatest assistance. Ensign Wiles, 23rd fus., my orderly officer, was most zealous, active, and useful to me. I must also mention the name of Assist. surg. Morris, 23rd fus., and Assist. surg. Knipe, 88th regt.; who performed their duties most zealously, having charge of the whole force, European and Native, as there were many men knocked up by the heat and fatigue, besides the wounded, these duties were most laborious. Mr. Martin, the civil officer who accompanied me, was of the greatest assistance. He was most willing and obliging, in giving his services wherever I required them.

E. G. BULWER, maj.,
23rd B.W. fus., comdg. force at Goomsingunge.

From Col. Pratt, comdg. troops, Nawabgunge.

Camp Nawabgunge, Sept. 24, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to state, that agreeable to instructions received from you, I proceeded from this camp in the direction of Chirria Bagh with the force named below,* at half-past 12 a.m., 23rd inst., to act in concert with a force from Lucknow against a considerable number of rebels in that vicinity, stated to be about 2,000 in number, at each side of the river Goomtee. At 6.30 a.m. we arrived within a mile of the enemy's camp, where I was informed he was drawn up to receive us. I formed contiguous columns at deploying distance, with guns between each, and cav. on the flanks, and so advanced through corn-fields for about half a mile, when we came in sight of the enemy on the borders of an extensive tope of trees. We could see their cav. on our left, and a large number of inf. on our front and right; I ordered up the guns, and moved on the inf. in line to their support. The guns opened on the enemy's inf. and cav., at about five hundred yards, with good effect, and soon caused them to retire. One gun and some musketry was fired by the enemy in reply, but without injury to our troops. I followed up the enemy as quickly as possible, and sending on the guns as far as prudence would permit, continued an effective fire until he was driven into very broken ground full of nullahs, close to the river, and was dispersed in all directions.

The cav. had but little opportunity of acting with effect, the ground being so broken, but succeeded in cutting up about thirty or forty of the enemy. By this time it was about 8 a.m., and the sun became extremely hot, men began to fall out from fatigue, and two or three of the 88th and 90th suffered from coup-de-soleil. I therefore thought it prudent to halt force, in the last tope of trees I met nearest the river, as both men and horses were completely done up; I did so, and let the men have their breakfasts. In the mean time, I could hear the guns from the Lucknow force, and saw, by the smoke of the guns, that they had been brought close to the town of Selimpore, about a mile and a half from where we were, and at the opposite side of the river. About 11 A.M., I took two guns Bengal art., detachment 90th regt. and cav., and proceeded to the river's brink, burnt a large boat in which some of the enemy had got to the other side, and having ascertained that none of the enemy remained on our side of the river, and the day becoming excessively hot, we returned to the tope, where the men had their dinners, and having communicated with the officer in command on the other side of the river, and being informed by him that he required no assistance, or combined movement from us, commenced our march homewards at 7 P.M., and arrived at Nawabgunge at 3 A.M. this morning, having burnt the enemy's huts as we passed through his encampment.

I cannot speak too highly in praise of the patient suffering, with which two night marches, and the fatigues of a hot day, with scarce any rest, were borne by officers and men, or of the cheerful and ready manner in which all my orders were carried out. The distance marched within the above-mentioned period of twenty-seven hours, and proceeding to near Selimpore, operations against the enemy there, and return to camp, could not have been under thirty-four miles.

My best thanks are due to the undermentioned officers for their ready support and attention to my instructions, during the operations detailed above. Major Bourke, 88th regt.; Major Finling, 99th regt.; Maj. Mackinnon, Bengal horse art.; Capt. Powell, 2nd drag. gds.; Capt. Norton, 23rd R. W. fus.; Lieut. Pickering, roy. art.; Capt. Ross, comsgr.; and Lieut. and Adj. Gregorie, 23rd R. W. fus., who acted as my staff officer during the above proceedings.

Captain Ashburner's Operations.

No. 447 of 1858.—The Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following Despatch, from Brigdr. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., forwarding a report from Capt. Ashburner, comdg. field detach., detailing the operations of a force under his command, against certain rebel Thakoors.

His Lordship entirely concurs with the Rt. Hon. the C. in C., in the commendation bestowed on Capt. Ashburner, for the highly satisfactory and creditable manner in which these operations were carried on by him, with the small force under his command.

with the Gov. gen.

No. 204 of 1858.

From BRIGDR. GEN. SIR R. NAPIER, B.K.C., comdg. Gwalior div., to the Chief of the Staff, Hd. Qrs., Allahabad, Camp Sepree.

Dated 11th Sept. 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the accompanying report, dated Camp Mow, 1st Sept., and 4th Sept., respectively, forwarded by Capt. W. Ashburner, comdg. field detach., to Lieut. col. Liddell, comdg. the 2nd brig., Gwalior div., detailing the operations of a force under the command of Capt. W. Ashburner, operating against the rebel Thakoors, Burjoor Sing Bundelah, Jowahir Sing, Davie Sing, Keneawalas, and Thakoor Maidnee Mull; and considering the small force at the disposal of Capt. Ashburner, the result of his operations I consider to be highly satisfactory and creditable to that officer.

R. NAPIER, Brigdr. gen.,
Commdg. Gwalior div.

From Capt. W. Ashburner, comdg. field detach., to Lieut. col. Liddell, comdg. the 2nd brig.
Camp Mow, 1st Sept. 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, that on the morning of the 2nd inst., having received intimation of two hundred rebels being collected in the town of "Soora," with the intention of plundering it, should the inhabitants not pay a ransom, I immediately ordered out a party, strength as per margin.*

The cav. under Lieut. Dick, I sent on in advance with orders to surround the town, my spies having informed me that it was situated in the plain, I myself remaining to bring up the infantry as speedily as possible.

On arriving near the village of Naroul, lying in our route, and about a mile-and-a-half beyond which "Soora" is situated, I sent on an officer with a slight escort, to see if Lieut. Dick had arrived and surrounded the town, as directed; and further ordering him to inform me if there were any rebels in the town, as the infantry were somewhat fatigued with the march, the roads being heavy, and in some places under water. I thought the news of the rebels being near would inspire them.

This party, having been fired on by some rebels in Naroul, was obliged to retire, and await my arrival with the infantry, when throwing out skirmishers, I advanced on the town, the rebels retiring through the ravines in rear, and to the left of the town, which were of great size and depth; through these we followed them, and coming within good range at a nullah, which operated as a slight obstacle to their retreat, being much swollen, the inf. succeeded in disposing of a few of the rebels; crossing the stream, which was running rapidly at the time, we continued to drive the rebels through the ravines until we arrived at "Soora," at which point they re-crossed the stream, and made towards "Mow Mohini."

The rebels here had evacuated the town previous to my arrival, and probably formed some of the party whom we had driven across the river at this point.

On arriving at "Soora," I entered it, and found it deserted by the inhabitants, the greater portion of whom, as well as the leading men, are, I understand, in league with the rebels. The cav. rejoined me after we entered "Soora," having watched the further side of the town, the only one not intersected by the ravines in which horsemen could not possibly act.

As it rained heavily on our setting out on the expedition, and also at intervals during the day, the troops were all thoroughly wetted; and I therefore thought it advisable to return to camp that night, which I did, arriving about 7 o'clock P.M.

W. ASHBURNER, Captain,
Comdg. field detach.

From Capt. W. Ashburner, comdg. field detach., to Brig. Liddell, comdg. 2nd brig. C.I.F.F.
Camp Mow, on the Pohooj River,
Sept. 4, 1858.

Sir,—I do myself the honour to report, that I this morning marched from Duboh, strength as per margin,* with the intention of attacking the force of rebels who have for some time past been assembled in force of from 2,000 to 4,000, at the villages of Mow and Mohoni, situated on either bank of the river Pohooj, under the following leaders:—

Thakoor Burjoor Sing Bundelah, Thakoors Jewahir Sing and Davie Sing Keneawalas, and Takoor Maidnee Mull.

Continuous and heavy rain since the 31st ult. prevented my attacking them on the 1st inst., in this position, which they had selected on account of its great natural strength, and being intersected by deep ravines.

On arriving at Mohoni, we found the enemy in possession of the nullahs, from which they opened fire at our advanced guard. We threw out skirmishers, with the usual reports, and, having found a good position for the guns, opened upon the enemy with shrapnel, which soon drove them from their position, and allowed of our advance close up to the town of Mohoni, into which, as my force of infantry is but small and inadequate to the usual loss incurred in street fighting, I directed two or three shells to be thrown, which was done, and had the effect of clearing it thoroughly. We then advanced to the opposite side of the town, facing the fort of Mow, where the enemy were observed to be assembled, and had brought a gun to bear upon our approach by the road, and which they opened upon our skirmishers and advance; this gun was soon silenced by ours, and seeing that the enemy had withdrawn it, and fearing it might be carried away, I ordered an advance of the whole line, at the same time directing a party of the 3rd Lt. cav., as per margin† to mount.

These men, up to this time, had been dismounted as a support to our guns, to enable me to bring all my infantry into play.

No Eur. cav. officer being at that moment available, I requested Mr. Vet. surg. Lamb to accompany and lead it in pursuit of the guns, which he most willingly undertook to do; but Lieut. and Adj. Moore coming up shortly afterwards, I dispatched him also with them.

* 3rd Lt. Cav.—8 Eur. officers, 7 Nat. officers, and 125 non-commissioned r. and f.

R.A.—1 Eur. officer and 10 non-commissioned r. and f.

This party soon overtook the enemy, captured their two guns, which were at once turned on their former owners, and cut up about thirty of them; Mr. Lamb being slightly wounded in the pursuit.

Owing to the difficult nature of the ground, which gave secure cover to the enemy, their loss in killed and wounded was not so severe as I could have wished, but I estimate it in all at from 80 to 100; their rout and dispersal was, however, complete, and the only two guns which they had are now in our possession, with all their ammunition, &c.

I beg to bring prominently to your notice the names of Mr. Vet. surg. Lamb, Lieut. and Adj. Moore, and Subadar Soojat Khan, 3rd L.C., for their gallantry in the capture of the enemy's guns in most difficult ground, and trust that Government may deem their services worthy of recognition.

I must not omit to bring to your notice the zeal and energy of Serj. Murphy, of the Bhopal contingent art., who worked his guns most successfully, until knocked down by a sun stroke.

I am happy to say that we had no casualties from the enemy's fire; few of the Europeans were knocked down by the sun, but are now doing well.

Operations around Goruckpore.

To Lieut.-Col. Mayhew, Adj.-Gen. of the Army, H.-Q., Allahabad, Camp Bustee, District of Goruckpore.

Dated 14th Sept. 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for the information of H.E. the C.-in-C., copy of a report from Maj. Cox, 13th L.L., reporting a successful attack made by the detach. under his command, on the rebel force of Mahomed Hooosen, on the 1st Sept., at Debreheah, about 12 miles north of Hurryah bridge.

2. While the detachment was out, I had sent to reinforce my two out-posts, when attacked on the 29th Aug., I considered it advisable to make a return attack on the rebels, as tending to prevent the two out-posts to the westward, being again soon molested. Maj. Cox marched from Hurryah bridge, early on the morning of the 1st Sept., for Debreheah, where he met the rebel force, about 50 sowars, 1,000 infantry and 8 guns; and immediately boldly and ably attacked them, defeating and pursuing the enemy a considerable distance. The enemy's loss reported to be 90 killed and wounded, some sowars supposed to be of the 12th irregular cavalry, and most of them by their appointments, old Sepoys of the 1st, 10th, and 38th regts. N.I. The late Nazim Mahomed Hooosen, is reported to be wounded.

3. The troops are reported to have gone through much fatigue under heavy rain, and over bad swampy roads and country, with great cheerfulness and willing endurance, experiencing, I am happy to say, few or no casualties and without suffering in health; and I beg to recommend Maj. Cox, the officers and men of all arms, to the most favourable notice of H.E. Sir Colin Campbell.

4. The deputy magistrate, Shekh Khyroodeen, accompanied Maj. Cox, was present in the field, rendering much useful service. I had ordered him to collect a number of bildars to proceed with the detachment to assist the troops and guns, and to destroy Debreheah; and during the day, that place and a large serai were burnt, and completely destroyed; the detachment returning to Hurryah the next morning, 2nd Sept.

5. An attack on Bungaon, six miles farther north-west, was also contemplated, but I left it to Maj. Cox, to use his own judgment in doing so according to circumstances, as Mahomed Hooosen immediately removed what property he had into the forest and jungle close by, and all able to take refuge there. There was little chance of successful results attending the movement, and the troops would have had much exposure and fatigue; I therefore consider Maj. Cox was quite right and prudent in not moving on.

6. I had meditated a return attack on the Rajah of Gonda, and rebels at Raneepore and Lumtee, beyond Belwa, and to have joined Maj. Cox with more troops on his return to Hurryah; but I heard the Rajah was alarmed, and preparing to retreat into Oudh; the distance was great, I could not follow them, and I could not remain there; and my attention was called to the rebels collecting in the north; and I very soon received urgent reports from Mr. Wingfield, the Commr. at Gorruckpore, and from Lieut. Pullan at Bansee, with 250 Sikh Mily. Pol. Batt., and 200 of the Rajah's Nujeebs, that he, the Rajah, and Mr. Wilson, Asst. Magistrate, were nearly surrounded and besieged. The rebels had attacked them on the 3rd Sept., on both sides the river Raptee, plundered the town and burnt the treasury, but were repulsed with the loss of some fifty killed.

7. The arrival of the detachment pushed on from this, with 100 men of the 27th Madras N.I., called in from out-post duty. The safety of all, and Relief of Bansee on the 8th Sept., I have already reported by service message. The rebels made another attack on the night of the 6th Sept., when 60 of the Rajah's Nujeebs deserted to the enemy; I hear it was planned by the rebels to have attacked Bansee, and by two out-posts to the westward on the same day.

H. ROWCROFT, Brigrd.,
Comdg. Gorruckpore District.

THE BRIG. MAJ. Bustee,
Camp Debreheah, 1st Sept., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honor to report, for the information of Brigrd. Rowcroft, comdg. Gorruckpore district, that the rebels who attacked Hurryah on the 29th ult., having retreated towards this place; on the arrival of the reinforcements sent out under my command, I marched here this morning with a column as detailed below:—

Ben. Yeo. Cav.—4 officers and 45 men under lieut. De Hoxar.

6th Madras L.C.—1 Eu. officer, 1 nat. officer, and 46 men under Capt. Vine.

Nav. Brig.—2 officers and 20 men, 2 12-pr. Howitzers mountain train, under Commander Turnour, R.N.

13th L.I.—4 officers and 175 men under Captain Rowley.

27th Madras, N.I.—1 Eu. officer, 1 nat. officer, and 41 men under Capt. Garrard.

Sikh Levy.—1 nat. off. and 47 men.

Total:—12 Eu. officers, 3 nat. officers, and 374 men.

2. On our approach to Debreheah, the enemy's Inf. at once retired, covered by their Cav., which consisted of about 50 well-mounted men. I pushed on in pursuit for 8 miles, during which 25 of them were cut up by our Cav., and as, by this time, both men and horses were much exhausted, from marching 16 miles over very bad roads, and across a country in many places under water; as soon as the enemy were quite clear from our front, I took up a position for my camp about a mile in advance of Debreheah.

3. After a few hours, however, the rebels returned in considerably increased numbers, being then about 1,000 Inf. with three guns; they extended for nearly two miles in our front, and threatened our flanks; at the same time, a party of several hundreds took up a position behind some large embankments on our right, from which they kept up a heavy fire from our advanced pickets.

4. As their numbers here continued to increase, I took down a Co. of the 13th L.I., under Capt. Rowley, and a mountain train howtzer under Capt. Turnour, R.N., about 10 A.M., and joined them to a party of N.I., under Capt. Garrard, and 30 of the B.Y. Cav., under Lieut. De Hoxar; we then charged them with the bayonet, drove them from their position, and again pursued them for a considerable distance, after which they gradually retired from along our whole front; I then returned to camp with the party.

5. The Inf. opposed to us seemed to be all rebel sepoys, and their whole force was of a superior description to any I have yet met in the district; they used Minie ammunition, and some of them greased cartridges.

6. The enemy's loss during the last day, is reported to be 90 killed and wounded. The troops all behaved very gallantly, and their cheerful and willing endurance, having been marching and fighting for 14 hours over a wet country, and wet through from rain, is most praiseworthy.

J. W. Cox, Maj., 13th L.I.
Comdg. Field Detach.

CASTE, in the sense in which it exists in the present day, was altogether unknown to the ancient Indians, though doubtless, like other consociated peoples, they had varieties of rank, and order, and occupation in their community. The discovery of this fact is the most important connected with our Vedic research. It may aid some timid souls in dealing with caste, that heavy, and galling, and degrading yoke, which cannot too soon be voluntarily wrenched by the natives from their own necks.—Dr. Wilson's India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, Dec. 20, 1858.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN LOWER SCINDE.

It is so much the fashion to exaggerate the natural resources of India, that it is quite refreshing to come across a genuine and honest statement of facts. Every day we observe in the papers flourishing and inflated accounts of the capabilities of Lower Scinde for the purposes of growing cotton; and thus many persons are led into a belief that nothing is wanted but British capital and enterprise, and the protection of an enlightened Government. But how stands the real state of the case? Mr. P. M. Dalzell, the Deputy-Collector of Customs at Kurrachee, evidently a highly intelligent officer and somewhat biased in favour of cotton cultivation, has, in the course of the present year, submitted to the Commissioner of Scinde a very clear and able report on the results of the experiments that have been made from 1853 to 1857. The experience thus acquired is by no means encouraging. The New Orleans and Egyptian seed have failed through three causes, namely, "rude and careless cultivation, excessive moisture, and the boll-worm." The yield per acre, moreover, is not equal to the expenditure; and thus the cultivation of the cotton-plant entails a positive loss upon the holder of the land. In the face of statistics, it is vain for the Commissioner and Deputy Collector to record their conviction that "exotic cotton will, with attention, succeed in the central and lower districts of the province." No doubt with additional care the produce will be greater and more marketable than at present; but, nevertheless, it is indisputable that, as things now are, this particular species of agriculture is conducted at a loss. If English capitalists are willing to encounter a certain degree of risk, in their hopefulness of ultimate success, there is no reason why they should not seek the capricious smiles of Fortune in Scinde as well as elsewhere. But it is the duty of the journalist to brush away the unsubstantial visions conjured up by cupidity, and to place facts in their true and proper light. It is not impossible that cotton may hereafter be profitably cultivated in Lower Scinde; but thus far the experiment has failed, nor is it at all apparent why future speculators should prove more successful than their predecessors. In any case it is wrong to excite hopes that may never be realised, and to tempt sanguine and unwary men to essay adventures likely to terminate in their utter ruin.

TOO MUCH ZEAL.

A CONSIDERABLE sensation appears to have pervaded the members of the Bengal Civil Service in consequence of the official rebukes administered to two energetic magistrates for what is vaguely designated as excess of zeal. The vernacular equivalent for this diplomatic phrase appears to be loss of temper and self-control, and in both cases the consequences are much to be regretted. If the facts are truly stated, the offenders have been only too leniently punished, though possibly the example may suffice to render others more cautious as to their own conduct. One of these delinquents was Mr. M. Ricketts, acting at the time as Special Commissioner in Moradabad. Since the very commencement of the mutinies this gentleman has acted with great firmness, judgment, and energy, and on more than one occasion has entitled himself to the cordial approbation of his superiors. His vigour, however, seems at last to have degenerated into violence, and his zeal has hurried him on to acts of intemperate vehemence. According to the Delhi Gazette, a trooper in a regiment of native cavalry, who happened to be at Moradabad on leave at the outbreak of the Sepoy revolt, had been instructed to proceed to Bijnore and place himself at the disposal of the local magistrate. When the tide of affairs there turned against the British supremacy, this man abandoned the service of his former masters and, returning to Moradabad, enrolled himself under the banner of the Nawab of Rampore. Here again fortune, or his own deserts, brought him into jeopardy, and he was turned adrift for being absent without leave. It is very clear that he was a deserter from the British service, but beyond this it does not appear that anything was proved against him. However this may be, Mr. Ricketts took upon himself to pass a capital sentence, and the man was accordingly hanged. The same fate was reserved for another delinquent, a domestic servant, who was convicted of having purloined some of his master's property during the great cataclysm. In both instances the punishment was too severe, and, moreover, Mr. Ricketts exceeded his authority. If one version of the tale be true, his conduct was even far more culpable than it appears in our narrative. It is said, but the story seems incredible, that he caused a Mahomedan to be clothed in a pig's skin before undergoing the fatal sentence. Should this prove to be true—which we do not for a moment anticipate—dismissal from the service would be all too light a punishment. Mr. Ricketts is further charged with insubordination and want of respect towards his superior authorities; but as they are fully able and willing to assert their own dignity, we need not enter upon that branch of the subject.

The other civilian accused of violent and unmagisterial conduct is Mr. Willock, Assistant-Magistrate of Allahabad. This gentleman was proceeding to the station in charge of a fa-queer condemned to death. The scoundrel passed upon him a grievous insult by spitting in his face, whereupon Mr. Willock suddenly pulled out a pistol and shot him dead upon the spot. The provocation, no doubt, was atrocious, and in the eyes of Asiatics Mr. Willock would be held entirely guiltless. But it would be intolerable if such cases were to be passed over without comment, and British magistrates were permitted to assume to themselves impunity for homicide. The Government, therefore, did well to administer a sharp rebuke, and would have been fully justified in suspending him for a time from official employment. A magistrate who cannot govern his own temper is certainly not fit to sit in judgment upon his fellows.

ADMINISTRATION OF CIVIL JUSTICE IN THE PUNJAB, 1857.

It is gratifying to perceive, from the Judicial Commissioner's annual report on the administration of civil justice in the Punjab that, notwithstanding the political troubles of the past year, the business of the Courts suffered no serious interruption. This is the more surprising from the circumstance that the amount of litigation was immensely increased owing to the introduction of the new statute of limitation. Until the 1st of May, 1857, any claims short of twelve years' standing could be legally enforced, but on that day the new regulation, reducing the period for the adjustment of claims to six years, first came into operation. The immediate consequence was, that the number of original suits exceeded those of the preceding year by upwards of 20,000. The total number of suits on the file was 87,305, and of these no fewer than 84,105 were disposed of. The total number of suits actually adjudicated was 56,709, of which 12,748 were decided in favour of the defendants; and of 42,351 decrees given, only 16,302 were for the full amount claimed. A very large percentage of cases was struck off en default, as owing to the excitement of the mutinies, and the extensive enlistment of Punjabees, very many disputants had recourse to private arbitration, or voluntarily threw up the object of litigation. An immense proportion of suits was for debts on bonds, but the social questions referred to the courts were unusually few. On the latter point the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner was instructed to make the following remarks:—

"The decrease of cases relating to marriage, betrothal, and the like, is remarkable. Formerly these cases were numerous; of late years they have been decreasing annually, till they now form an inconsiderable portion of the total litigation. It would be well that you drew special attention to the causes of this. It may be that the people disapproving of the practice of our Courts in this class of cases, do not resort to them in such matters. Or it may be that better social customs, stricter adherence to engagements, are beginning to prevail."

On the subject of debt some excellent observations are also made:—

"The number of cases relating to debt is very great. In the Eastern districts this class of cases is said to be 'the great staple of our litigation.' Most of the cases are said to arise between village bankers and landholders. The Chief Commissioner certainly shares the general opinion that the courts do not sufficiently protect the ignorant agriculturist from the unscrupulous money-lender. It is probable that the growing evil may admit, to a considerable extent, of legal remedy. This matter has been engaging attention of late, and the Chief Commissioner will be prepared to consider measures which, without affecting that credit which has sprung up under our rule, and by which the agriculturists largely benefit, may yet prevent a thriftless landholder from falling a prey to the village banker. In connection with this subject, the Chief Commissioner will also be prepared to consider measures for placing the sale of land by order of Court in satisfaction of debt under such restrictions as shall render this process comparatively rare, and only one of extreme resort."

The Deputy Commissioners and their Assistants decided 51,705 cases, relating to property valued at Rs. 64,50,846; the Tehseeldars adjudicating to an additional amount of Rs. 9,92,993. The percentage of costs upon the aggregate is very moderate, though it is stated to be too high upon small suits, and nominal upon large ones. Measures are to be taken to insure a better distribution for the future. On the whole the judicial officers certainly appear to have deserved great credit for the judgment and industry with which they despatched an immense amount of business, under most trying and adverse circumstances.

MRS. MURRAY'S NARRATIVE.

Some three months ago, there appeared in the columns of the Times newspaper, a tale of horrors, supposed to have been dictated by a Mrs. Murray, the widow of the Drum-Major of a native regiment, who was murdered at the boats with others of the Cawnpore garrison. The narrative was so evidently exaggerated, that it found no place in the Indian Mail. That such a person as Mrs. Murray existed, and that her sufferings had been cruel and unmerited, we did not for a moment doubt. But her story, as it was laid before the public, was so highly seasoned to suit the vulgar palate that loves to "sup on horrors," that it became impossible to distinguish the slender thread of truth from the tinsel through which it was so elaborately drawn. Our suspicions prove to have been well founded. The long tale of woe was founded on the following statements taken down from Mrs. Murray's own lips, and attested by her signature in the presence of two unimpeachable witnesses, whose veracity is further confirmed by the testimony of Mr. Longueville Clarke, the eminent Calcutta barrister. After this specimen of "Oriental tinting," the British public will act wisely in not according too ready a credence to every statement of "facts" that comes from the imaginative East.

Statement made at Calcutta on the 5th July, 1858, by Mrs. Ann Murray late of Cawnpore, before Henry de Mornay (Secretary of the Assam Company), and Thomas Emerson Carter, Secretary of the Indian Reform League.

"My name is Ann Murray, I was at Cawnpore when the mutiny broke out, I went into the entrenchments with my husband, my brother, two sons and their wives, and two grandsons. My husband was the drum major of the 56th Native Infantry. I remained in the entrenchment until they all went to the boats. All my family went down to the boat with me. My husband was shot and afterwards the other members of my family were killed. I saw them all fall. I was standing in the water when I was attacked by a Sowar, who cut me about in several places, until I fell senseless on the edge of the water as if dead. That evening a native woman came down to the river to fetch water, she saw me lying there, and put some water into my mouth which revived me. I fell at her feet and begged her to save me, she dragged me along the ground as I could not walk, and put me into a small ruined house close by where she lived. I remained there in hiding until General Havelock's force arrived. The woman brought me food every day, and was very kind to me. I do not know her name. When Havelock's force arrived I remained two days, and was then sent to Allahabad to the European Hospital there, where my wounds were cured. I have six sabre wounds. One of my daughters-in-law was shot in the breast, and the other cut across the stomach. I saw a boy, a beautiful fair European boy about eight or nine years old, go up to the Nana who was on the banks of the river at the time the boats were attacked, he held up his hands imploringly, but the Nana ordered him to be killed, and he was cut down at once by the Nana's side. I saw all this just before I was myself attacked. One of my daughters-in-law Mrs. William Murray was seven months gone in the family way, she was with us at the time we were attacked and received a cut from a sabre in the belly, so that the child fell out on the ground, I saw that myself, I was close to her."

"The above statement was made before us on the 5th of July, 1858, and signed by Mrs. Murray, in our presence. The following is a description of her wounds which we have seen. No. 1, Right hand side of the head, an arched wound, extending over the temple from the point of the eyebrow backwards, and ending directly above the ear; the length of this wound is 2½ inches. 2 is a deep cut on the right shoulder, 2½ inches long. 3. A very deep slanting cut across the back, 6½ inches long, and near one inch in width. 4. A cut along the right thumb, 1½ inch long. 5. Right leg cut on the calf, 1½ inch long. 6. Left wrist much injured, said to have been done by a blow from the butt end of a musket.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE EAST INDIA DIRECTOR.—An election for three Directors of the East India Company took place at the India House on Saturday, the successful candidates being J. D. H. Elphinstone, Esq., General G. Moore, and Eric C. Smith.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—At a Court of Directors held on Wednesday, the 15th inst., Col. Sykes, M.P., was unanimously elected Chairman.

ACCIDENT TO THE "PERA."—The Pera, with the heavy portion of the China and Calcutta mails, having lost her screw just after leaving Gibraltar, her mails and passengers will be brought to Southampton by the Peninsular steamer Alhambra, and will therefore arrive about the 23rd inst., instead of on the 20th, when the Pera would have been due. As the Pera has a valuable cargo, including 4,500 bales of silk, the Ripon has been sent to tow her home.

VACANT WRITERSHIPS.—The Secretary of State for India has applied to the Civil Service Commissioners to prepare a scheme for the examination of candidates for Writerships in the home establishment of the Indian Government. There are at present eight vacancies, and the age for admission lies between sixteen and twenty-six. The salary for the first five years is £80 per annum, with an additional allowance of one shilling per sheet of 480 words, for all work in excess of five sheets per diem. From five to ten years' service the salary is £90; from ten to fifteen, £100; from fifteen to twenty, £120; from twenty to twenty-five, £150; and from twenty-five years upwards, £200; with an allowance of fifteen pence per sheet as in the first five years. The writers are chiefly employed in copying, but they are liable to be also employed in accounts and in other ordinary clerks' duties.

STATUE TO GENERAL NEILL.—The memorials of gallant soldiers who have fallen in the recent defence of our Indian empire are beginning to dot our public buildings or the birth-places of the illustrious dead. Havelock will occupy a position in Trafalgar-square, corresponding to the statue of Sir Charles Napier, and other heroes of the Indian battle-field are to have their niches elsewhere. Our present business is with the statue which is to be erected to the late General Neill in his native town of Ayr. A model of this statue, which is of colossal proportions, and is to be executed in bronze, is now in Mr. Noble's studio, Ayrshire, the native county of Scotland's greatest poet, claims local kindred also with one of the bravest of Scotland's sons; and the town of Ayr, which was Neill's birth-place, has instituted the public subscription for the funds with which to raise this statue. The figure is a fine composition, full of life and energy, and reproducing the well-known characteristics of Neill's nature—great mental and bodily activity and an indomitable will. A semi-military incident in Neill's Indian career is seized upon for illustration in the statue. General Neill found it necessary on one occasion, to order the arrest of the station-master at Calcutta, when that functionary refused to delay the departure of a train which Neill required for military purposes. This point furnishes scope for the skill of the sculptor in the production of a striking figure.—Standard.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—It will have been observed, that under the regulations which have been recently promulgated for the examination of candidates for the Civil Service of India, the maximum age, which, since the introduction of the competitive system, has been twenty-three, was reduced to twenty-two. Having regard, however, to the just claims of students who are now preparing for the expected examination in July next, many of whom this new rule, if immediately enforced, would have excluded from the right of competing, the Secretary of State for India in Council has determined to suspend its operation until the examination in 1860. In July next, therefore, the maximum age for candidates will be twenty-three; and after that occasion twenty-two.

CHINESE CATHOLIC PRIESTS.—Several young Chinese, who came to Europe some short time since with the Rev. Father Perny, apostolic pro-vicar of Canton, are at present at Nantes. Two of them, Barthélemy Lo and Jean Tang, are deacons, and will be ordained priests by Mgr. Jacquemet, Bishop of Nantes.

CULTIVATION OF FLAX IN INDIA.—The attention of firms engaged in the linen trade is being directed to the importance of promoting the cultivation of flax in India. The deficiency of the supply from present sources has been lately felt seriously, the quantity imported in the first ten months of the present year having been only 51,174 tons as compared with 79,746 tons in the corresponding months of last year. The crop in Ireland has fluctuated greatly during the last ten or twelve years. In 1846 the quantity produced was 28,000 tons, but in 1848 it fell off to 13,466 tons. In 1858 it increased to 43,874 tons, but in the present year it is little more than 21,000 tons. The foreign supply has also fluctuated. In 1835 the quantity of flax imported was 37,092 tons; in the year following 76,456 tons; in 1837 upwards of 50,000 tons; in 1838, 81,314 tons. Nine years afterwards, in 1847, the total imports were 52,604 tons; in 1850, 91,146 tons; in 1851, 59,709 tons; in 1857, upwards of 93,300 tons; while this year it is not expected to exceed 60,000 tons. The foreign countries from which the supply is principally derived are Russia (which has sent us in the last ten months 41,181 tons), Holland, and Belgium. These countries are themselves becoming large consumers of flax, and it is even thought that in a few years they will be able to work up the greater part of their own production. With regard to the cultivation of flax in India, an appeal has been made to the Government, but Lord Stanley declines to take any further steps beyond those which have been already adopted by the Punjab Government, who have of late years offered several prizes by way of encouragement to the natives to devote their attention to this branch of industry. It is stated that no part of India is so adapted for the culture of flax as the Punjab. The most convenient port of shipment for Europe would be Kurrachee, which is now the point of arrival for large numbers of troops and quantities of stores. At present there is no export trade from Kurrachee, and if vessels could leave the port freighted with flax instead of in ballast, of course additional employment would be given to the shipping trade with the East. The value of the trade resulting from the cultivation of the flax plant is shown by the following figures:—In 1857 rather more than £4,000,000 was paid for the 93,300 tons imported, and when there is added the amount paid for linseed oil and oil-seed cake, exclusive of that imported from the East Indies, the total is augmented to £7,000,000, which, it is urged, might have been as well expended upon Indian as upon Russian or Belgian produce. The formation of a Flax Supply Association is suggested, on the same plan as that already existing for increasing the supply of raw cotton.

SIAM.—Accounts have been received from Bangkok, the capital of Siam, to the 26th of October, which mention the arrival there of M. de Castelnau, the French consul, and his reception by the King. The following is an account of the proceedings:—“Royal boats carrying the French flag were sent to the French vessel to bring the consul on shore, and palanquins were in attendance at the landing-place to convey him to the palace. The first enclosure was filled with servants and soldiers; in the second was drawn up a battery of artillery; and in the third, adjoining the palace, the King's body-guard formed two lines, and when the consul and the other persons with him passed they presented arms. The grand reception-room, into which the consul, accompanied by the Bishop of Mallos, acting as interpreter, and the members of the mission, was introduced, presented a very striking appearance. There were in it about 400 mandarins clad in the richest dresses and all prostrate before the throne, on which the King was seated. The walls of the room were covered with ornaments of the most singular kind, made in gold and precious stones, and the nine parasols, each with seven branches, which constitute the great emblem of sovereignty at Siam, were ranged behind the throne. A cushion was placed for the French representative at a few feet from the throne, and in a line with the princes of the royal family, who were seated on the ground. Another cushion was placed for the bishop. The consul of France, in his address to the King, expressed the gratification he felt at being appointed to reside at the court of his Majesty by the Emperor Napoleon III., who was desirous of re-opening with the Kingdom of Siam those relations of amity which had first commenced under the reign of Louis XIV., but had been so long interrupted.

The King replied in a most gracious manner. He first alluded to the time when the relations between the two countries had commenced, but which had been broken off in consequence of revolutions and changes of dynasty both in France and Siam, and then expressed his great satisfaction at the Emperor Napoleon III. having sent an ambassador to conclude a treaty with him, one of the clauses of which was that France should always have an agent resident at his court. His Majesty assured the consul that every courtesy should be shown him, and that he had only to apply to the minister of Foreign Affairs to find all his wishes immediately attended to. He concluded by begging the indulgence of the consul at the outset, as the establishment of new regulations and the exact observance of treaties might at first meet with some difficulties, which time and experience would enable his ministers to surmount.” After the official reception the King invited the consul to a grand banquet, which was served in a hall having on one side a large aviary containing the most magnificent birds, and on the other a large courtyard in which were a number of elephants, some of them almost in a wild state. Military music played during the entertainment. When the consul left the palace the King gave orders that he should be conducted to the Grand Pagoda of the palace, which contains innumerable ornaments and gigantic idols in gold and glittering with precious stones.

BOOKS.

Indian Policy, 1858. London: Bell and Daldy.

The greatest kindness we could show to the anonymous writer of this abominable pamphlet would be to treat him and his execrable opinions with contemptuous silence. But it is also our duty to warn our readers against the infamous doctrines he advocates in the dark. He professes to adopt the “simple solution scheme,” or, in other words, he is willing to employ any means whatsoever to attain an end he thinks desirable. In like manner, burglary, forgery, or simple theft may be the “simple solution” of the question how a neighbour's property is to pass into one's own hands. His proposition is briefly this—that a Governor-General be appointed for life with despotic powers, enforced by an army of 150,000 European, and 60,000 local troops, and that every province and district of Hindostan be absorbed into the British empire. He confesses, indeed, that he has carefully avoided the introduction of “metaphysical disquisitions on the question of right,” but his confession stops short of the exact truth. He has not only avoided the discussion of what is right, but he has only propounded that which is wrong, unjust, disloyal, and in every way unworthy of a Christian Government.

A Year's Campaigning in India. By Captain J. G. Medley, B.E. London: W. Thacker and Co.

The future historian of the Indian Mutinies will have no reason to complain of the scantiness of his materials, nor need he be seriously perplexed as to their adjustment. It is strong evidence in favour of the veracity of the many different writers on the subject, that their narratives agree in all matters of moment, whether facts or opinions. One may be more graphic and minute than another; a second may be personal and desultory; a third may be more strictly historical, and embrace a wider scope both as to events and speculations. But they may be all harmonised with the greatest ease, and, indeed, are distinguished from one another rather by the variety than the difference of their details. The most immediately interesting are those which relate to personal experiences; and, among these, Captain Medley's account of a year's campaigning is entitled to rank with the foremost. Within the brief space of twelve months he witnessed as much hard fighting as would suffice for three times that period in ordinary warfare. In the beginning of March, 1857, he accompanied, in the capacity of field engineer, an expedition under Brigadier Chamberlain into the hill country beyond the Derajat, and returned to the Punjab about six weeks before the massacres at Meerut and Delhi. As soon as it was known that General Van Cortlandt was organising an irregular force for service in the Hansi and Hissar districts, Captain Medley applied for permission to join with the company of Punjab Sappers and Miners under his command. His application was, for the moment, only partially entertained. He was instructed to send his men, but to remain in person at his post on the frontier. Soon afterwards, however, he received the joyful summons to proceed to Delhi and take part in the reduction of the once imperial city. His notes on the progress of the siege operations are decidedly the most interesting portion of his narrative, and would be still more valuable had he not, through a misplaced feeling of delicacy, substituted merely the initial letter for the names of the officers who fall under his notice. While recording the splendid achievements of the British troops, Captain Medley does not fail to give due credit to the cool daring and fidelity of the native workmen and domestic servants. "It was wonderful," he says, "to see with what courage the men worked"—not the fighting-men, but the labourers employed in the construction of batteries. "With the passive courage so common to natives, as man after man was knocked over, they would stop a moment, weep a little over their fallen friend, pop his body in a row along with the rest, and then work on as before." The Bheesties, too, with their water-bags kept up with the European troops in the very thick of the conflict, and were oftentimes killed or wounded. Nor did the Khidmutgars ever hesitate, even at the peril of their lives, to bring the officers their dinners, "as regularly as clockwork," no matter how much exposed they might be to the fire of the enemy.

After the fall of Delhi, Captain Medley enjoyed a brief repose at Mussooree, while recovering from a gun-shot wound in the arm, received at the final assault, and then proceeded to Agra. Shortly afterwards he joined Colonel Seaton's column at Allyghur, and was present at all the engagements that illustrated the march of that brilliant commander. We next find him at Delhi, but his stay there was short, for his services were again required in the field with the splendid army under Sir Colin Campbell, then setting out for the final recovery of Lucknow from the rebel forces. The descriptions of these various operations are rendered still more lucid by the excellent plans with which the volume is enriched.

With regard to the causes of the mutiny, Captain Medley is convinced that the match which exploded the long-laid train was the greased cartridges, and nothing else. The mine, however, had been previously loaded, and needed but a spark to kindle it into terrible activity. Five chief causes, we are told, combined to produce this frightful state of things. These were—the withdrawal of all power from the hands of the commanding officers, the seniority system of promotion in the native ranks, the employment of so many European officers on civil and staff duties, the recruiting of the army almost entirely from one class of men, and the excessive disproportion of native to European troops. The revolt was at first confined exclusively to the military, but after a while desperate and adventurous men were naturally drawn into the vortex. "But that any such feeling was ever aroused as could be dignified with the name of a national movement is certainly untrue, with perhaps the single exception of the Province of Oude. The great bulk of the people were everywhere passive."

The Opium Trade; Appeal to the British Nation against it. By the Rev. William Tait. London: Wertheim and Macintosh.

We do not wish to speak disrespectfully of a clergyman, and shall therefore use the mildest terms to express our opinion of Mr. Tait's ridiculous letters on the subject of the opium trade to China. His statements are as exaggerated as his language is forced and unnatural. He piles up the agony to a dizzy height, but forgets that he is building on a basis no bigger than a pin's head. A large quantity of opium is undoubtedly consumed in China, and the drug when used to excess is undeniably a moral poison. But it does not thence follow that many persons do indulge in it to excess, or that the majority take more of it than many respectable people in England do of snuff. Besides, Mr. Tait's protest—notwithstanding the "addendum"—comes too late. The trade is now certainly legalised, and the only question at issue is, whether the duty shall be thirty or forty taels per chest. We suspect, therefore, that the rev. gentleman may be a better theologian than a politician. At all events, he has not made a brilliant figure on the present occasion. However, his pamphlet will not have been utterly useless if it has the effect of drawing the attention of other pamphleteers to the fact that it was printed at the United Kingdom Ragged School Industrial Institution, Victoria-street, Westminster. Indeed, we are disposed to pardon Mr. Tait all his well-intentioned absurdities for the sake of his advertisement of this admirable institution.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and Native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. high; 5 ft. 4 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. high; 2 ft. 9 in. wide. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 10s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocquer's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN & CO., in addition to their business as Publishers and Booksellers, beg to remind their Friends and Correspondents in India, that they continue to undertake AGENCY of every description, as well as the execution of Orders from Regimental Messes, Book Clubs, &c.

Messrs. ALLEN and Co., from their long experience in the East-India Trade, and knowledge of the requirements of residents in India, feel confidence in executing all commissions entrusted to them; and as their mode of business is to give personal attention to all orders, and to charge the same at the lowest remunerative prices, they must request to be favoured with a remittance (or reference for payment in London) from those parties who may desire to avail themselves of their services, and who have not, at present, accounts with the house.

Just published, in 8vo. cloth lettered, price 10s. 6d., THE INDUS and its PROVINCES; their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S., Chairman of the Scinde and Punjab Railways, and Indus Steam Flotilla; Author of "Indian Railways, as connected with the Power and Stability of the British Empire in the East," &c., &c., &c.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original idea, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Scinde and the Punjab, diatribe benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 12, 1858.

In 8vo. cloth, with Maps, price 10s. 6d., MEMOIR on the EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE to INDIA; with Official Correspondence and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S. "It is impossible to refer to the Surveys and Reports of General Chesney and his colleagues on the Euphrates, published twenty years ago, without astonishment, that even at that period the British Government and people failed to take immediate steps to avail themselves of its capabilities."—The Times.

"What a glorious thing it would have been," said a writer in the 'Lahore Chronicle' of August last, "had the Euphrates Valley Railway and the Scinde and Punjab Railway been accomplished facts at the time of the present insurrection."—The Indus and its Provinces—p. 14.

Just published, in 1 vol., post 8vo., price 8s. 6d., c'th, LETTERS written during the SIEGE of DELHI. By H. H. GREATHED, late of the Bengal Civil Service, Commissioner and Political Agent of Delhi.

"These Letters give a most vivid and natural picture of the occurrences connected with the siege. They will be read by a very large circle, and will be of immense service to those who may write the history of the great Indian rebellion."—Morning Post.

"In several respects these letters are to be reckoned among the best of the kind that have yet been published. The perception of the true state of affairs is always clear, the language is terse and simple, and the spirit of an Englishman volume should be read by all the countrymen of the brave soldiers by whom Delhi was taken."—Examiner.

"It is a good book; full of matter and incident, and of short and animated descriptions. This Journey from the Mississippi to the Pacific takes rank among the best translations in our language."—Literary Gazette.

"The two volumes are crowded with picturesque sketches; and the descriptions are made still more attractive by a large number of beautiful illustrations. Taken altogether, there are few more interesting books of travel than Mr. Mollhausen's Diary. The whole of his fresh and animated descriptions of all the curious mode of life of the native Indian tribes, evince such a deep sensibility and such a keen sense of beauty as seldom met with in books of this kind."—Statesman.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MR. O'MEARA, Surgeon-Dentist, late of Simla (Seven Years resident in India), begs to inform his Friends and former clients returning from India, that he can now be consulted professionally in London, at No. 18, Queen Anne-street, Cavendish-square.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH. New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC

PILLS. Price 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for, during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age.

These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Frost, 229, Strand, London," on the Government Stamp.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

Is a certain cure for scurvy, leprosy, and all diseases of the skin.—The heaviness, weariness, and dejection of spirits usually attendant on those who suffer from diseases of the skin, are speedily removed by the use of Holloway's Ointment and Pills. Their efficacy in correcting the bad habit of the body, and in curing complaints of the class above mentioned, stands unvalued; and in places abroad, where the malady is so prevalent, the cures are wonderful. The purifying properties of the Pills, and the peculiar effect the Ointment has on the skin, render them superior to any other remedy. In all cutaneous affections, these remedies stand unrivalled; and, as a cosmetic, this Ointment is in very general repute.

Messrs. MAPPIN's Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled Superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

TEETH

WITHOUT SPRINGS.

110, REGENT-STREET, and 33, LUDGATE-HILL, Are the Dental Establishments of

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804, and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope. The Patent White Enamel, which effectually restores decayed front teeth, can only be obtained as above.—OBSERVE THE NUMBERS.

PREPARED WHITE GUTTA PERCHA ENAMEL, the best Stopping for Decayed Teeth or Toothache, 1s. 6d. per box, obtainable through any Chemist in town or country, or direct Twenty Shillings.

"Messrs. G.'s improvements in Dentistry are really important, and will well repay a visit to their establishments."—Sunday Times, Sept. 6th, 1858.
